This course will examine queer literature from the Caribbean and its diasporas and consider what kind of queer theory we might need to understand queer lives, experiences and practices in the region. In our own global North context, the contemporary Caribbean is more often associated with rampant homophobia than queer culture; similarly, queerness and queer cultures are sometimes represented as overwhelmingly white. In this course, we will examine queer writing from the Caribbean alongside its cultural and political contexts – including the ways in which it may challenge both homophobia in the Caribbean and limited, stereotypical understandings of the Caribbean abroad, particularly in the USA and Europe – in addition to grappling with questions around how queer theory translates to and emerges from Caribbean and diasporic contexts.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Content note : Please note that some of our course texts contain descriptions of racialized and sexualized violence, including physical and emotional abuse, suicide, and murder. Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This is the second part of a two-course module which lays the groundwork for all further coursework in linguistics. In this course, students will learn about aspects of syntax, i.e. how phrases, clauses, and sentences are formed. They
- excerpt the relevant knowledge from course-specific online material and/or literature on the basis of guiding questions,
- test their understanding by applying their newly acquired knowledge to exercise questions,
- clarify questions in class, and
- complete assignments, which also include application tasks

in order to later be able to use these skills in the advanced linguistics courses in their BA and MA studies.
We strongly recommend attending this course in parallel with part I.

This course offers an introduction to the Old English language, spoken about 1000 years ago by the Anglo-Saxon inhabitants of Britain and forming the earliest stage of what is now Modern English. Special attention will be given to its grammatical and phonological features. Students will acquire a basic Old English vocabulary and learn techniques for translating simple texts. In addition, the course provides a first-hand didactic experience of learning a foreign language through a linguistically informed approach. By analysing the phonological, morphological, and syntactic structures of Old English, students will practise and extend their understanding of key linguistic concepts and phenomena relevant to the study and teaching of English.
Students will learn how to interpret historical data, compare language stages, and understand mechanisms of language change. The course lays the groundwork for advanced courses in:
• Historical linguistics
• Phonology
• Morphology

The course offers an introduction to the history of the English language from its origins to the present day. We will explore the linguistic roots of English, the major sound changes and the loss of inflectional morphology, as well as the considerable expansion of vocabulary that has shaped the development of the language. The course also examines the varieties of English spoken today and discusses both the similarities and differences between English and the other Germanic languages, with particular attention to the relationship between Modern English and German.
By examining the literary standard and situating present-day rules in their historical context, students will see how linguistic norms arose and evolved, which in turn dismantles myths about ”correctness”. In doing so, a range of idiosyncrasies of contemporary English will be uncovered and explained. Special attention will be given to the discrepancy between English spelling and pronunciation, which poses a particular challenge for ESL/EFL learners.
Students will learn how to interpret historical data, compare language stages, and understand mechanisms of language change. The course lays the groundwork for advanced courses in:
• Historical linguistics
• Phonology
• Morphology
• Sociolinguistics
• Varieties of English

This course provides an overview of the spread of the English language around the world and the pluralisation of English into Englishes. It examines the historical, political, and ideological issues of globalisation, nativisation, post-colonialism, standardisation and pedagogy of native and non-native varieties of English. We will examine the history of the English language, its functions and statuses in different countries, as well as its variation. Students will explore how the spread of the English language worldwide has been affected by historical, political and social factors in North America, Africa, Asia, Europe and other parts of the globe. In addition, students will learn how globalisation plays an important role in the status, function and features of English in the world today. Different geographical varieties of English will be illustrated and discussed with respect to the core components of their phonology, phonetics, morphology, lexicon, and sentence structure, as well as their discourse feature.

This course explores the dynamics of multilingualism, including its social, economic, political and linguistic implications, and also reviews language planning as a tool for addressing these concerns. Students will learn about the various types of language planning (including corpus planning, status planning and acquisition planning), levels of language planning (including micro-level and macro-level language planning), the goals of language planning, actors in language planning, factors that influence language planning, language valorisation, issues that shape language use, multilingual practices, the role of language planning in the formation of language policies and the promotion of diversity. Additionally, they will learn how language policies and planning initiatives can change the language ecology of multilingual communities, multilingualism as a social phenomenon, and how different languages interact with one another.

After a thorough introduction to the OED, students will be required to come up with a research project that makes use of the resources provided by the OED. They will have the opportunity to work and be guided on their projects in class. This class concerns linguistics beyond the sentence level. It sheds light on text, discourse and communication from a linguistic perspective, which will enable students to critically assess larger pieces of communication. We will investigate how speakers use language as a resource for communicating and interacting with each other, for structuring and unifying discourse and for displaying social identity, beliefs and opinions.

This seminar aims to give an overview of the large body of literature on language, gender and, by extension, sexuality in order to reflect on the link between language and the production of gender and sexual identities. The first part of the class will outline the founding theories of language & gender studies such as feminist theories, the dominance/difference dichotomy, performativity and ideology. In the second part, we will look at gender applied to specific linguistics topics.

Have you ever wondered why interaction is as unproblematic as it is? Why, for instance, do we manage to take turns in conversation without constantly interrupting each other? How do we know that our co-participants is inviting us to their housewarming party, rather than just asking us a question? Why do we generally understand each other – and how do we deal with misunderstandings, slips of the tongue, or excessive background noise? Which role does language play to accomplish all of this, and which other means are available to us to make ourselves understandable to each other? These questions have been investigated by conversation analysts for more than fifty years, and generally, we now understand the mechanisms underlying everyday conversation quite well. However, from the very beginning, CA literature has pointed out that forms of institutional and workplace interaction, such as classroom talk, are organised in specific ways, more or less different from conversation, and that it is these distinct features, rather than a specific physical location, that determines if a given spoken exchange is to be considered a teacher-student interaction, a broadcast interview, a courtroom trial, or any other kind of interaction.

This class will serve as an introduction to basic assumptions, methods and findings of Conversation Analysis (CA). We will discuss general principles of turn-taking, sequence organization and repair in conversation and, on that basis, identify constitutive features of classroom talk, news interviews and other types of institutional interaction.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Content note : Please note that some of our course texts contain descriptions of racialized and sexualized violence, including physical and emotional abuse, suicide, and murder. Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This course will examine queer literature from the Caribbean and its diasporas and consider what kind of queer theory we might need to understand queer lives, experiences and practices in the region. In our own global North context, the contemporary Caribbean is more often associated with rampant homophobia than queer culture; similarly, queerness and queer cultures are sometimes represented as overwhelmingly white. In this course, we will examine queer writing from the Caribbean alongside its cultural and political contexts – including the ways in which it may challenge both homophobia in the Caribbean and limited, stereotypical understandings of the Caribbean abroad, particularly in the USA and Europe – in addition to grappling with questions around how queer theory translates to and emerges from Caribbean and diasporic contexts.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Content note : Please note that some of our course texts contain descriptions of racialized and sexualized violence, including physical and emotional abuse, suicide, and murder. Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This is the second part of a two-course module which lays the groundwork for all further coursework in linguistics. In this course, students will learn about aspects of syntax, i.e. how phrases, clauses, and sentences are formed. They
- excerpt the relevant knowledge from course-specific online material and/or literature on the basis of guiding questions,
- test their understanding by applying their newly acquired knowledge to exercise questions,
- clarify questions in class, and
- complete assignments, which also include application tasks

in order to later be able to use these skills in the advanced linguistics courses in their BA and MA studies.
We strongly recommend attending this course in parallel with part I.

This course offers an introduction to the Old English language, spoken about 1000 years ago by the Anglo-Saxon inhabitants of Britain and forming the earliest stage of what is now Modern English. Special attention will be given to its grammatical and phonological features. Students will acquire a basic Old English vocabulary and learn techniques for translating simple texts. In addition, the course provides a first-hand didactic experience of learning a foreign language through a linguistically informed approach. By analysing the phonological, morphological, and syntactic structures of Old English, students will practise and extend their understanding of key linguistic concepts and phenomena relevant to the study and teaching of English.
Students will learn how to interpret historical data, compare language stages, and understand mechanisms of language change. The course lays the groundwork for advanced courses in:
• Historical linguistics
• Phonology
• Morphology

The course offers an introduction to the history of the English language from its origins to the present day. We will explore the linguistic roots of English, the major sound changes and the loss of inflectional morphology, as well as the considerable expansion of vocabulary that has shaped the development of the language. The course also examines the varieties of English spoken today and discusses both the similarities and differences between English and the other Germanic languages, with particular attention to the relationship between Modern English and German.
By examining the literary standard and situating present-day rules in their historical context, students will see how linguistic norms arose and evolved, which in turn dismantles myths about ”correctness”. In doing so, a range of idiosyncrasies of contemporary English will be uncovered and explained. Special attention will be given to the discrepancy between English spelling and pronunciation, which poses a particular challenge for ESL/EFL learners.
Students will learn how to interpret historical data, compare language stages, and understand mechanisms of language change. The course lays the groundwork for advanced courses in:
• Historical linguistics
• Phonology
• Morphology
• Sociolinguistics
• Varieties of English

This course provides an overview of the spread of the English language around the world and the pluralisation of English into Englishes. It examines the historical, political, and ideological issues of globalisation, nativisation, post-colonialism, standardisation and pedagogy of native and non-native varieties of English. We will examine the history of the English language, its functions and statuses in different countries, as well as its variation. Students will explore how the spread of the English language worldwide has been affected by historical, political and social factors in North America, Africa, Asia, Europe and other parts of the globe. In addition, students will learn how globalisation plays an important role in the status, function and features of English in the world today. Different geographical varieties of English will be illustrated and discussed with respect to the core components of their phonology, phonetics, morphology, lexicon, and sentence structure, as well as their discourse feature.

This course explores the dynamics of multilingualism, including its social, economic, political and linguistic implications, and also reviews language planning as a tool for addressing these concerns. Students will learn about the various types of language planning (including corpus planning, status planning and acquisition planning), levels of language planning (including micro-level and macro-level language planning), the goals of language planning, actors in language planning, factors that influence language planning, language valorisation, issues that shape language use, multilingual practices, the role of language planning in the formation of language policies and the promotion of diversity. Additionally, they will learn how language policies and planning initiatives can change the language ecology of multilingual communities, multilingualism as a social phenomenon, and how different languages interact with one another.

The Oxford English Dictionary (OED) is an immensely rich source of lexical data, including, inter alia, etymological information, frequency of usage, categorized timelines, and languages of origin, to name only a few search options. After a thorough introduction to the OED, students will be required to come up with a research project that makes use of the resources provided by the OED. They will have the opportunity to work and be guided on their projects in class. In the final sessions of the seminar, the students will present their findings; their presentations will be peer-reviewed.

This class concerns linguistics beyond the sentence level. It sheds light on text, discourse and communication from a linguistic perspective, which will enable students to critically assess larger pieces of communication. We will investigate how speakers use language as a resource for communicating and interacting with each other, for structuring and unifying discourse and for displaying social identity, beliefs and opinions.

This seminar aims to give an overview of the large body of literature on language, gender and, by extension, sexuality in order to reflect on the link between language and the production of gender and sexual identities. The first part of the class will outline the founding theories of language & gender studies such as feminist theories, the dominance/difference dichotomy, performativity and ideology. In the second part, we will look at gender applied to specific linguistics topics.

Have you ever wondered why interaction is as unproblematic as it is? Why, for instance, do we manage to take turns in conversation without constantly interrupting each other? How do we know that our co-participants is inviting us to their housewarming party, rather than just asking us a question? Why do we generally understand each other – and how do we deal with misunderstandings, slips of the tongue, or excessive background noise? Which role does language play to accomplish all of this, and which other means are available to us to make ourselves understandable to each other? These questions have been investigated by conversation analysts for more than fifty years, and generally, we now understand the mechanisms underlying everyday conversation quite well. However, from the very beginning, CA literature has pointed out that forms of institutional and workplace interaction, such as classroom talk, are organised in specific ways, more or less different from conversation, and that it is these distinct features, rather than a specific physical location, that determines if a given spoken exchange is to be considered a teacher-student interaction, a broadcast interview, a courtroom trial, or any other kind of interaction.

This class will serve as an introduction to basic assumptions, methods and findings of Conversation Analysis (CA). We will discuss general principles of turn-taking, sequence organization and repair in conversation and, on that basis, identify constitutive features of classroom talk, news interviews and other types of institutional interaction.

This course introduces participants to materials development through careful consideration of what constitutes teaching materials in the EFL classroom, how materials can be analyzed, adapted and created. It has a specific focus on productive and receptive competencies as well as task-based learning. Participants will gain practical experience in analyzing, adapting, and designing materials based on the competencies expected to be fostered in the English classroom as part of the Rahmenlehrplan.

In diesem Praktikum sammeln die Studierenden wöchentlich in einer festen SPS-Gruppe (5 Studierende) erste berufsrelevante Erfahrungen im komplexen Handlungsfeld Englischunterricht. Dabei erproben sie sich als Lehrende und entwickeln ein Verständnis für die Vielschichtigkeit didaktischen Denkens und unterrichtspraktischen Handelns. Sie beobachten Fremdsprachenunterricht und unternehmen eigene Unterrichtsversuche (1 bis 2 Stunden). Dabei sollen sie auch ihre Berufsentscheidung überprüfen. In begleitenden Auswertungsgesprächen in der Gruppe wird beobachteter und eigener Unterricht in Beziehung gesetzt zu bisher in der Fachdidaktik erworbenen theoretischen Kenntnissen; die persönliche Bedeutsamkeit von Unterrichtskonzepten wird auf diese Weise vertieft.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Content note : Please note that some of our course texts contain descriptions of racialized and sexualized violence, including physical and emotional abuse, suicide, and murder. Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This course will examine queer literature from the Caribbean and its diasporas and consider what kind of queer theory we might need to understand queer lives, experiences and practices in the region. In our own global North context, the contemporary Caribbean is more often associated with rampant homophobia than queer culture; similarly, queerness and queer cultures are sometimes represented as overwhelmingly white. In this course, we will examine queer writing from the Caribbean alongside its cultural and political contexts – including the ways in which it may challenge both homophobia in the Caribbean and limited, stereotypical understandings of the Caribbean abroad, particularly in the USA and Europe – in addition to grappling with questions around how queer theory translates to and emerges from Caribbean and diasporic contexts.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Content note : Please note that some of our course texts contain descriptions of racialized and sexualized violence, including physical and emotional abuse, suicide, and murder. Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This class examines the death penalty in ancient Greece and Rome and in modern North America in a comparative and interdisciplinary perspective. Working from both (ancient) history and literary and cultural studies we will focus on discourses surrounding the death penalty and its application via the analysis of selected texts. We will in particular examine the fictional and non-fictional speech of persons condemned to death across the centuries. What kind of inbetween space is death row and what kind of subject dwells there? How does this liminality shape the figure of the condemned and their words? If the death penalty is the strongest expression of political sovereignty, how do the words of those condemned to death contribute to consolidating its power or to undermining its authority?

In this class we will read and discuss feminist theory from the global South: suggestions for readings from students are very welcome, and can be sent to me before or at the start of the semester. Students should be prepared for - and ideally excited about - reading and working with theory, including complex reading, theoretical analysis and conceptual work. Some pre-existing knowledge of feminist theory from any context will be of an advantage; students without any background in gender studies or feminist theory should be prepared to do extra reading to acquire a basis for comparison and analysis.

Salman Rushdie, dubbed the "shakespeare of postcolonial writing" by David Damrosch writes a version of "world literature" from everywhere and nowhere at once -- out of India and England, Islam and secularism, myth and modernity. This course reads three of his novels, viz. The Satanic Verses, Haroun and the Sea of Stories, and The Enchantress of Florence , along with selected essays and short stories, as acts of deliberate boundary crossing: between oral and literary traditions, between the local and the global, between the sacred and the profane. Rather than approaching Rushdie as a singular cosmopolitan voice, the course situates each novel within the specific cultural, political, and narrative contexts it inhabits and unsettles, asking how a text that travels so widely still carries the particular weight of the places it comes from — and the worlds it unsettles in the process of reading.

This course examines wordless comics as a migrant medium — a form uniquely equipped to carry the experience of displacement. At the heart of this inquiry is a productive tension embedded in the course's title — between worldlessness, the condition of the migrant stripped of language, home, and legibility, and wordlessness, the capacity of the image to speak across those very borders. Through a range of autographic works — comics and graphic memoirs drawn from migrant and diasporic traditions — students will explore how the absence of words becomes, paradoxically, one of the most powerful languages available to the displaced subject. This course proposes a method of reading equal to that demand, one called migrant reading: an interpretive practice that mirrors the migrant subject's own labor of making meaning in an unfamiliar world, rebuilding coherence from fragments with each new encounter with the page.

Was American discourse always prone to speculate about conspiracies?

Are QAnon, Flat-Earth, Pizza-Gate, Cultural Marxism, the Epstein Files, Jan. 6, Lab Leak exclusively new phenomena, or is the US inundated with armchair detectives, constantly connecting events in an apophenic frenzy? What does it do to call something a conspiracy, and what to call someone a conspiracy theorist?

In this seminar, we will examine academic debates on the phenomenon of conspiracy theories; that is, participants will survey definitions and fields of discussion, fiction that outlines conspiracies, as well as the historic contexts in which they gained popularity.

The course will start with the Puritans and then move to anti-Catholic conspiracy theories. We will look at the interplay of conspiracy theories regarding slave insurrections, as well as a set of racist conspiracy theories at the turn of the 19th century, to move on to the Red Scare. Contemporary events are of course not excluded from the literature or the debates.

Have you watched, or even emulated, anyone's morning routine? Have you tried productivity hacks, considered adopting a specific parenting-style, stacked habits, manifested festival tickets, or are you bombarded by ads about breaking your dopamine addiction? Welcome to self-help culture!

This seminar engages with the cultural phenomenon of self-help literature and its participation on creating the (post)modern subject. We will look at early examples from the nineteenth century (largely US American), and then address themes such as productivity, relationships, finances, and parenting, in more contemporary publications. Critical theory on postmodernism, capitalism, gender and race will help students to analyze the ideological implications embedded within this self-help advice.

This class examines the death penalty in ancient Greece and Rome and in modern North America in a comparative and interdisciplinary perspective. Working from both (ancient) history and literary and cultural studies we will focus on discourses surrounding the death penalty and its application via the analysis of selected texts. We will in particular examine the fictional and non-fictional speech of persons condemned to death across the centuries. What kind of inbetween space is death row and what kind of subject dwells there? How does this liminality shape the figure of the condemned and their words? If the death penalty is the strongest expression of political sovereignty, how do the words of those condemned to death contribute to consolidating its power or to undermining its authority?

In this class we will read and discuss feminist theory from the global South: suggestions for readings from students are very welcome, and can be sent to me before or at the start of the semester. Students should be prepared for - and ideally excited about - reading and working with theory, including complex reading, theoretical analysis and conceptual work. Some pre-existing knowledge of feminist theory from any context will be of an advantage; students without any background in gender studies or feminist theory should be prepared to do extra reading to acquire a basis for comparison and analysis.

Salman Rushdie, dubbed the "shakespeare of postcolonial writing" by David Damrosch writes a version of "world literature" from everywhere and nowhere at once -- out of India and England, Islam and secularism, myth and modernity. This course reads three of his novels, viz. The Satanic Verses, Haroun and the Sea of Stories, and The Enchantress of Florence , along with selected essays and short stories, as acts of deliberate boundary crossing: between oral and literary traditions, between the local and the global, between the sacred and the profane. Rather than approaching Rushdie as a singular cosmopolitan voice, the course situates each novel within the specific cultural, political, and narrative contexts it inhabits and unsettles, asking how a text that travels so widely still carries the particular weight of the places it comes from — and the worlds it unsettles in the process of reading.

This course examines wordless comics as a migrant medium — a form uniquely equipped to carry the experience of displacement. At the heart of this inquiry is a productive tension embedded in the course's title — between worldlessness, the condition of the migrant stripped of language, home, and legibility, and wordlessness, the capacity of the image to speak across those very borders. Through a range of autographic works — comics and graphic memoirs drawn from migrant and diasporic traditions — students will explore how the absence of words becomes, paradoxically, one of the most powerful languages available to the displaced subject. This course proposes a method of reading equal to that demand, one called migrant reading: an interpretive practice that mirrors the migrant subject's own labor of making meaning in an unfamiliar world, rebuilding coherence from fragments with each new encounter with the page.

Was American discourse always prone to speculate about conspiracies?

Are QAnon, Flat-Earth, Pizza-Gate, Cultural Marxism, the Epstein Files, Jan. 6, Lab Leak exclusively new phenomena, or is the US inundated with armchair detectives, constantly connecting events in an apophenic frenzy? What does it do to call something a conspiracy, and what to call someone a conspiracy theorist?

In this seminar, we will examine academic debates on the phenomenon of conspiracy theories; that is, participants will survey definitions and fields of discussion, fiction that outlines conspiracies, as well as the historic contexts in which they gained popularity.

The course will start with the Puritans and then move to anti-Catholic conspiracy theories. We will look at the interplay of conspiracy theories regarding slave insurrections, as well as a set of racist conspiracy theories at the turn of the 19th century, to move on to the Red Scare. Contemporary events are of course not excluded from the literature or the debates.

The course is designed to strengthen your academic writing in English. To this end we will deal with the components of essay writing: the design of the introductory, main body, and concluding paragraphs as well as the conventions of MLA 9. Naturally we hope the course will also deepen your English. At advanced levels, language can only be deepened by using it to do challenging tasks - and few tasks are more challenging than writing good argument.

Improving your expression in and knowledge of English through intensive comparison and contrast with German: that is the main purpose of this course. Translation is a powerful tool for improving your proficiency because it uses your native language - your semantic bedrock that all your explorations in the second language build up from. Alan Duff: `Translation develops three qualities essential to all language learning: flexibility, accuracy, and clarity. It trains the learner to search (flexibility) for the most appropriate words (accuracy) to convey what is meant (clarity).` You learn to think from words and structures to meanings - translation sensitizes you to the nuances of style and meaning better than anything other language learning activity. By contrasting the meanings of words and syntax, you can move away from literal (whatever that means!) translations to meaning (whatever that is!).

Kommentar

This class examines the death penalty in ancient Greece and Rome and in modern North America in a comparative and interdisciplinary perspective. Working from both (ancient) history and literary and cultural studies we will focus on discourses surrounding the death penalty and its application via the analysis of selected texts. We will in particular examine the fictional and non-fictional speech of persons condemned to death across the centuries. What kind of inbetween space is death row and what kind of subject dwells there? How does this liminality shape the figure of the condemned and their words? If the death penalty is the strongest expression of political sovereignty, how do the words of those condemned to death contribute to consolidating its power or to undermining its authority?

This course examines the power dynamics and social influence around the English language, including its role in colonisation, globalisation and linguistic diversity. It explores ways in which language shapes political discourse, public opinion, identity and ideologies, as well as how it is used to empower or marginalise certain groups and how it creates and maintains power structures. Students will learn how the politics of English has influenced language policies, linguistic rights, social inclusion and exclusion, and overall development. Students will also learn how the use and spread of English across the world are entangled with political, economic, social and cultural power dynamics. Additionally, students will learn the language education policy and the politics of curriculum, language use in the media to shape public discourse and political narratives, the use of language to challenge power structures, implications of the dominance of English for linguistic diversity and power relations, linguistic imperialism and the dominance of English in colonised territories, linguistic hegemony and linguistic marginalisation.

This course investigates the dynamic relationship between language and society. It examines ways in which social factors influence language use, choice, attitudes, variation and change. It explores the social and cultural contexts of language, including language variation across different social groups, the impact of gender, ethnicity, and social class, as well as the role of language in shaping social identity, diversity, ideologies and power dynamics, and social relationships. It will also be concerned with the way in which language policies and planning initiatives can influence language use, attitudes and social change. Furthermore, it will analyse how language is used in social interaction, and discuss the methodologies available for sociolinguistic research.

In this class we will read and discuss feminist theory from the global South: suggestions for readings from students are very welcome, and can be sent to me before or at the start of the semester. Students should be prepared for - and ideally excited about - reading and working with theory, including complex reading, theoretical analysis and conceptual work. Some pre-existing knowledge of feminist theory from any context will be of an advantage; students without any background in gender studies or feminist theory should be prepared to do extra reading to acquire a basis for comparison and analysis.

1	S	Do	12:00 - 14:00	wöch.	1.19.0.31	15.10.2026	Abiral Kumar

Kommentar

Salman Rushdie, dubbed the "shakespeare of postcolonial writing" by David Damrosch writes a version of "world literature" from everywhere and nowhere at once -- out of India and England, Islam and secularism, myth and modernity. This course reads three of his novels, viz. The Satanic Verses, Haroun and the Sea of Stories, and The Enchantress of Florence , along with selected essays and short stories, as acts of deliberate boundary crossing: between oral and literary traditions, between the local and the global, between the sacred and the profane. Rather than approaching Rushdie as a singular cosmopolitan voice, the course situates each novel within the specific cultural, political, and narrative contexts it inhabits and unsettles, asking how a text that travels so widely still carries the particular weight of the places it comes from — and the worlds it unsettles in the process of reading.

1	S	Do	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.19.0.31	15.10.2026	Abiral Kumar

Kommentar

This course examines wordless comics as a migrant medium — a form uniquely equipped to carry the experience of displacement. At the heart of this inquiry is a productive tension embedded in the course's title — between worldlessness, the condition of the migrant stripped of language, home, and legibility, and wordlessness, the capacity of the image to speak across those very borders. Through a range of autographic works — comics and graphic memoirs drawn from migrant and diasporic traditions — students will explore how the absence of words becomes, paradoxically, one of the most powerful languages available to the displaced subject. This course proposes a method of reading equal to that demand, one called migrant reading: an interpretive practice that mirrors the migrant subject's own labor of making meaning in an unfamiliar world, rebuilding coherence from fragments with each new encounter with the page.

Was American discourse always prone to speculate about conspiracies?

Are QAnon, Flat-Earth, Pizza-Gate, Cultural Marxism, the Epstein Files, Jan. 6, Lab Leak exclusively new phenomena, or is the US inundated with armchair detectives, constantly connecting events in an apophenic frenzy? What does it do to call something a conspiracy, and what to call someone a conspiracy theorist?

In this seminar, we will examine academic debates on the phenomenon of conspiracy theories; that is, participants will survey definitions and fields of discussion, fiction that outlines conspiracies, as well as the historic contexts in which they gained popularity.

The course will start with the Puritans and then move to anti-Catholic conspiracy theories. We will look at the interplay of conspiracy theories regarding slave insurrections, as well as a set of racist conspiracy theories at the turn of the 19th century, to move on to the Red Scare. Contemporary events are of course not excluded from the literature or the debates.

Have you watched, or even emulated, anyone's morning routine? Have you tried productivity hacks, considered adopting a specific parenting-style, stacked habits, manifested festival tickets, or are you bombarded by ads about breaking your dopamine addiction? Welcome to self-help culture!

This seminar engages with the cultural phenomenon of self-help literature and its participation on creating the (post)modern subject. We will look at early examples from the nineteenth century (largely US American), and then address themes such as productivity, relationships, finances, and parenting, in more contemporary publications. Critical theory on postmodernism, capitalism, gender and race will help students to analyze the ideological implications embedded within this self-help advice.

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with an overview of various themes in phonological research. We will examine phenomena related to both segmental and suprasegmental phonology in English as well as other languages. Students will become familiar with theoretical frameworks and methodologies used to model the phonological structure of words. The themes will be organised along two strands. First, students will be introduced to selected theoretical principles, models, and tools proposed for describing and analysing the phonological structure of words (e.g. features, rules, constraints, and preferences) within various frameworks (e.g. Lexical Phonology, Optimality Theory, Natural Phonology). In-class exercises will involve analysing segmental and suprasegmental properties of words (e.g. syllable structure and syllabification strategies, stress placement) using these models. Second, we will confront the theoretical predictions with the results of empirical research by drawing on various sources of external evidence (e.g. psycholinguistics, language acquisition, phonetic symbolism, distributed semantics).
The topics discussed in the seminar are aimed at merging knowledge from different courses on core linguistics (phonetics, elements of morphology and semantics) that students might have taken so far, and building on that knowledge in order to show the broad scope of investigation in the domain of phonology. Note that topics can be subject to change, depending on the specific interests of the group.

Pronunciation for EFL Teachers is a practical course combining the theoretical foundations in English phonetics and phonology, the development of students' own English pronunciation with an introduction to evidence-based pronunciation teaching. Students will work on selected segmental and suprasegmental features through perception tasks, articulatory practice, pronunciation drills and guided production, using the IPA and phonetic/phonological knowledge as practical tools. The drills will help students develop a detailed awareness of their own pronunciation, identify mispronunciations in others, and learn how to correct them effectively, with the aim of developing highly accurate English pronunciation.
The course will address common pronunciation patterns associated with different first-language backgrounds. Particular attention will be given to features that may arise in German-accented English, alongside common examples of pronunciation patterns found in English spoken by learners with other linguistic backgrounds (e.g. palatalization, final-obstruent devoicing, nasalization). Practical tasks will include developing an articulatory setting for selected English vowels and consonants (e.g. different types of rhotics, aspiration) as well as recognizing trends and dispreferred suprasegmental patterns in natural speech related to tonal patterns, glottal settings, rhythm or phonostylistic processes.

While (language) learning may be conceptualised as a cognitive process taking place within the individual's mind, there are many researchers who understand it as a profoundly interactional matter: Learners develop skills in, and through, participation in social exchanges with teachers, experts and peers. Accordingly, over the past two decades, it has been established within the latter framework that learning (and teaching) success are significantly impacted by teachers' and learners' ability to create, and utilise, opportunities for learning - that is, by their classroom interactional competence .
This seminar will introduce you to the concept of CIC. We will explore choices made by teachers and students when interacting in the classroom, and discuss in how far these choices may be seen to facilitate or inhibit (language) learning. This course presents a comprehensive overview of testing and evaluation through the perspective of English language teaching. It aims to familiarize students with basic concepts and principles of testing, competence and performance in language as well as with the issues and considerations in the conceptualization, design, construction and administration of language tests. The course will dwell on the process of testing and assessing students' second language proficiency with respect to different language skills (e.g., listening, speaking, reading and writing) and language content (e.g., grammar and vocabulary) in the second language classroom and the steps involved in this process. Participants will have opportunities to evaluate existing tests and assessment procedures, and design test and assessment instruments.

Improving your expression in and knowledge of English through intensive comparison and contrast with German: that is the main purpose of this course. Translation is a powerful tool for improving your proficiency because it uses your native language - your semantic bedrock that all your explorations in the second language build up from. Alan Duff: `Translation develops three qualities essential to all language learning: flexibility, accuracy, and clarity. It trains the learner to search (flexibility) for the most appropriate words (accuracy) to convey what is meant (clarity).` You learn to think from words and structures to meanings - translation sensitizes you to the nuances of style and meaning better than anything other language learning activity. By contrasting the meanings of words and syntax, you can move away from literal (whatever that means!) translations to meaning (whatever that is!).

The course is designed to strengthen your academic writing in English. To this end we will deal with the components of essay writing: the design of the introductory, main body, and concluding paragraphs as well as the conventions of MLA 9. Naturally we hope the course will also deepen your English. At advanced levels, language can only be deepened by using it to do challenging tasks - and few tasks are more challenging than writing good argument.

This course examines the power dynamics and social influence around the English language, including its role in colonisation, globalisation and linguistic diversity. It explores ways in which language shapes political discourse, public opinion, identity and ideologies, as well as how it is used to empower or marginalise certain groups and how it creates and maintains power structures. Students will learn how the politics of English has influenced language policies, linguistic rights, social inclusion and exclusion, and overall development. Students will also learn how the use and spread of English across the world are entangled with political, economic, social and cultural power dynamics. Additionally, students will learn the language education policy and the politics of curriculum, language use in the media to shape public discourse and political narratives, the use of language to challenge power structures, implications of the dominance of English for linguistic diversity and power relations, linguistic imperialism and the dominance of English in colonised territories, linguistic hegemony and linguistic marginalisation.

This course investigates the dynamic relationship between language and society. It examines ways in which social factors influence language use, choice, attitudes, variation and change. It explores the social and cultural contexts of language, including language variation across different social groups, the impact of gender, ethnicity, and social class, as well as the role of language in shaping social identity, diversity, ideologies and power dynamics, and social relationships. It will also be concerned with the way in which language policies and planning initiatives can influence language use, attitudes and social change. Furthermore, it will analyse how language is used in social interaction, and discuss the methodologies available for sociolinguistic research.

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with an overview of various themes in phonological research. We will examine phenomena related to both segmental and suprasegmental phonology in English as well as other languages. Students will become familiar with theoretical frameworks and methodologies used to model the phonological structure of words. The themes will be organised along two strands. First, students will be introduced to selected theoretical principles, models, and tools proposed for describing and analysing the phonological structure of words (e.g. features, rules, constraints, and preferences) within various frameworks (e.g. Lexical Phonology, Optimality Theory, Natural Phonology). In-class exercises will involve analysing segmental and suprasegmental properties of words (e.g. syllable structure and syllabification strategies, stress placement) using these models. Second, we will confront the theoretical predictions with the results of empirical research by drawing on various sources of external evidence (e.g. psycholinguistics, language acquisition, phonetic symbolism, distributed semantics).
The topics discussed in the seminar are aimed at merging knowledge from different courses on core linguistics (phonetics, elements of morphology and semantics) that students might have taken so far, and building on that knowledge in order to show the broad scope of investigation in the domain of phonology. Note that topics can be subject to change, depending on the specific interests of the group.

Pronunciation for EFL Teachers is a practical course combining the theoretical foundations in English phonetics and phonology, the development of students' own English pronunciation with an introduction to evidence-based pronunciation teaching. Students will work on selected segmental and suprasegmental features through perception tasks, articulatory practice, pronunciation drills and guided production, using the IPA and phonetic/phonological knowledge as practical tools. The drills will help students develop a detailed awareness of their own pronunciation, identify mispronunciations in others, and learn how to correct them effectively, with the aim of developing highly accurate English pronunciation.
The course will address common pronunciation patterns associated with different first-language backgrounds. Particular attention will be given to features that may arise in German-accented English, alongside common examples of pronunciation patterns found in English spoken by learners with other linguistic backgrounds (e.g. palatalization, final-obstruent devoicing, nasalization). Practical tasks will include developing an articulatory setting for selected English vowels and consonants (e.g. different types of rhotics, aspiration) as well as recognizing trends and dispreferred suprasegmental patterns in natural speech related to tonal patterns, glottal settings, rhythm or phonostylistic processes.

While (language) learning may be conceptualised as a cognitive process taking place within the individual's mind, there are many researchers who understand it as a profoundly interactional matter: Learners develop skills in, and through, participation in social exchanges with teachers, experts and peers. Accordingly, over the past two decades, it has been established within the latter framework that learning (and teaching) success are significantly impacted by teachers' and learners' ability to create, and utilise, opportunities for learning - that is, by their classroom interactional competence .
This seminar will introduce you to the concept of CIC. We will explore choices made by teachers and students when interacting in the classroom, and discuss in how far these choices may be seen to facilitate or inhibit (language) learning. To that end, we will both review existing research and conduct our own hands-on analyses of classroom data.

Kommentar

This class examines the death penalty in ancient Greece and Rome and in modern North America in a comparative and interdisciplinary perspective. Working from both (ancient) history and literary and cultural studies we will focus on discourses surrounding the death penalty and its application via the analysis of selected texts. We will in particular examine the fictional and non-fictional speech of persons condemned to death across the centuries. What kind of inbetween space is death row and what kind of subject dwells there? How does this liminality shape the figure of the condemned and their words? If the death penalty is the strongest expression of political sovereignty, how do the words of those condemned to death contribute to consolidating its power or to undermining its authority?

Kommentar

In this class we will read and discuss feminist theory from the global South: suggestions for readings from students are very welcome, and can be sent to me before or at the start of the semester. Students should be prepared for - and ideally excited about - reading and working with theory, including complex reading, theoretical analysis and conceptual work. Some pre-existing knowledge of feminist theory from any context will be of an advantage; students without any background in gender studies or feminist theory should be prepared to do extra reading to acquire a basis for comparison and analysis.

In this class we will read about contemporary club, rave and party cultures and their politics from a range of locations around the globe. 1	S	Do	12:00 - 14:00	wöch.	1.19.0.31	15.10.2026	Abiral Kumar

Kommentar

Salman Rushdie, dubbed the "shakespeare of postcolonial writing" by David Damrosch writes a version of "world literature" from everywhere and nowhere at once -- out of India and England, Islam and secularism, myth and modernity. This course reads three of his novels, viz. The Satanic Verses, Haroun and the Sea of Stories, and The Enchantress of Florence , along with selected essays and short stories, as acts of deliberate boundary crossing: between oral and literary traditions, between the local and the global, between the sacred and the profane. Rather than approaching Rushdie as a singular cosmopolitan voice, the course situates each novel within the specific cultural, political, and narrative contexts it inhabits and unsettles, asking how a text that travels so widely still carries the particular weight of the places it comes from — and the worlds it unsettles in the process of reading.

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Do	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.19.0.31	15.10.2026	Abiral Kumar

Kommentar

This course examines wordless comics as a migrant medium — a form uniquely equipped to carry the experience of displacement. At the heart of this inquiry is a productive tension embedded in the course's title — between worldlessness, the condition of the migrant stripped of language, home, and legibility, and wordlessness, the capacity of the image to speak across those very borders. Through a range of autographic works — comics and graphic memoirs drawn from migrant and diasporic traditions — students will explore how the absence of words becomes, paradoxically, one of the most powerful languages available to the displaced subject. This course proposes a method of reading equal to that demand, one called migrant reading: an interpretive practice that mirrors the migrant subject's own labor of making meaning in an unfamiliar world, rebuilding coherence from fragments with each new encounter with the page.

Kommentar

"Just because you're paranoid doesn't mean they aren't after you" (Joseph Heller, Catch-22)

Was American discourse always prone to speculate about conspiracies?

Are QAnon, Flat-Earth, Pizza-Gate, Cultural Marxism, the Epstein Files, Jan. 6, Lab Leak exclusively new phenomena, or is the US inundated with armchair detectives, constantly connecting events in an apophenic frenzy? What does it do to call something a conspiracy, and what to call someone a conspiracy theorist?

In this seminar, we will examine academic debates on the phenomenon of conspiracy theories; that is, participants will survey definitions and fields of discussion, fiction that outlines conspiracies, as well as the historic contexts in which they gained popularity.

The course will start with the Puritans and then move to anti-Catholic conspiracy theories. We will look at the interplay of conspiracy theories regarding slave insurrections, as well as a set of racist conspiracy theories at the turn of the 19th century, to move on to the Red Scare. Contemporary events are of course not excluded from the literature or the debates.

Have you watched, or even emulated, anyone's morning routine? Have you tried productivity hacks, considered adopting a specific parenting-style, stacked habits, manifested festival tickets, or are you bombarded by ads about breaking your dopamine addiction? Welcome to self-help culture!

This seminar engages with the cultural phenomenon of self-help literature and its participation on creating the (post)modern subject. We will look at early examples from the nineteenth century (largely US American), and then address themes such as productivity, relationships, finances, and parenting, in more contemporary publications. Critical theory on postmodernism, capitalism, gender and race will help students to analyze the ideological implications embedded within this self-help advice.

Das Ende der DDR nutzten einige konservative westdeutsche Intellektuelle, aber auch ostdeutsche Autor:innen, die die DDR verlassen hatten, für ein Scherbengericht über die Literatur des untergegangen Landes. Eine pauschale Abwertung als „Gesinnungskitsch" konnte sich jedoch langfristig nicht durchsetzen: Auch mehr als 30 Jahre nach der Wiedervereinigung ist die DDR-Literatur keineswegs in Vergessenheit geraten, sondern wird weiterhin geschätzt, gelesen und erforscht.
Dabei hat sich eine differenzierte und kulturhistorisch informierte Perspektive etabliert: Der DDR-Literatur, hier zunächst heuristisch verstanden als Korpus literarischer Texte, die zwischen 1949 und 1989 von in der DDR sozialisierten und/oder dort lebenden Autor:innen verfasst wurden, kommt in der deutschsprachigen Literaturgeschichte des 20. Jahrhunderts ein besonderer Status zu: Zwar eng mit der westdeutschen Literaturgeschichte verflochten, zeichnet sich die DDR-Literatur durch spezifische Entstehungs-, Publikations- und Rezeptionskontexte aus, die sich deutlich von der Bundesrepublik unterscheiden. In diesem Sinne wollen wir im Seminar ausgewählte Texte wichtiger DDR-Autor:innen (u.a. Jurek Becker, Volker Braun, Franz Fühmann, Uwe Johnson, Sarah Kirsch, Brigitte Reimann, Christa Wolf) lesen, sie in literarische Traditionen und Diskussion einordnen und im Zusammenhang kulturpolitischer Stationen und Programmatiken (Formalismus-Debatte, Sozialistischer Realismus, Bitterfelder Weg, Kahlschlagplenum, Biermann-Ausbürgerung, Glasnost-Kulturpolitik) betrachten, um so ein angemessenes Verständnis und literarhistorisch fundierte Deutungsperspektiven zu erarbeiten.

Begleitend findet am 28./29. Januar 2027 am Potsdamer Einstein Forum der Workshop „Der Literaturbetrieb der DDR. Institutionen, Netzwerke und Strukturen" statt; der Besuch ausgewählter Vorträge ist Teil des Seminars.

Kommentar

Das Ziel des Seminars ist, anhand ausgewählter Gedichte aus verschiedenen Jahrhunderten Einblicke in die Formenvielfalt deutschsprachiger Lyrik zu erhalten und Grundkompetenzen für die Analyse lyrischer Gedichte zu erwerben und zu erproben. Zentrale Begriffe und Kategorien für die Beschreibung von Gedichten wie Vers, Rhythmus, Metapher oder Reim werden im Seminar eingeführt und an konkreten Gedichten erläutert. Drei methodisch unterschiedlich vorgehende Gedichtinterpretationen werden als Modellanalysen diskutiert.

Der Aufbau des Seminars gliedert sich in vier Analyseebenen von Lyrik: die lexikalisch-syntaktische Ebene, klanglich-rhythmische Ebene, die bildlich-metaphorische Ebene und die graphisch-visuelle Ebene. Im Verlauf des Seminars sind sechs Seminaraufgaben während einer Sitzung erfolgreich zu bearbeiten (unbenotet).

Die im Seminar erworbenen Kompetenzen werden im letzten Drittel des Seminars individuell getestet (unbenotet): Alle Teilnehmenden wählen aus einem vorgegebenen Textkorpus ein Gedicht aus, zu dem sie eine Analyse verfassen (drei Seiten). Diese wird anonym von einer anderen Person hinsichtlich ihrer Plausibilität kommentiert. Einige der Analysen werden am Semesterende gemeinsam besprochen.

Kommentar

Unterstreichen, markieren, kommentieren, strukturieren – es gibt viele Formen, Texte zu bearbeiten und mit zusätzlichen Informationen auszuzeichen. Diese Formen können Annotation genannt werden. Im Seminar steht also eine Methode im Zentrum, die Sie wahrscheinlich bereits zur Bearbeitung von Primär- und Sekundärtexten nutzen, die aber im Enprodukt Ihrer wissenschaftlichen Arbeit z.B. in Form einer Hausarbeit versteckt bleibt. Wir wollen diese Methode genauer unter die Lupe nehmen und den Prozess der Textbearbeitung und damit der Grundlage für die Argumentation und die Interpretation literarischer Texte transparent machen. Dafür fragen wir uns zuerst, was Annotationen sind, welche Ziele sie verfolgen und wie bei der Annotation vorgegangen wird.

Wir wollen darauf aufbauend praktisch arbeiten. Das heißt, wir annotieren Texte gemeinsam, diskutieren die Annotationen und gehen der Frage nach, wann das Verständnis einer Textstelle von unserer Interpretation abhängt und wann nicht.

Zuletzt stehen ihre Fragestellungen/Themen im Fokus, die Sie in Gruppen durch die Methode der Annotation bearbeiten.

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Gerade Frauen waren politisch in ihrer Publizistik. Mit welchen Themen haben sie sich beschäftigt, unter welchen Bedingungen, welche publizistischen Formate und Tricks haben sie genutzt um ihre Stimmen hörbar zu machen? Manche der Texte von politischen Publizistischen aus dem 19. jahrhundert scheinen uns in ihren Forderungen und auch in ihrem Stil modern und brandaktuell, wirken aber heutzutage in der Öffentlichkeit unter Goethes et al. Sockel begraben zu liegen. Drei zu ihren Lebzeiten sehr bekannte Publizistinnen (Huber, Assing und v. Arnim) werden wir kennenlernen. Wir werden diese Texte entdecken, ihre interessanten Ideen kennenlernen und sie gemeinsam wiederbeleben, denn die Publizistinnen von damals sind in ihrer Unverzagtheit und in ihrem Widerstand gegen rechte Kräfte Vorbilder für heute.

Kommentar

Mediävistische Einführungsseminare stellen das Wissen bereit, das notwendig ist, um deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters lesen, verstehen und wissenschaftlich beschreiben zu können. Anhand ausgewählter Texte ist einerseits kultur- und literaturwissenschaftliches Grundwissen zu erarbeiten, andererseits soll das Mittelhochdeutsche erlernt und das Übersetzen geübt werden. Das Seminar ist entsprechend für Anfänger (bis zum max. 4. Fachsemester), nicht für Fortgeschrittene konzipiert.

Einführung am Beispiel von Texten aus den 1960er Jahren (BRD, DDR, Österreich)

Das Seminar führt in grundlegende Begriffe, Fragestellungen und Vorgehensweisen ein, die für die literaturwissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur seit ca. 1750 relevant sind. Diskutiert und erprobt werden diese anhand von individuell zu lesenden literarischen Texten aus den 1960er Jahren (BRD, DDR, Österreich). Lernziel ist, anhand konkreter Texte wichtige Aspekte und Praktiken literaturwissenschaftlichen Arbeitens kennenzulernen und zu reflektieren. Der Aufbau des Seminars orientiert sich an den vier literarischen Hauptgattungen: Erzählliteratur (Epik), Lyrik, Dramatik und literarische Gebrauchsformen (wie Brief, Essay oder Reisebericht). Diese vier Hauptgattungen werden jeweils in ihren charakteristischen Merkmalen und Analysekategorien eingeführt. Weiterhin werden allgemeine Fragen des Literaturbegriffs, der Methodik und der Literaturgeschichtsschreibung behandelt.

Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende vor allem des ersten und zweiten Semesters. Für eine erfolgreiche Teilnahme sind die Lektüre der behandelten Texte und die erfolgreiche Bearbeitung einer Anwendungsaufgabe (ca. 15 min) an sechs angegebenen Seminarterminen (unbenotet; max. zwei verpasste oder nicht bestandene Seminaraufgaben können in der letzten Seminarsitzung wiederholt werden).

Kommentar

Das Ziel dieser Veranstaltung ist es, anhand von ausgewählten Textbeispielen aus dem 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhundert in die Literatur der Frühen Neuzeit einzuführen. Einen zentralen Ansatzpunkt bildet dabei die Frage, warum man die Frühe Neuzeit als ‚rhetorisches Zeitalter' bezeichnen kann, und zwar nicht nur in Bezug auf die Textproduktion. Im Einzelnen geht es um formale Gesichtspunkte wie beliebte Gattungen, um metrische und stilistische Eigenheiten sowie um bevorzugte Themen. Außerdem kommen Fragen der Normierung zur Sprache, und zwar sowohl in theoretischer Hinsicht (Rhetorik und Poetik) als auch in sozialgeschichtlicher Hinsicht (Mäzenatentum und Gebrauchsdichtung). Schlaglichtartig bietet der Kurs eine Einführung in die spezifischen Hilfsmittel der germanistischen Frühneuzeitforschung, d.h. in nützliche Wörterbücher und Nachschlagewerke, Datenbanken, Kataloge und Internetseiten sowie in den wissenschaftlichen Umgang mit frühneuzeitlichen Quellen (Frakturschrift, Besonderheiten im Druckbild, Abkürzungen etc.).

Die Vorlesung führt problemorientiert in zentrale Begriffe, Gegenstände, Fragestellungen und Methoden der germanistischen Literaturwissenschaft ein. Lernziel ist, einen aspektreichen Überblick über die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur in systematischer wie historischer Hinsicht zu gewinnen. Die Vorlesung ist in drei Abschnitte untergliedert:

1. systematischer Zugriff: Womit beschäftigt sich (germanistische) Literaturwissenschaft?

2. historischer Zugriff: Welche Veränderungen durchliefen die deutschsprachige Literatur und die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit ihr im Laufe der Jahrhunderte?

3. methodologischer Zugriff: Wie geht man literaturwissenschaftlich vor?

Der Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung liegt auf der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 18. bis 21. Jahrhunderts, punktuell werden auch Aspekte früherer Literaturepochen berücksichtigt. Die Vorlesung schließt mit einer Klausur ab, diese ist zugleich die Modulprüfung für das gesamte Basismodul GER_BA_006. Sie findet am 9. Juli um 16.15 Uhr statt. Ich empfehle, die Vorlesung nicht vor dem zweiten Fachsemester zu besuchen.

Kommentar

In meiner Vorlesung behandle ich jeweils abwechselnd ein Epoche und eine Gattung der antiken Literatur. In diesem Semester ist die Kaiserzeit an der Reihe, das heißt die Zeit nach Augustus und ab seinem Nachfolger Tiberius.
Auch nach den Epochen der späten römischen Republik und der Augusteischen Zeit, die uns wohl die am meisten rezipierten lateinischen Autoren gebracht haben, bleibt die antike Literatur faszinierend – und wird vielleicht sogar vielseitiger: Die griechische Literatur erlebt ein solches Comeback, dass selbst der römische Kaiser Marc Aurel seine philosophischen Gedanken auf Griechisch niederschreibt, und neben der Philosophie blühen die alten Gattungen wie Epos, Geschichtsschreibung und Naturwissenschaft, Kleinformen wie das Epigramm erwachen zu neuem Leben, kontroverse Autoren wie Lucan und Josephus werfen neue Perspektiven auf Etabliertes. Ein Überblick muss immer oberflächlich bleiben – dennoch werden Sie die Texte, die in der römischen Kaiserzeit entstehen, zumindest ein bisschen näher kennenlernen.

Wir arbeiten in der Veranstaltung mit Übersetzungen. Latein- und Griechischkenntnisse sind somit nicht Voraussetzung.

Dieses Pflichtseminar führt in literaturwissenschaftliches Denken und Arbeiten ein und legt damit das Fundament für das weitere Studium der ostslavischen Literaturen und Kulturen.
Schritt für Schritt entdecken wir, wie Literaturwissenschaft funktioniert – von den grundlegenden Fragen des Fachs bis zu neueren Ansätzen wie Dekonstruktion und Postcolonial Studies. Was ist Literatur? Warum lohnt sich der wissenschaftliche Blick darauf? Was genau wird dabei untersucht? Vorgestellt werden zentrale Gattungen und Genres sowie literaturwissenschaftliche Theorien und Schulen.
Im Mittelpunkt steht die Textanalyse. Studierende entwickeln eigene Fragestellungen und lernen, literarische Texte systematisch zu analysieren: Erzählstrategien, Figurengestaltung, Zeitkonzepte sowie rhetorische Mittel. Am Ende verfügen sie über das methodische Handwerkszeug, um Texte eigenständig zu interpretieren und ihre Deutungen überzeugend zu begründen.
Ein Pflichtmodul für BA Russistik, Russisch Lehramt, Interdisziplinäre Russlandstudien. Der Besuch wird sofort im 1. Semester dringend empfohlen.

Kommentar

Der Troia-Mythos war zuletzt in aller Munde, als Christopher Nolans Film Odyssey die Gemüter bewegte: Elon Musk echauffierte sich über die ethnisch diverse Besetzung des Films und behauptete, Nolan ”pisse auf Homers Grab”. Es entbrannten hitzige Diskussionen nicht nur über den Cast des Films, sondern auch über die von Nolan verwendete Übersetzung. Auch sonst wurde viel über die Angemessenheit der Verfilmung gegenüber den antiken Texten debattiert, vor allem gegenüber Homers Odyssee . Aber was ist dran an den antiken Troia-Stoffen? Wir wollen uns den ältesten Zeugnissen dieses vielleicht berühmtesten aller Stoffe widmen und dabei den verschiedenen Bedürfnissen der Teilnehmenden gerecht werden: Gräzist*innen und Latinist*innen kommen mit Textarbeit an Homer, Catull, Vergil und anderen auf ihre Kosten, Teilnehmende ohne Kenntnisse der Alten Sprachen arbeiten mit Übersetzungen der griechischen und lateinischen Texte sowie mit Forschungsliteratur.

Das Seminar liefert eine Einführung in literatur- und kulturwissenschaftliche Themen und Fragen, die im Studiengang Literaturen und Kulturen in Theorie und Praxis vertiefend studiert werden können. Dies geschieht anhand eines zentralen Themas (Odysseus von der Antike bis heute), das anhand verschiedener historischer und systematischer Schwerpunkte vertieft wird. Dabei wollen wir die Vielfalt der am Studiengang beteiligten Literaturen und Kulturen und zugleich Grundlagen literaturwissenschaftlichen Arbeitens kennenlernen.

Voraussetzung

Literatur

Der parallele Besuch der Ringvorlesung.

Außerdem können Sie Homers Odyssee lesen, am besten in zweisprachiger Edition (Odyssee. Übers. von Roland Hampe. Stuttgart 2010, Reclam) oder zumindest in einer der beiden Ausgaben: Homer: Odyssee. Übers. von Kurt Steinmann. München, Zürich 2016; Homer: Odyssee. Übers. von Wolfgang Schadewaldt. Reinbek bei Hamburg 1999.

Als ersten Einblick in literaturwissenschaftliches Arbeiten, auch jenseits einzelner Philologien, empfehle ich einen Blick in: Oliver Lubrich, Thomas Nehrlich: Lesen lernen. In dieser Vorlesung werden zwei Lehrveranstaltungen kombiniert: Die Ringvorlesung Literatur und zusätzlich, als kleiner Bestandteil jeder einzelnen Sitzung, die akademischen Kompetenzen. Das sind die Arbeitstechniken, die Sie für Ihr Studium benötigen (wie Referate halten, Protokolle oder Hausarbeiten schreiben). Die Vermittlung der akademischen Grundkompetenzen ist auf alle Sitzungen der Vorlesung verteilt. Die Dozentin/der Dozent der jeweiligen Sitzung entscheidet, wie sie vermittelt werden, z.B. im Rahmen der Sitzung oder am Ende.
Dass in dieser Vorlesung zwei Lehrveranstaltungen kombiniert werden, bedeutet auch, dass Sie zwei Leistungsnachweise (Testate, je 3 Leistungspunkte) ablegen müssen. Testate sind unbenotete Prüfungsnebenleistungen, also Prüfungsleistungen, die nicht am Ende einer Veranstaltung abgelegt werden, sondern im Rahmen des Semesters (wie ein Protokoll oder ein Referat).
Das Testat für die Ringvorlesung legen Sie folgendermaßen ab:
Sie übernehmen gemeinsam mit maximal vier anderen Teilnehmerinnen/Teilnehmern der Vorlesung ein gemeinsam und arbeitsteilig anzufertigendes ausführliches Protokoll zu einer Sitzung der Vorlesung. Überlegen Sie, welche Sitzung Sie besonders interessiert und tragen Sie sich, um ein Protokoll zu dieser Sitzung zu schreiben, im Moodle (der Internet-Lernplattform der Uni Potsdam) ein. Sie erfahren rechtzeitig, wann Sie sich für ein Protokoll eintragen können und wie Sie es schreiben sollen. Auch ein Musterprotokoll werden wir nach Möglichkeit im Moodlekurs bereitstellen.
Das Testat für die akademischen Grundkompetenzen legen Sie folgendermaßen ab:
Das Testat zu den akademischen Grundkompetenzen umfasst ein 5-seitiges Exposé für eine Hausarbeit (mit Gliederung, Entwicklung der Fragestellung, Literaturverzeichnis). Dieses Exposé zu einer Hausarbeit soll sich auf ein Thema aus einer Sitzung der Ringvorlesung beziehen (also z.B. Autorschaft, Literatur und Geschlecht oder Gattungen). Dieses Exposé wird am 03.02. der Dozentin/dem Dozentin der jeweilige Sitzung 15–20 Minuten lang präsentiert. Beispiel: Sie finden ›Literatur und Geschlecht‹ (von Prof. J. Klinger am 25.11.) besonders interessant. Sie melden sich in Moodle für die Gruppe ›Exposé‹ zu ›Literatur und Geschlecht‹ an (max. 5 Studierende). Am 03.02., im Zeitslot der letzten Sitzung (in dem keine Ringvorlesung mehr stattfindet), präsentieren Sie bei Prof. Judith Klinger 15–20 Minuten lang das Exposé zu einer Hausarbeit zum Thema ›Literatur und Geschlecht‹.

Kurz zusammengefasst: Der Leistungsnachweis besteht aus zwei Teilen (je 3 LP):

(1) Protokoll zu den Inhalten der Vorlesung: In Gruppen von jeweils maximal 5 Studierenden wird ein gemeinsam und arbeitsteilig anzufertigendes ausführliches Protokoll zu einer Sitzung angefertigt. Dieses wird von den jeweiligen Vortragenden korrigiert und auf Moodle der gesamten Vorlesung zur Verfügung gestellt.

(2) Hausarbeitsentwurf = ein Exposé für eine Hausarbeit (mit Gliederung, Entwicklung der Fragestellung, Bibliographie, ggf. mit weiteren Hilfsmitteln) zu einem Thema, das in einer Sitzung behandelt wurde. Das Protokoll wird vorbereitet und in der letzten Sitzung in einer Kurzpräsentation (15–20 Minuten) erläutert. Für jede Sitzung könnten sich maximal fünf Leute eintragen.

Dieses Pflichtseminar führt in literaturwissenschaftliches Denken und Arbeiten ein und legt damit das Fundament für das weitere Studium der ostslavischen Literaturen und Kulturen.
Schritt für Schritt entdecken wir, wie Literaturwissenschaft funktioniert – von den grundlegenden Fragen des Fachs bis zu neueren Ansätzen wie Dekonstruktion und Postcolonial Studies. Was ist Literatur? Warum lohnt sich der wissenschaftliche Blick darauf? Was genau wird dabei untersucht? Vorgestellt werden zentrale Gattungen und Genres sowie literaturwissenschaftliche Theorien und Schulen.
Im Mittelpunkt steht die Textanalyse. Studierende entwickeln eigene Fragestellungen und lernen, literarische Texte systematisch zu analysieren: Erzählstrategien, Figurengestaltung, Zeitkonzepte sowie rhetorische Mittel. Am Ende verfügen sie über das methodische Handwerkszeug, um Texte eigenständig zu interpretieren und ihre Deutungen überzeugend zu begründen.
Ein Pflichtmodul für BA Russistik, Russisch Lehramt, Interdisziplinäre Russlandstudien. Der Besuch wird sofort im 1. Semester dringend empfohlen.

Kommentar

To read ‘in context’ one has to develop a double vision that may at times be dizzying but in the long run immensely enriching. For contextual reading must attend to two different dimensions of a text: the moment of writing and the moment of reading. When we discuss Shakespeare’s tragedies, for instance, we are bound to reconstruct (some aspects of) the historical situation in which these texts were produced, to which they respond and to which they also contribute in whatever tiny way; but whether we are or are not aware of it, our reading will also always be informed by our own historical situation and its specific problems, aspirations or anxieties.

In our seminar, where we will read and discuss three of Shakespeare’s most canonical tragedies – Macbeth , Othello , and Hamlet – we will try to develop an expertise in reading with the double vision that contextual analysis requires.

In 2009, then Prime Minister Stephen Harper declared that Canada ”ha[s] no history of colonialism. So we have all the things that many people admire about the great powers but none of the things that threaten or bother them” (O’Keefe). This statement is not only inaccurate but actively disavows Canada’s long and ongoing history of genocide, including violence against Black and Indigenous people. It speaks to a larger attempt of silencing that echoes in master narratives of Canada as the ”North Star;” as a non-violent, postcolonial nation-state; and as a model of immigration and multiculturalism, often constructed by means of contrasting Canada with the United States.

This class serves as an introduction to Black Canadian studies in which we will engage with Black Canadian literatures, film, and art in relation to historical and present-day contexts of Black lives and political struggles in Canada. The diverse works of authors such as Dionne Brand, David Chariandy, Austin Clarke, and M. NourbeSe Philip, among others, critically interrogate the ways in which histories of settler colonialism, enslavement, and displacement continue to inform Canada’s present. While these authors challenge many of the above-mentioned Canadian master narratives, they also imagine possible forms of belonging and ways of being in the world for Black people in Canada that defy pervasive anti-Blackness and unfreedom and as such formulate urgent appeals for a different way forward.

Please take care of yourself when reading these texts. Feel free to get in touch with any queries, for instance if you would like to take this class but worry about the readings’ contents.

Course format : Students are asked to complete weekly readings and participate actively in class discussions. They should be willing to engage with different text forms and genres, including prose, poetry, drama and film as well as theoretical texts. Our discussions will demand careful attention to situated knowledge (production) and the role of the reader/viewer as a co-producer of meaning. Students should be ready to approach the topics with open-mindedness in order to challenge and critically rethink their own assumptions, and to join in a shared, respectful process of reflection and learning.

This course sets out to trace one of the most enduring and successful genres of popular culture: Horror. Participants will cover early American predecessors of what we know understand as horror and cosmic horror, look at the construction of monsters via the example of the zombie, learn about the psychoanalytical theory on ‘womenly’ anatomy as the abject, and the ideological entanglements of fictional psychopathic killers. Note that the canon covers a range from ca. 1820s – today.

Participants will consider academic debates on how horror highlights and enhances fears of a wider public, and responds to shifts in power and ideological currents, via works from critical race theory, feminist psychoanalysis, and cultural Marxism.

Please note that 1) the literature and movie examples in this course feature a variety of violent, and potentially disturbing, images. If you do not want to expose yourself to such triggers, this is understandable, yet the genre depends on precisely this affect, and thus these passages cannot be censored out. Please choose a different course; there is no shortage of courses for this module. 2) the primary/literary texts are comparatively easy to read; correspondingly, participants are expected to keep up with the reading for the course. Students who are unwilling to read the assigned literature may not be able to submit an essay that meets the standards of the course.

Violence is omnipresent in anglophone literatures and cultures today. And also historically, it lies at the heart of many foundational myths that constitute national identities. In fact, violence has been variously described as an inherent part of the formation of nation states. Today, violence has lost most of its beneficial ascriptions and its rejection has become the epitome of civilization. Nonetheless, the spectacle of violence fascinates today as much as it did in the past (a phenomenon which perpetually startles scholars). But what really is violence? And what role do aesthetics play in the meaning and understanding of violence? A first and crucial part of this seminar will be to distinguish conceptually between the different forms of violence. The course will then attempt to trace violence(s) as cultural performance and practice through various stages of history. Our seminar readings and discussions will focus on the different understandings and representations of violence in texts from different historic periods and explore the politics and aesthetics of such representations.

This course will examine queer literature from the Caribbean and its diasporas and consider what kind of queer theory we might need to understand queer lives, experiences and practices in the region. In our own global North context, the contemporary Caribbean is more often associated with rampant homophobia than queer culture; similarly, queerness and queer cultures are sometimes represented as overwhelmingly white. In this course, we will examine queer writing from the Caribbean alongside its cultural and political contexts – including the ways in which it may challenge both homophobia in the Caribbean and limited, stereotypical understandings of the Caribbean abroad, particularly in the USA and Europe – in addition to grappling with questions around how queer theory translates to and emerges from Caribbean and diasporic contexts.

Across oral traditions worldwide, the riddle has functioned as one of humanity's oldest and most enduring narrative forms: not merely a game of wit, but a structured dramatic experience in which concealment and revelation are held in exquisite tension. From the riddle contests of ancient Mesopotamia to the trickster puzzles of West African storytelling, from the kennings of Norse skalds to the riddling creatures of Greek myth, oral cultures have always understood that to pose a riddle is not simply to ask a question — it is to build a world that contains its own hidden key, and to place another human being inside it. This course will introduce its students to the basics of oral storytelling through one of its most popular and well travelled genres--the riddle narratives.

Kommentar

Wolframs ‚Willehalm' (um 1210/20) ist eines der erfolgreichsten Epen des Mittelalters: Nicht nur überliefern 81 (!) teils bebilderte Handschriften dieses Epos, es entstanden auch Vorgeschichten und Fortsetzungen dieser Erzählung von Krieg, Liebe, Glaube und Verwandtschaft. Diese Aufzählung deutet an, dass es im ‚Willehalm' nicht nur um Krieg geht, sondern vor allem um all' die Fragen, die mit Krieg zusammenhängen: Was sind die Gründe dafür, dass Menschen einander töten, kann das Töten auf dem Schlachtfeld Ehre verschaffen? Was wären Alternativen zum oder Auswegen aus dem Krieg, was folgt aus ihm, vor allem für jene, die mit beiden Kriegsparteien verbunden sind und (wie) kann es gelingen, auch unter den Bedingungen von Krieg irgendwie menschlich zu bleiben? Wolfram von Eschenbach setzt sich mit diesen auf erschreckende Weise aktuellen Fragen auf komplexe Weise auseinander und verzichtet an vielen Stellen auf eindeutige Antworten. Wie lesen Auszüge aus Wolframs großer Erzählung vom Krieg, behandeln auf der Grundlage seiner altfranzösischen Vorlage seine Bearbeitungstendenzen und setzen uns mit den Handschriftenillustrationen auseinander.

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Gegenwartsliteratur steht heutzutage in einem prekären Verhältnis zu anderen (Freizeit-)Medien. Anhand eines ambitionierten Fallbeispiels wollen wir untersuchen, wie das Buch-Medium auf unsere multimediale Gegenwart reagiert. »Miami Punk« (2019) von Juan S. Guse liest sich wie ein Videospiel (Moll/Weber 2023) und erzählt von Bewohner:innen einer unserer Realität entrückten Stadt, die von einer schleichenden Naturkatastrophe gezeichnet wurde. Zusätzlich wuchert »Miami Punk« über die klassische Romanform hinaus: als im Buch versteckte URLs, als Social-Media-Accounts, insbesondere als Hörspiel-Spiel »Miami Punk: The complete DLC«.

Schlagwörter: Videospiel-Nostalgie, Glitches, Bullshit Jobs, Open World, Naturkatastrophe, experimentelle Gegenwartsliteratur

Die Vorlesung will einen ersten Einblick in wichtige Stationen der deutschsprachigen Literatur des – so der Historiker Hobsbawm – „langen 19. Jahrhunderts" geben. Gemeint ist damit eine bei allen Veränderungen erkennbare Kontinuität von Problemen und Themen aus der Zeit von 1789 (Beginn der Französischen Revolution) bis 1914 (Ausbruch des Ersten Weltkriegs). In der Vorlesung werden wir wichtige Aspekte der romantischen Literatur aufarbeiten, um dann die Zeit des Vormärz und des Nachmärz, die man auch als erste Phase des „Zeitalter des Realismus" (Stockinger) bezeichnet hat, zu verfolgen, das den Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung bilden wird. Am Ende der Vorlesung gehen wir auf Spielarten der Moderne seit etwa 1890 ein.

Das Ziel dieser Vorlesung ist es, wichtige Bedingungen und Eigenheiten der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts überblicksartig zu vergegenwärtigen. Neben grundlegenden Charakteristika der Epoche (emblematisches Weltbild, Affektenlehre, Neustoizismus, Eschatologie, Konfessionalisierung etc.) werden drei Bereiche im Vordergrund stehen: Erstens gilt es, zentrale Werke und ihre Autoren im Zusammenhang mit der Reformpoetik und ihren Institutionen kennenzulernen. Dabei werden auch konkrete Textbeispiele – vorrangig aus dem deutschsprachigen Bereich, jedoch mit Ausblicken auf die Neulateinische Dichtung – vorgestellt. Zweitens sollen theoretische Aspekte in den Blick genommen werden, darunter neben den beliebtesten Gattungsmodellen und ihrer Normierung auch die rhetorischen und poetologischen Grundlagen zeitgenössischer Dichtungskonzeptionen. Drittens wird es darum gehen, die im deutschen Sprachraum entstandene Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts nach stilistischen, thematischen und historischen Kriterien im europäischen Kontext zu verorten, um ein problemorientiertes Epochenverständnis zu vermitteln.

Die intendierte Verdrängung des Alten durch das Neue gehört zum Selbstverständnis der Moderne. Meist wird diese lineare Überbietungserzählung einer kontinuierlichen kulturellen Verbesserung auf den menschheitlich-teleologischen Optimismus der Aufklärung zurückgeführt, der das zyklische Geschichtsverständnis der Antike ersetzt habe. Im Seminar werden wir uns mit vielfältig konzipierten Fortschrittserzählungen von der Antike über die Aufklärung bis hin zur aktuell verbreiteten Quarterlife Crisis befassen und durch möglichst genaue Lektüren versuchen, das Phantom des Fortschritts in seiner zeitbedingten Widersprüchlichkeit zu verstehen. Es wird deutlich werden, dass der scheinbar unbeirrbare Fortschrittsglaube der Moderne nicht erst in unserer Gegenwart mit ihren populären Untergangserzählungen und auch nicht erst seit Nietzsche, Adorno und Horkheimer, sondern bereits in der entscheidenden begriffsgeschichtlichen Phase der Aufklärung äußerst fragwürdig erscheint - und dadurch zeitübergreifend künstlerisch-intellektuelles Potential freisetzt.

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Zur deutschsprachigen Reiseliteratur des 14. Jahrhunderts gehören sowohl rein fiktionale Texte, die neben Berichten von Wundervölkern auch legendarische Figuren, wie den Priesterkönig Johannes, in den Fokus setzen, als auch literarisch überarbeitete Berichte von tatsächlich stattgefundenen (Pilger-)Reisen ins Heilige Land. Wir werden uns in dem Semester mit zwei Reisetexten beschäftigen (die ‚Reisen' des Jean de Mandeville, in der Bearbeitung von Otto von Diemeringen und Marco Polos Reisebericht in der mitteldeutschen Bearbeitung). Im Mittelpunkt unserer Diskussionen werden Fragen der Fremderfahrung, Identität, der kulturellen Konzeption des Reisens in der Literatur der Vormoderne und die Frage nach den Formen des Wissens stehen, die diese Texte präsentieren.

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Wolframs ‚Willehalm' (um 1210/20) ist eines der erfolgreichsten Epen des Mittelalters: Nicht nur überliefern 81 (!) teils bebilderte Handschriften dieses Epos, es entstanden auch Vorgeschichten und Fortsetzungen dieser Erzählung von Krieg, Liebe, Glaube und Verwandtschaft. Diese Aufzählung deutet an, dass es im ‚Willehalm' nicht nur um Krieg geht, sondern vor allem um all' die Fragen, die mit Krieg zusammenhängen: Was sind die Gründe dafür, dass Menschen einander töten, kann das Töten auf dem Schlachtfeld Ehre verschaffen? Was wären Alternativen zum oder Auswegen aus dem Krieg, was folgt aus ihm, vor allem für jene, die mit beiden Kriegsparteien verbunden sind und (wie) kann es gelingen, auch unter den Bedingungen von Krieg irgendwie menschlich zu bleiben? Wolfram von Eschenbach setzt sich mit diesen auf erschreckende Weise aktuellen Fragen auf komplexe Weise auseinander und verzichtet an vielen Stellen auf eindeutige Antworten. Wie lesen Auszüge aus Wolframs großer Erzählung vom Krieg, behandeln auf der Grundlage seiner altfranzösischen Vorlage seine Bearbeitungstendenzen und setzen uns mit den Handschriftenillustrationen auseinander.

Das Ziel des Seminars ist, anhand ausgewählter Gedichte aus verschiedenen Jahrhunderten Einblicke in die Formenvielfalt deutschsprachiger Lyrik zu erhalten und Grundkompetenzen für die Analyse lyrischer Gedichte zu erwerben und zu erproben. Zentrale Begriffe und Kategorien für die Beschreibung von Gedichten wie Vers, Rhythmus, Metapher oder Reim werden im Seminar eingeführt und an konkreten Gedichten erläutert. Drei methodisch unterschiedlich vorgehende Gedichtinterpretationen werden als Modellanalysen diskutiert.

Der Aufbau des Seminars gliedert sich in vier Analyseebenen von Lyrik: die lexikalisch-syntaktische Ebene, klanglich-rhythmische Ebene, die bildlich-metaphorische Ebene und die graphisch-visuelle Ebene. Im Verlauf des Seminars sind sechs Seminaraufgaben während einer Sitzung erfolgreich zu bearbeiten (unbenotet).

Die im Seminar erworbenen Kompetenzen werden im letzten Drittel des Seminars individuell getestet (unbenotet): Alle Teilnehmenden wählen aus einem vorgegebenen Textkorpus ein Gedicht aus, zu dem sie eine Analyse verfassen (drei Seiten). Diese wird anonym von einer anderen Person hinsichtlich ihrer Plausibilität kommentiert. Einige der Analysen werden am Semesterende gemeinsam besprochen.

Kommentar

Unterstreichen, markieren, kommentieren, strukturieren – es gibt viele Formen, Texte zu bearbeiten und mit zusätzlichen Informationen auszuzeichen. Diese Formen können Annotation genannt werden. Im Seminar steht also eine Methode im Zentrum, die Sie wahrscheinlich bereits zur Bearbeitung von Primär- und Sekundärtexten nutzen, die aber im Enprodukt Ihrer wissenschaftlichen Arbeit z.B. in Form einer Hausarbeit versteckt bleibt. Wir wollen diese Methode genauer unter die Lupe nehmen und den Prozess der Textbearbeitung und damit der Grundlage für die Argumentation und die Interpretation literarischer Texte transparent machen. Dafür fragen wir uns zuerst, was Annotationen sind, welche Ziele sie verfolgen und wie bei der Annotation vorgegangen wird.

Wir wollen darauf aufbauend praktisch arbeiten. Das heißt, wir annotieren Texte gemeinsam, diskutieren die Annotationen und gehen der Frage nach, wann das Verständnis einer Textstelle von unserer Interpretation abhängt und wann nicht.

Zuletzt stehen ihre Fragestellungen/Themen im Fokus, die Sie in Gruppen durch die Methode der Annotation bearbeiten.

Die intendierte Verdrängung des Alten durch das Neue gehört zum Selbstverständnis der Moderne. Meist wird diese lineare Überbietungserzählung einer kontinuierlichen kulturellen Verbesserung auf den menschheitlich-teleologischen Optimismus der Aufklärung zurückgeführt, der das zyklische Geschichtsverständnis der Antike ersetzt habe. Im Seminar werden wir uns mit vielfältig konzipierten Fortschrittserzählungen von der Antike über die Aufklärung bis hin zur aktuell verbreiteten Quarterlife Crisis befassen und durch möglichst genaue Lektüren versuchen, das Phantom des Fortschritts in seiner zeitbedingten Widersprüchlichkeit zu verstehen. Es wird deutlich werden, dass der scheinbar unbeirrbare Fortschrittsglaube der Moderne nicht erst in unserer Gegenwart mit ihren populären Untergangserzählungen und auch nicht erst seit Nietzsche, Adorno und Horkheimer, sondern bereits in der entscheidenden begriffsgeschichtlichen Phase der Aufklärung äußerst fragwürdig erscheint - und dadurch zeitübergreifend künstlerisch-intellektuelles Potential freisetzt.

Kommentar

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Gerade Frauen waren politisch in ihrer Publizistik. Mit welchen Themen haben sie sich beschäftigt, unter welchen Bedingungen, welche publizistischen Formate und Tricks haben sie genutzt um ihre Stimmen hörbar zu machen? Manche der Texte von politischen Publizistischen aus dem 19. jahrhundert scheinen uns in ihren Forderungen und auch in ihrem Stil modern und brandaktuell, wirken aber heutzutage in der Öffentlichkeit unter Goethes et al. Sockel begraben zu liegen. Drei zu ihren Lebzeiten sehr bekannte Publizistinnen (Huber, Assing und v. Arnim) werden wir kennenlernen. Wir werden diese Texte entdecken, ihre interessanten Ideen kennenlernen und sie gemeinsam wiederbeleben, denn die Publizistinnen von damals sind in ihrer Unverzagtheit und in ihrem Widerstand gegen rechte Kräfte Vorbilder für heute.

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Gegenwartsliteratur steht heutzutage in einem prekären Verhältnis zu anderen (Freizeit-)Medien. Anhand eines ambitionierten Fallbeispiels wollen wir untersuchen, wie das Buch-Medium auf unsere multimediale Gegenwart reagiert. »Miami Punk« (2019) von Juan S. Guse liest sich wie ein Videospiel (Moll/Weber 2023) und erzählt von Bewohner:innen einer unserer Realität entrückten Stadt, die von einer schleichenden Naturkatastrophe gezeichnet wurde. Zusätzlich wuchert »Miami Punk« über die klassische Romanform hinaus: als im Buch versteckte URLs, als Social-Media-Accounts, insbesondere als Hörspiel-Spiel »Miami Punk: The complete DLC«.

Bitte besorgen Sie sich vor Seminarbeginn die dieses Jahr im S. Fischer Verlag erschienene Taschenbuchausgabe von »Miami Punk«. Alle weiteren Medien werden bereitgestellt.

Schlagwörter: Videospiel-Nostalgie, Glitches, Bullshit Jobs, Open World, Naturkatastrophe, experimentelle Gegenwartsliteratur

Kommentar

Das Ende der DDR nutzten einige konservative westdeutsche Intellektuelle, aber auch ostdeutsche Autor:innen, die die DDR verlassen hatten, für ein Scherbengericht über die Literatur des untergegangen Landes. Eine pauschale Abwertung als „Gesinnungskitsch" konnte sich jedoch langfristig nicht durchsetzen: Auch mehr als 30 Jahre nach der Wiedervereinigung ist die DDR-Literatur keineswegs in Vergessenheit geraten, sondern wird weiterhin geschätzt, gelesen und erforscht.
Dabei hat sich eine differenzierte und kulturhistorisch informierte Perspektive etabliert: Der DDR-Literatur, hier zunächst heuristisch verstanden als Korpus literarischer Texte, die zwischen 1949 und 1989 von in der DDR sozialisierten und/oder dort lebenden Autor:innen verfasst wurden, kommt in der deutschsprachigen Literaturgeschichte des 20. Jahrhunderts ein besonderer Status zu: Zwar eng mit der westdeutschen Literaturgeschichte verflochten, zeichnet sich die DDR-Literatur durch spezifische Entstehungs-, Publikations- und Rezeptionskontexte aus, die sich deutlich von der Bundesrepublik unterscheiden. In diesem Sinne wollen wir im Seminar ausgewählte Texte wichtiger DDR-Autor:innen (u.a. Jurek Becker, Volker Braun, Franz Fühmann, Uwe Johnson, Sarah Kirsch, Brigitte Reimann, Christa Wolf) lesen, sie in literarische Traditionen und Diskussion einordnen und im Zusammenhang kulturpolitischer Stationen und Programmatiken (Formalismus-Debatte, Sozialistischer Realismus, Bitterfelder Weg, Kahlschlagplenum, Biermann-Ausbürgerung, Glasnost-Kulturpolitik) betrachten, um so ein angemessenes Verständnis und literarhistorisch fundierte Deutungsperspektiven zu erarbeiten.

Begleitend findet am 28./29. Januar 2027 am Potsdamer Einstein Forum der Workshop „Der Literaturbetrieb der DDR. Institutionen, Netzwerke und Strukturen" statt; der Besuch ausgewählter Vorträge ist Teil des Seminars.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Zur deutschsprachigen Reiseliteratur des 14. Jahrhunderts gehören sowohl rein fiktionale Texte, die neben Berichten von Wundervölkern auch legendarische Figuren, wie den Priesterkönig Johannes, in den Fokus setzen, als auch literarisch überarbeitete Berichte von tatsächlich stattgefundenen (Pilger-)Reisen ins Heilige Land. Wir werden uns in dem Semester mit zwei Reisetexten beschäftigen (die ‚Reisen' des Jean de Mandeville, in der Bearbeitung von Otto von Diemeringen und Marco Polos Reisebericht in der mitteldeutschen Bearbeitung). Im Mittelpunkt unserer Diskussionen werden Fragen der Fremderfahrung, Identität, der kulturellen Konzeption des Reisens in der Literatur der Vormoderne und die Frage nach den Formen des Wissens stehen, die diese Texte präsentieren.

Der Troia-Mythos war zuletzt in aller Munde, als Christopher Nolans Film Odyssey die Gemüter bewegte: Elon Musk echauffierte sich über die ethnisch diverse Besetzung des Films und behauptete, Nolan ”pisse auf Homers Grab”. Es entbrannten hitzige Diskussionen nicht nur über den Cast des Films, sondern auch über die von Nolan verwendete Übersetzung. Auch sonst wurde viel über die Angemessenheit der Verfilmung gegenüber den antiken Texten debattiert, vor allem gegenüber Homers Odyssee . Aber was ist dran an den antiken Troia-Stoffen? Wir wollen uns den ältesten Zeugnissen dieses vielleicht berühmtesten aller Stoffe widmen und dabei den verschiedenen Bedürfnissen der Teilnehmenden gerecht werden: Gräzist*innen und Latinist*innen kommen mit Textarbeit an Homer, Catull, Vergil und anderen auf ihre Kosten, Teilnehmende ohne Kenntnisse der Alten Sprachen arbeiten mit Übersetzungen der griechischen und lateinischen Texte sowie mit Forschungsliteratur.

Die Lektüre von Ps.-Lukians Der Esel (#νος) führt in eine unterhaltsame und zugleich sprachlich anspruchsvolle Erzählwelt der griechischen Prosa. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein Mann, der durch eine unglückliche Verwandlung zum Esel wird und seine abenteuerlichen Erlebnisse aus der Perspektive eines Tieres schildert. Die Verbindung von Humor, grotesken Situationen, Alltagsschilderungen und menschlichen Schwächen macht den Text zu einer besonders reizvollen Lektüre.

Im Zentrum des Kurses steht die intensive Lektüre des griechischen Originaltextes. Dabei werden die sprachlichen Besonderheiten der kaiserzeitlichen griechischen Prosa ebenso berücksichtigt wie die für die Lektüre relevanten grammatischen und syntaktischen Strukturen. Die Studierenden erweitern und festigen ihren Wortschatz und gewinnen Sicherheit im Übersetzen längerer zusammenhängender Passagen.

Inhaltliche Schwerpunkte:

- Lektüre und Übersetzung ausgewählter bzw. zusammenhängender Abschnitte aus dem griechischen Original
- Festigung und Vertiefung der altgriechischen Grammatik und Syntax
- Erweiterung des griechischen Wortschatzes anhand eines zusammenhängenden Prosatextes
- Besonderheiten der griechischen Prosa der Kaiserzeit
- Vergleich mit Apuleius' Metamorphosen
- Einordnung der Schrift in die antike Roman- und Unterhaltungsliteratur
- Fragen nach Autorschaft und Überlieferung: Warum wird die Schrift heute als Ps.-Lukian bezeichnet?

Arbeitsweise:

Die Kursarbeit verbindet intensive Textlektüre, Übersetzung und Interpretation. Schwierige Passagen werden gemeinsam grammatisch und syntaktisch analysiert; zugleich soll die Lektüre nicht bei der sprachlichen Entschlüsselung stehen bleiben. Erzählweise, Figuren, Motive und die komischen Elemente des Textes werden ebenso untersucht wie sein Verhältnis zu anderen antiken Erzählungen.

Kommentar

Der Troia-Mythos war zuletzt in aller Munde, als Christopher Nolans Film Odyssey die Gemüter bewegte: Elon Musk echauffierte sich über die ethnisch diverse Besetzung des Films und behauptete, Nolan ”pisse auf Homers Grab”. Es entbrannten hitzige Diskussionen nicht nur über den Cast des Films, sondern auch über die von Nolan verwendete Übersetzung. Auch sonst wurde viel über die Angemessenheit der Verfilmung gegenüber den antiken Texten debattiert, vor allem gegenüber Homers Odyssee . Aber was ist dran an den antiken Troia-Stoffen? Wir wollen uns den ältesten Zeugnissen dieses vielleicht berühmtesten aller Stoffe widmen und dabei den verschiedenen Bedürfnissen der Teilnehmenden gerecht werden: Gräzist*innen und Latinist*innen kommen mit Textarbeit an Homer, Catull, Vergil und anderen auf ihre Kosten, Teilnehmende ohne Kenntnisse der Alten Sprachen arbeiten mit Übersetzungen der griechischen und lateinischen Texte sowie mit Forschungsliteratur.

Kommentar

Die Lektüre von Ps.-Lukians Der Esel (#νος) führt in eine unterhaltsame und zugleich sprachlich anspruchsvolle Erzählwelt der griechischen Prosa. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein Mann, der durch eine unglückliche Verwandlung zum Esel wird und seine abenteuerlichen Erlebnisse aus der Perspektive eines Tieres schildert. Die Verbindung von Humor, grotesken Situationen, Alltagsschilderungen und menschlichen Schwächen macht den Text zu einer besonders reizvollen Lektüre.

Im Zentrum des Kurses steht die intensive Lektüre des griechischen Originaltextes. Dabei werden die sprachlichen Besonderheiten der kaiserzeitlichen griechischen Prosa ebenso berücksichtigt wie die für die Lektüre relevanten grammatischen und syntaktischen Strukturen. Die Studierenden erweitern und festigen ihren Wortschatz und gewinnen Sicherheit im Übersetzen längerer zusammenhängender Passagen.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Im Seminar wird anhand ausgewählter Filmbeispiele die Befragung der Darstellungsweisen und der damit verbundenen Deutungen jüdischer Geschichte und Kultur nachgegangen, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der geschichtlichen Kontexte, in den die Filme entstanden sind.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

Vergil, Aeneis – Ovid, Metamorphosen

In dieser Übung werden ausgewählte Passagen aus Vergils Aeneis und Ovids Metamorphosen gelesen und übersetzt.

Die Veranstaltung führt in die Sprache und den Stil des lateinischen Epos sowie in die Grundlagen der Metrik des epischen Hexameters ein. Ein weiterer Schwerpunkt liegt auf der Erarbeitung und Festigung des poetischen Grundwortschatzes.

Die kontinuierliche selbstständige Aneignung und Wiederholung sowohl des lateinischen Grundwortschatzes als auch des poetischen Basiswortschatzes ist eine wesentliche Voraussetzung für den erfolgreichen Abschluss der Veranstaltung, insbesondere im Hinblick auf die abschließende Übersetzungsklausur ohne Lexikon.

Voraussetzung

Voraussetzung für die erfolgreiche Teilnahme an der Lektüre sind gesicherte Kenntnisse mindestens auf dem Niveau des Eingangssprachtests.

In der Lektüreübung werden ausgewählte Passagen aus Caesars Bellum Gallicum sowie aus verschiedenen Reden Ciceros übersetzt. Die Veranstaltung führt systematisch in die Sprache und den Stil beider Autoren ein. Dabei werden zentrale grammatische Phänomene der lateinischen Sprache – etwa Kasuslehre, Modusgebrauch und Partizipialkonstruktionen – wiederholt, vertieft und anhand der Lektüre eingeübt.

Voraussetzung für den erfolgreichen Besuch der Veranstaltung ist die kursbegleitende selbstständige Festigung des lateinischen Wortschatzes.

Kommentar

Die Aeneis galt seit ihrem Erscheinen als Klassiker der lateinischen Literatur und gehörte in Antike und Mittelalter zum Kanon der in den Schulen behandelten Texte. Sie lässt ihre Leser tief in den Gründungsmythos Roms eintauchen und spiegelt in die (scheinbar) vergangenen mythischen Geschichten raffiniert Ereignisse und Gestalten aus Vergils Gegenwart ein. Dadurch schuf der Autor – unter Wahrung der seit Homer geltenden Gattungskonventionen – ein völlig neuartiges Epos.

Im Unterschied zu der Lektüreübung LAT_BA_005 (Ovid/Vergil) erfolgt in dieser Veranstaltung eine vertiefte, vor allem inhaltliche Auseinandersetzung mit den meistgelesenen Passagen des Werkes. Das Ziel ist ein Gesamtüberblick über alle 12 Bücher und die Interpretation der Schlüsselszenen.

Diese Veranstaltung dient sowohl als Seminar als auch als Lektürekurs für die Module LAT_BA_007/015 und LAT_MA_003 und richtet sich daher an alle fortgeschrittenen Lateinstudierenden, im Bachelor wie im Master.

Gemeinsam werden wir Varros Schrift De re rustica lesen, analysieren und interpretieren. Dabei handelt es sich um den lateinischen Text, der Gegenstand des Nachwuchsforums Latein im Frühjahr 2027 an der HU Berlin sein soll. Die Teilnahme am Nachwuchsforum bildet also den (selbstverständlich freiwilligen) Höhepunkt und Abschluss dieses Seminars.

Stanislaw Lem (1921–2006) gehört zu den bekanntesten polnischen Autor:innen des 20. Jahrhunderts. Seine Werke, die zwischen Technikdiskurs, Philosophie, Utopie, Satire und Groteske changieren, wurden in zahlreiche Sprachen übersetzt und vielfach verfilmt. Lem selbst bezeichnete seine Literatur als „wissenschaftliche Fantastik".

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in den Literaturkosmos von Stanislaw Lem. Dabei beschäftigen wir uns u. a. mit dem frühen, sozialistisch-utopischen Roman Astronauci (1951, Der Planet des Todes / auch: Die Astronauten), dem für Film und Bühne mehrfach adaptierten Klassiker Solaris (1961) und den satirisch-parodistischen Dzienniki gwiazdowe (1957/ 1966/ 1971, Sterntagebücher). Wir diskutieren, inwieweit sich Spuren der Shoah in Lems Werk finden lassen und wo überhaupt die Frauen in seinen Texten sind. Außerdem untersuchen wir, ob sich Lems Poetik, die von einer starken Bildsprache und großer Wortkreativität geprägt ist, in andere Medien (Filme und Comics) sowie in deutsch-sprachige Übersetzungen übertragen lässt. Die Rolle von Science-Fiction im Zeitalter des Kalten Krieges zieht sich dabei als roter Faden durch das gesamte Seminar.

Das Seminar richtet sich an interessierte Bachelorstudierende. Polnischkenntnisse werden nicht vorausgesetzt.

Literatur

Die Seminarlektüre wird zu Beginn des Seminars zur Verfügung gestellt.

Leistungsnachweis

Das Seminar ist als Lektüreseminar konzipiert. Für ein erfolgreiches Bestehen muss neben der wöchentlichen Seminarlektüre sowohl ein kompletter Roman von Stanislaw Lem gelesen und im Seminarplenum diskutiert als auch ein Thesenpapier und Kurzreferat zu einem Sekundärtext angefertigt werden.

Im Seminar werden wir uns mit Theorien und Praktiken des Übersetzens beschäftigen und insbesondere zielkulturell orientierte Übersetzungsstrategien in den Blick nehmen. Für die Untersuchungen interkultureller Übersetzungs- und Vermittlungsarbeit werden wir uns auf kurze Textsorten oder Textausschnitte konzentrieren, die sowohl dem Bereich fiktionaler (u.a. Aphorismus, Comic, Kurzgedicht) als auch non-fiktionaler Texte (Werbetexte, Reportage) zuzuordnen sind.

Wir werden uns in einer Seminarsitzung einen kurzen Überblick über Übersetzende polnischer Literatur verschaffen und in diesem Zusammenhang das Karl-Dedecius-Archiv an der Europa-Universität Viadrina in Frankfurt/Oder besuchen.

Filmkritisches Schreiben: Seminar in Kooperation mit Novinki.de und dem Filmfestival Cottbus

Im Seminar erproben wir uns im anspruchsvollen, aber journalistischen Schreiben von Filmrezensionen. Gegenstand dieser Rezensionen werden Filme sein, die wir bei einem gemeinsamen des Festivals für osteuropäischen Films in Cottbus sehen werden. Die Teilnahme an einer zweitägigen Exkursion dorthin (5.-6. November 2026) ist verpflichtend, für die Exkursion entstehen Kosten in der Höhe von etwa 20 Euro.

Thematisch geben Seminar wie Festival Einblick in aktuelle Erscheinungen und Tendenzen des osteuropäischen Films.

Ein/e professionelle/r Filmkritiker*in wird zu Gast im Seminar sein, und uns bei der Schreibarbeit beraten. Besonders gelungene Rezensionen werden auf der Plattform novinki.de veröffentlicht.

Auch besteht die Möglichkeit, Erfahrung im selbständigen Kuratieren eines Filmabends zu sammeln.

Kommentar

Wer ist der Mann in der slavischen Gegenwartskultur? Und warum sieht er so oft gleich aus? Der Gangsta, der sich im urbanen Raum behauptet. Der Rebell, der gegen Staat und System anschreibt. Und manchmal, überraschend, der Poet, der über Schmerz, Herkunft und Würde spricht.
Maskulinität ist kein stabiles Konzept, sondern ein kulturelles Produkt. Es wird verhandelt in Romanen, Gedichten, Filmen und Songtexten. In diesem Seminar untersuchen wir, welche Männlichkeitsbilder in der slavischen Literatur und Popkultur dominant sind, wie sie konstruiert werden und wo sie brechen. Wir lesen literarische Texte und analysieren popkulturelle Formate – von der Prosa über das Lyrik bis zum Musikvideo – und fragen gemeinsam: Wie wird Männlichkeit erzählt, besungen und inszeniert? Besondere Aufmerksamkeit gilt marginalisierten Stimmen und Gegenentwürfen: Künstler:innen und Autor:innen, die gleichzeitig ethnisch, sozial und sprachlich am Rand stehen und von dort aus sprechen.
Das Seminar verbindet Literaturwissenschaft, Kulturanalyse und Medienkritik.

Kommentar

In der Vorlesung werden wir uns mit sprachlichen Strukturen beschäftigen. Dabei gehen wir von den kleinsten Bestandteilen – den Lauten und Buchstaben – aus und enden beim (einfachen) Satz. In der Fachsprache werden wir also Grundzüge der Phonologie, Graphematik, Morphologie und Syntax kennenlernen. Gemeinhin wird das als Grammatik bezeichnet, die Lexik hingegen wird häufig als der ‚gelernte' Teil (Vokabeln) verstanden – es geht also um die Möglichkeiten und die Grenzen der strukturellen Beschreibung.

Kommentar

Von den Anfängen als junger Vertreter der populares bis zu den Feldzügen in Gallien und den vier Konsulaten repräsentiert Gaius Iulius Caesar eine komplexe Figur der römischen Geschichte. Politisch wie militärisch prägte er die letzte Phase der Republik entscheidend, die infolge des von ihm eröffneten Bürgerkriegs ihr Ende fand. Vor und nach dem berühmten Rubikon-Übergang begründen sowohl die militärischen Erfolge als auch die tiefgreifenden politischen Reformen die Außergewöhnlichkeit Caesars.

Parallel zu seinen Taten bieten die Schriften des Feldherrn eine seltene Perspektive auf sein Verständnis der zeitgenössischen Ereignisse. Doch stellt das Corpus Caesarianum nicht nur einen wesentlichen Teil der Überlieferung über Caesars Handlungen dar, sondern liefert auch Informationen und Deutungen zu Geographie, Geschichte, Ethnographie, Politik und Religion, die im Rahmen geschichtswissenschaftlicher Analyse eingeordnet und kritisch hinterfragt werden können.

Ziel des Seminars ist es, ein Bild Caesars in seinem historischen Kontext zu entwerfen und eine fundierte Quellenkritik an seinen Schriften zu üben. Vorkenntnisse der lateinischen Sprache sind nicht erforderlich. Dennoch wird angestrebt, dass die Teilnehmenden am Ende des Kurses in der Lage sind, sich mithilfe der Übersetzungen am Originaltext zu orientieren.

Kommentar

Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker (FGrHist) gehören zu den wichtigsten Arbeitsinstrumenten der althistorischen und klassisch-philologischen Forschung. Die von Felix Jacoby begründete Sammlung erschließt die Überreste von Geschichtswerken griechischer Autoren, deren Schriften nicht vollständig überliefert sind. Die erhaltenen Fragmente begegnen vor allem als Zitate, Paraphrasen und Exzerpte bei späteren Autoren. Jacobys ursprünglich auf sechs Teile angelegtes Unternehmen wurde von ihm selbst in den Teilen I–III weitgehend abgeschlossen und wird bis heute im Rahmen von Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker. Continued fortgeführt.

Die propädeutische Übung führt in die Arbeit mit diesen fragmentarisch überlieferten Quellen ein. Im Mittelpunkt steht dabei nicht nur die inhaltliche Erschließung einzelner Historiker, sondern auch die Frage, wie mit fragmentarischer Überlieferung wissenschaftlich gearbeitet werden kann. Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele werden die Struktur und Systematik der FGrHist, die verschiedenen Formen der Fragmentüberlieferung sowie die Editions- und Kommentierungspraxis untersucht.

Ein besonderer Schwerpunkt liegt auf dem praktischen Umgang mit den Einträgen der FGrHist bzw. der digitalen Plattform Jacoby Online . Die Studierenden lernen, Fragmente und Testimonien aufzufinden, die Angaben einer Edition zu entschlüsseln, Quellen voneinander zu unterscheiden und die Überlieferungsgeschichte eines Fragments nachzuvollziehen. Dabei werden grundlegende Techniken des wissenschaftlichen Arbeitens eingeübt: bibliographische Recherche, Umgang mit kritischen Editionen und Apparaten, Auswertung griechischer und lateinischer Quellen sowie die sachgerechte Dokumentation von Forschungsliteratur.

Inhaltlich können unter anderem genealogische und mythographische Autoren, Chronographen, Lokalhistoriker und Ethnographen sowie Historiker der hellenistischen und römischen Zeit behandelt werden. Die von Jacoby vorgenommene Gliederung unterscheidet insbesondere zwischen Genealogie und Mythographie (Teil I), Zeitgeschichte (Teil II) sowie Horographie und Ethnographie (Teil III). Die später fortgeführten Teile IV und V widmen sich unter anderem der Biographie und der Geographie.

Die Übung vermittelt damit grundlegende Kompetenzen für die Arbeit mit antiken Quellen und führt zugleich in ein zentrales Problem der Alten Geschichte und Klassischen Philologie ein: die Rekonstruktion verlorener Werke aus fragmentarischer und vielfach indirekter Überlieferung.

Lernziele

Nach erfolgreicher Teilnahme können die Studierenden:

- Aufbau und Systematik der FGrHist erläutern;
- zwischen Fragmenta und Testimonia unterscheiden;
- FGrHist-Zitate und Editionsangaben korrekt lesen und bibliographisch nachweisen;
- die Überlieferung eines historischen Fragments anhand antiker und moderner Quellen nachvollziehen;
- ausgewählte Fragmente unter Berücksichtigung ihres Überlieferungskontextes analysieren;
- kritische Editionen, Kommentare und digitale Ressourcen wie Jacoby Online selbstständig nutzen;
- grundlegende bibliographische und quellenkritische Methoden der Alten Geschichte und Klassischen Philologie anwenden;
- die Möglichkeiten und Grenzen der Rekonstruktion verlorener historiographischer Werke reflektieren.

Arbeitsformen

Die Veranstaltung verbindet kurze einführende Sitzungen mit gemeinsamer Quellenlektüre und praktischen Rechercheübungen. Anhand ausgewählter FGrHist-Einträge werden die einzelnen Arbeitsschritte von der bibliographischen Suche über die Analyse des antiken Testimoniums bis zur Interpretation des rekonstruierten Fragments nachvollzogen. Ergänzend werden kurze Referate oder schriftliche Recherche- und Analyseaufgaben übernommen.

Kommentar

Cicero ist eine der berühmtesten Persönlichkeiten der klassischen Antike. Als Politiker, Anwalt, Schriftsteller, Philosoph, sogar Dichter, prägte er die römische Politik, den öffentlichen Diskurs und die Kultur des 1. Jahrhunderts v.Chr. Er versuchte, das römische imperium im Kontext der Krise der Republik zu steuern: er erlebte zwei Bürgerkriege und fiel kurz vor dem Anfang des dritten. Seine zahlreichen Schriften gelten dazu als stilistisches Vorbild der lateinischen Literatur in Prosa. In dieser Übung werden wir uns mit Ciceros Schriften beschäftigen, um die Möglichkeiten zu diskutieren, diese als historische Quellen zu benutzen. Der Fokus wird hauptsächlich auf Ciceros Reden gesetzt, die uns einen Blick in die politischen Entscheidungsprozesse sowie in die Justiz der römischen Republik anbieten werden.

Zwischen der populären und schulfachlichen Geschichtskunde und der akademischen Disziplin Geschichtswissenschaft besteht ein beträchtlicher Unterschied. Wir wollen diese Unterschiede aufdecken. Gegenstand der Lehrveranstaltung sind deshalb nicht nur Quellendefinition und Quellenkritik sowie die Differenz von Quellen- und Forschungsbegriffen, sondern auch, letztlich im Bann der Postmoderne, neue Konzepte und Perspektiven der Geschichtswissenschaft. Wir werden Aufsätze diskutieren, Quelleninterpretationen versuchen und uns Gedanken über den Akteursbegriff machen

Kommentar

Die Bandbreite audiovisueller Geschichtsquellen ist beträchtlich. Einerseits gibt es Produkte, die bewusst mit historischen Bezügen entwickelt wurden – etwa historische Spielfilme, Geschichtsdokumentationen oder hybride Formate wie Doku-Dramen und Erklärvideos. Andererseits existieren zahlreiche audiovisuelle Quellen wie Nachrichtensendungen, Spielfilme, Serien oder Privataufnahmen, die je nach Fragestellung aufschlussreiche Einblicke in vergangene Gesellschaften bieten können.

Der Kurs gibt einen Überblick über audiovisuelle Formate, die im Rahmen geschichtswissenschaftlicher Forschung von Relevanz sind, und führt in grundlegende Methoden ihrer Analyse ein. Dabei wird exemplarisch auf Preußen als historischen Bezugsraum zurückgegriffen.

Ziel der Übung ist es, Studierende für den Quellenwert audiovisueller Medien zu sensibilisieren und erste analytische Werkzeuge an die Hand zu geben, um diese im wissenschaftlichen Kontext erschließen und einordnen zu können.

Der Kurs gibt eine Einführung in die Methoden der Geschichtswissenschaft und die Grundlagen wissenschaftlichen Arbeitens. Folgende Themenbereiche finden Beachtung: Wissenschaftliches Schreiben, Zitationstechniken, Literaturrecherche, Archivwesen, Umgang mit Quellen und Editionen, Historische Hilfswissenschaften, Geschichte der Geschichtswissenschaft.

Course Description: In the 1960s, the History Workshop movement emerged in the UK as an effort to "democratize" history. Previously the reserve of and by elites, history workshop envisioned the study and understanding of the past as an endeavor involving ordinary people for the purpose of casting light on the present. This course does not take history workshop as an object of study but rather a framework to be updated, adjusted and applied by students in their development as historically-minded writers in and outside the university. The course is oriented to promote and develop students' skills in planning, doing, speaking about and writing history. It is methodologically rather than thematically organized.

The final assessment will be based on the requirements as laid out in the Studienordnung and may be submitted in either German or English. Course sessions will take place in English.

Dieser Kurs bieten einen Überblick über die DDR-Außenbeziehungen zu ausgewählten Ländern aus verschiedenen Regionen. Neben der Sonderrolle der Sowjetunion werden auch die Zusammenarbeit mit den sozialistischen Bruderstaaten Ost- und Mitteleuropas sowie die politisch brisanten Interaktionen mit den Staaten der westlichen Welt untersucht. Ein Schwerpunkt wird darüber hinaus auf der deutsch-deutschen Konkurrenz um Einfluss auf die Länder des Globalen Südens liegen.

Anhand verschiedener Quellen (Reden, autobiografische Schriften, Fernsehbeiträge, staatliche Akten, Zeitzeugenbeiträge, etc.) werden die Studierenden ein tiefgreifendes Verständnis für die Außenpolitik der DDR entwickeln, indem sie die spezifischen Herausforderungen, Chancen und politischen Ziele in verschiedenen Kontexten betrachten.

Darüber hinaus verfolgt der Kurs das Ziel, die Teilnehmenden in die grundlegenden Methoden und Arbeitsweisen im Umgang mit historischen Quellen in der Geschichtswissenschaft einzuführen.

Kommentar

Feldpostbriefe aus dem Zeitalter der beiden Weltkriege des 20. Jahrhunderts faszinieren bis heute. Dies umso mehr, wenn innerhalb der eigenen Familie ein solcher Briefnachlass überliefert ist. In der Regel handelt es sich nämlich um authentische Selbstzeugnisse mit historischem Quellenwert: Wie haben einfache Männer und Frauen diese extremen Zeiten durchlebt? Was wird in diesen Briefen, die ja der militärischen Zensur unterlagen, mitgeteilt – und was ausgelassen? Grundlage des als ›forschende Lehre‹ angelegten Seminars bildet der private Nachlass eines katholischen Volksschullehrers, der Feldpostbriefe aus dem Ersten und Zweiten Weltkrieg hinterlassen hat, und zwar aus dem Zeitraum Dezember 1915 bis April 1919 sowie November 1939 bis Dezember 1941. Zwei der größten Zäsuren der modernen Menschheitsgeschichte werden so aus dem Blickwinkel ein und desselben Briefzeugen lebendig! Dabei will das Lesen von Feldpostbriefen gelernt sein. Denn häufig wird in den Zeilen an die engsten Angehörigen das Individuell-Persönliche von ›Topiken‹ überlagert, die die Erwartung heutiger Leser krass enttäuscht! So offenbart der Vergleich der Feldpostbriefe eines Truppenarztes mit denen einer Militär-Krankenschwester Überraschendes zur Kategorie ›Geschlecht‹. Vergleichend in den Blick gerät zudem das anglo-amerikanische Konzept der ›War letters‹ oder der »Letters to Loved Ones«. Entstehungsgeschichtlich verfolgen wir die Textsorte bis in die frühe Neuzeit zurück: Gibt es so etwas wie den ›ersten‹ Feldpostbrief der Weltgeschichte? Und seit wann lässt sich ein Feldpostwesen als militärische Einrichtung überhaupt nachweisen? _ Schließlich werden die Briefe des sog. kleinen Mannes mit repräsentativen Beispielen aus der Feder berühmter Persönlichkeiten kontrastiert, von denen ›Briefe aus dem Felde‹ überliefert sind, darunter Albrecht von Wallenstein und Friedrich II. der Große, aber auch Goethe, Heinrich von Kleist oder der expressionistische Lyriker Georg Trakl. _ Die Veranstaltung findet 14–täglich statt! Um Voranmeldung wird gebeten unter charlier@uni-potsdam.de .

Kommentar

Der Grundkurs Altertum bietet einen systematischen Einstieg in die Epochen der griechischen und römischen Antike – von der archaischen Zeit bis zur Spätantike. Über das Semester hinweg werden zentrale historische Entwicklungen vorgestellt und mit grundlegenden Fragen der antiken Politik-, Wirtschafts-, Kultur- und Sozialgeschichte verbunden. Ziel der Veranstaltung ist es, Kompetenzen in der quellenkritischen Arbeit, interdisziplinären Analyse und akademischen Recherche zu vermitteln. Im Zentrum der Veranstaltung steht daher nicht nur der ereignishistorische Ablauf, sondern auch die methodischen Zugänge, die für die Erforschung antiker Kulturen unabdingbar sind. Ein besonderer Fokus liegt daher auf der Analyse nicht-literarischer Quellen wie etwa Münzen, Inschriften und materieller Überreste und auf den Grundwissenschaften wie Archäologie, Numismatik und Epigraphik, die diese wissenschaftlich untersuchen. Recherchemöglichkeiten sowie zentrale Hilfsmittel für die wissenschaftliche Arbeit im Fach werden ebenfalls vorgestellt.

Die Entwicklung Roms von einer kleinen Siedlung, die der Tradition nach um die Mitte des 8. Jahrhunderts v.Chr. gegründet wurde, zu einem großen imperium, das sich über ganz Europa und das ganze Mittelmeergebiet streckte, gehört zu den spannendsten und meist diskutierten Themen der Alten Geschichte. In dieser Vorlesung werden wir die Geschichte Roms von der Gründung bis zur Kontrolle des ganzen Mittelmeeres und wir werden über die Gründe der römischen Expansion und des römischen Erfolgs diskutieren.

Kommentar

In meiner Vorlesung behandle ich jeweils abwechselnd ein Epoche und eine Gattung der antiken Literatur. In diesem Semester ist die Kaiserzeit an der Reihe, das heißt die Zeit nach Augustus und ab seinem Nachfolger Tiberius.
Auch nach den Epochen der späten römischen Republik und der Augusteischen Zeit, die uns wohl die am meisten rezipierten lateinischen Autoren gebracht haben, bleibt die antike Literatur faszinierend – und wird vielleicht sogar vielseitiger: Die griechische Literatur erlebt ein solches Comeback, dass selbst der römische Kaiser Marc Aurel seine philosophischen Gedanken auf Griechisch niederschreibt, und neben der Philosophie blühen die alten Gattungen wie Epos, Geschichtsschreibung und Naturwissenschaft, Kleinformen wie das Epigramm erwachen zu neuem Leben, kontroverse Autoren wie Lucan und Josephus werfen neue Perspektiven auf Etabliertes. Ein Überblick muss immer oberflächlich bleiben – dennoch werden Sie die Texte, die in der römischen Kaiserzeit entstehen, zumindest ein bisschen näher kennenlernen.

Ob Begrüßungen, Hochzeiten, Abschlussfeiern, Gerichtsverhandlungen oder Staatszeremonien: Rituale prägen das gesellschaftliche Leben – im Mittelalter wie auch in der Gegenwart – und erfüllen dabei eine Vielzahl an Funktionen. Sie strukturieren soziale Beziehungen, stiften Gemeinschaft und Identität, markieren Übergänge, verleihen Handlungen Bedeutung und inszenieren Macht. Gerade die Frage, wie sich Rituale aus der historischen Überlieferung erschließen und in ihrem jeweiligen Kontext verstehen lassen, stellt eine wesentliche Herausforderung der mediävistischen Ritualforschung dar.

Der Grundkurs führt in zentrale Fragen, Perspektiven und Problematiken dieses Forschungsfeldes ein. Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele sollen dabei unterschiedliche Formen mittelalterlicher Rituale erschlossen und hinsichtlich ihrer Funktionen und Wirkungen untersucht werden.

Die Vorlesung gibt einen Überblick über die Geschichte Englands von den sogenannten "Rosenkriegen" in der zweiten Hälfte des 15. Jahrhunderts, über die Tudor-Zeit und die - je nach historiographischem Standort als "Civil War", "Great Rebellion" oder "Revolution" etikettierte - Krise im 17. Jahrhundert bis hin zu den durch die Glorious Revolution von 1688 eingeleiteten Veränderungen in Staat und Gesellschaft. Dabei wird durch die Einbeziehung politischer, sozialer und konfessioneller Entwicklungen ein komplexes Herangehen an diese entscheidende Epoche englischer Geschichte angestrebt. Es versteht sich, dass stets auch die Geschichte Schottlands, Wales´ und Irlands bei der Betrachtung berücksichtigt wird.

Auf dem Wiener Kongress 1815 konstituierte sich der Deutsche Bund als loser Staatenbund aus Fürstentümern und Freien Städten in der Mitte Europas. Dominiert wurde er von den beiden Hegemonialmächten Preußen und Österreich. Kommentar

Die Vorlesung führt in die Geschlechtergeschichte des 19. Jahrhunderts ein, die als Beziehungsgeschichte zwischen Männern und Frauen interpretiert wird. Im 19. Jahrhundert etablierte sich ein "bürgerliches" Geschlechtermodell, das zwischen Frauen- und Männerrollen deutlich unterschied. Es geht um die Handlungsspielräume von Frauen und Männern im Wandel von einer Agrar- hin zu einer Industriegesellschaft in Deutschland und Europa. Erstens betrachtet die Veranstaltung verschiedene Bereiche der Geschichte von Ehe und Familie, z.B. die Zugänglichkeit von Ehe, Ehen zwischen Mitgliedern unterschiedlicher Ethnien oder Religionen, die Aufgabenverteilung von Männern und Frauen im öffentlichen und privaten Leben, das Elternrecht und das Leben von unverheirateten Frauen. Zweitens geht es um Frauen- und Männerarbeit im 19. Jahrhundert. Dabei kommen verschiedene soziale Gruppen wie Adelige, Staatsbeamte, LehrerInnen, LandarbeiterInnen oder Dienstmädchen in den Blick. Auch die Geschichte der Frauenbewegung, von "Männerbünden" und die Situation sexueller Minderheiten werden betrachtet.

Kommentar

Der Grundkurs führt in die Geschichte der Weimarer Republik ein. Nach einem knappen Blick auf die Revolution von 1918/19 geht es um die wichtigen Entwicklungen von Politik und Verfassung, Wirtschaft und populärer Kultur. Die Weimarer Reichsverfassung und das Parteiensystem werden seit einigen Jahren wieder aus juristischer und historischer Perspektive in den Blick genommen. Politischer Extremismus und politische Gewalt haben mehr Aufmerksamkeit in der Forschung gefunden, ebenso wie die wirtschaftlichen Probleme im Zusammenhang der Reparationen und der entstehende Wohlfahrtsstaat. Eine "amerikanisierte" Kultur der Roaring Twenties und die Rolle der Frauen nach der Einführung des Frauenwahlrechts bieten neue Perspektiven. Besonderes Augenmerk gilt den Krisen der Republik im internationalen Kontext der Zwischenkriegszeit und der Endphase der Demokratie1930-1933.

Der Grundkurs bietet einen Überblick über die politische, gesellschaftliche und wirtschaftliche Entwicklung der Bundesrepublik Deutschland in der Ära Adenauer. Im Zentrum stehen die innen- und außenpolitischen Weichenstellungen, die Westintegration, das sogenannte „Wirtschaftswunder", gesellschaftliche Umbrüche und die Herausforderungen im Umgang mit der NS-Vergangenheit. Ziel ist es, zentrale Entwicklungen kritisch zu analysieren und in den europäischen Kontext einzuordnen. Besondere Aufmerksamkeit gilt den zeithistorischen Kontroversen über verschiedene Aspekte der Ära Adenauer. Die Lehrveranstaltung ist als Quellen- und Lektürekurs angelegt, entsprechend wichtig ist die Bereitschaft, die einzelnen Sitzungen selbständig vor- und nachzubereiten.

n the 20 th century, Poland changed its social structure from a multi-ethnic and multi-religious state into a predominantly Catholic country with an overwhelming majority of ethnic Poles. The process of recognition and re-negotiation of new social and economic relations was ignited during the Second World War and took place under the auspices of communist regime, within the Eastern Bloc. For many Poles, these and other traits of country´s history certify its uniqueness. However, similar developments can be observed in other European countries and they certify rather a ‘normal’ character of Polish history.

The seminar looks at the social, economic and political developments of Poland in the 20 th century ”beyond martyrdom”, following the narrative of Brian Porter-Szücs´s excellent monograph.

Die Entwicklung Roms von einer kleinen Siedlung, die der Tradition nach um die Mitte des 8. Jahrhunderts v.Chr. gegründet wurde, zu einem großen imperium, das sich über ganz Europa und das ganze Mittelmeergebiet streckte, gehört zu den spannendsten und meist diskutierten Themen der Alten Geschichte. In dieser Vorlesung werden wir die Geschichte Roms von der Gründung bis zur Kontrolle des ganzen Mittelmeeres und wir werden über die Gründe der römischen Expansion und des römischen Erfolgs diskutieren.

Die Vorlesung gibt einen Überblick über die Geschichte Englands von den sogenannten "Rosenkriegen" in der zweiten Hälfte des 15. Jahrhunderts, über die Tudor-Zeit und die - je nach historiographischem Standort als "Civil War", "Great Rebellion" oder "Revolution" etikettierte - Krise im 17. Jahrhundert bis hin zu den durch die Glorious Revolution von 1688 eingeleiteten Veränderungen in Staat und Gesellschaft. Dabei wird durch die Einbeziehung politischer, sozialer und konfessioneller Entwicklungen ein komplexes Herangehen an diese entscheidende Epoche englischer Geschichte angestrebt. Es versteht sich, dass stets auch die Geschichte Schottlands, Wales´ und Irlands bei der Betrachtung berücksichtigt wird.

Kommentar

In meiner Vorlesung behandle ich jeweils abwechselnd ein Epoche und eine Gattung der antiken Literatur. In diesem Semester ist die Kaiserzeit an der Reihe, das heißt die Zeit nach Augustus und ab seinem Nachfolger Tiberius.
Auch nach den Epochen der späten römischen Republik und der Augusteischen Zeit, die uns wohl die am meisten rezipierten lateinischen Autoren gebracht haben, bleibt die antike Literatur faszinierend – und wird vielleicht sogar vielseitiger: Die griechische Literatur erlebt ein solches Comeback, dass selbst der römische Kaiser Marc Aurel seine philosophischen Gedanken auf Griechisch niederschreibt, und neben der Philosophie blühen die alten Gattungen wie Epos, Geschichtsschreibung und Naturwissenschaft, Kleinformen wie das Epigramm erwachen zu neuem Leben, kontroverse Autoren wie Lucan und Josephus werfen neue Perspektiven auf Etabliertes. Ein Überblick muss immer oberflächlich bleiben – dennoch werden Sie die Texte, die in der römischen Kaiserzeit entstehen, zumindest ein bisschen näher kennenlernen.

Wir arbeiten in der Veranstaltung mit Übersetzungen. Latein- und Griechischkenntnisse sind somit nicht Voraussetzung.

Kommentar

Der innere Zusammenbruch der Sowjetunion am Ende des Kalten Krieges löste ab den späten 1980er Jahren enorme Auswanderungsbewegungen aus. Einige von ihnen richteten sich nach Zentraleuropa und teils auch direkt ins wiedervereinigte Deutschland. Sowohl für die Gruppe der Russlanddeutschen wie auch für die der jüdischen Kontingentflüchtlinge schuf die Bundesregierung vergleichsweise günstige Aufnahmebedingungen. Doch wie reagierten Gesamtgesellschaft, Medien, Nachbarschaften? Welche (gegenseitigen) Erwartungshaltungen erfüllten sich, welche wurden enttäuscht? Wie gelang den Immigranten im Laufe der 1990er Jahre die sozio-kulturelle Integration, und was verband bzw. trennte Russlanddeutsche und postsowjetische Juden in dieser turbulenten Zeit? Das Seminar geht diesen Fragen aus zeithistorischer, migrationssoziologischer und kulturwissenschaftlicher Perspektive nach. Es eignet sich auch für Studierende der Jüdischen Studien, Sozialwissenschaften und Osteuropäischen Kulturstudien.

Kommentar

Die Vorlesung führt in die Geschlechtergeschichte des 19. Jahrhunderts ein, die als Beziehungsgeschichte zwischen Männern und Frauen interpretiert wird. Im 19. Jahrhundert etablierte sich ein "bürgerliches" Geschlechtermodell, das zwischen Frauen- und Männerrollen deutlich unterschied. Es geht um die Handlungsspielräume von Frauen und Männern im Wandel von einer Agrar- hin zu einer Industriegesellschaft in Deutschland und Europa. Erstens betrachtet die Veranstaltung verschiedene Bereiche der Geschichte von Ehe und Familie, z.B. die Zugänglichkeit von Ehe, Ehen zwischen Mitgliedern unterschiedlicher Ethnien oder Religionen, die Aufgabenverteilung von Männern und Frauen im öffentlichen und privaten Leben, das Elternrecht und das Leben von unverheirateten Frauen. Zweitens geht es um Frauen- und Männerarbeit im 19. Jahrhundert. Dabei kommen verschiedene soziale Gruppen wie Adelige, Staatsbeamte, LehrerInnen, LandarbeiterInnen oder Dienstmädchen in den Blick. Auch die Geschichte der Frauenbewegung, von "Männerbünden" und die Situation sexueller Minderheiten werden betrachtet.

Kommentar

Die größte aller Revolutionen" hieß der linksliberale Journalist Theodor Wolff am 10. November 1918 den politischen Umbruch jener Tage. Ein Umbruch, der in der Rückschau wiederum häufig als unvollständig charakterisiert wurde in dem nämlich das Scheitern der Weimarer Republik und nachfolgend auch das NS-Regime bereits in der ein oder anderen Weise angelegt gewesen wären. Dieser Kurs verklammert zwei nicht voneinander zu trennende historische Entwicklungsstränge. Er kontextualisiert zentrale historische Ereignisse von den Oktoberreformen des Jahres 1918 bis zur Verabschiedung der Weimarer Verfassung am 14. August 1919 mit den unterschiedlichen Revolutionserwartungen und -erfahrungen der verschiedenen Milieus des Deutschen Reiches. Ferner setzt sie diese in Beziehung zur Geschichte der internationalen Beziehungen zwischen dem "Schwarzen Tag des deutschen Heeres" am 8. August 1918 und der Unterzeichnung des Friedensvertrages von Versailles am 28. Juni 1919 im Besonderen zu der unausgesetzten Gewalt an diversen Bruchstellen der in Aussicht genommenen Friedensordnung(en).

Kommentar

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

Unter Einbeziehung unterschiedlicher Perspektiven und unter Hervorhebung verschiedener historischer Stimmen befasst sich dieser Kurs mit dem nationalsozialistischen Deutschland. Besonderes Augenmerk wird dabei auf folgende Aspekte gelegt: kollektive nationale Traumata; Strategien zur Gemeinschaftsbildung; geteilte ideologische Überzeugungen; Ermächtigung von oben; individuelle Handlungsmacht; durch Krieg und Besatzung geschaffene Möglichkeiten; Dynamiken der Radikalisierung; sowie die Bereitschaft des Regimes, extreme Gewalt gegen eine Vielzahl von in- und ausländischen Gruppen anzuwenden.

Kommentar

Achtung: Das Seminar besteht aus drei Online-Sitzungen und 3 Tagen im Februar, die sich eventuell noch verschieben können.

Die Beschäftigung mit dem Hören, aber auch den Klängen der antiken Welt erfordert eine z. T. andere Vorgehensweise als die Untersuchung ähnlicher Fragestellungen in den Zeiten des ausgehenden 19. und des 20. Jhds., in denen akustische Aufzeichnung die Welt der Töne konserviert hat. In der gesamten Vormoderne ist entsprechendes Wissen über das Hören und Klänge nämlich nur über einen Medienwechsel abrufbar, etwa von der Sinneswahrnehmung zum verschriftlichten Bericht darüber.

In dem Seminar soll es deshalb darum gehen, die antiken Quellen gegen den Strich zu lesen, um so Informationen über den Hörsinn und akustische Phänomene zu gewinnen. Dabei wird Hören im Kontext von antiker Wirtschaft, Gesellschaft und besonders der Politik untersucht.

Im Seminar soll die ländliche Architektur vor allem anhand von Beispielen aus Brandenburg behandelt werden. Im Mittelpunkt steht dabei ein breites Spektrum von Bauernhäusern und Kolonistenhäusern, über Vorwerke und Herrenhäuser bis hin zu Kirchen und Schlössern. Hierzu stellen sich die Fragen, wer die Bauherren waren, welche Nutzungskonzepte entworfen wurden und wie man die Errichtung der Wohn-, Arbeits- und Repräsentationsstätten finanzierte. An der Entwicklung von Stil, Technik, Materialien und Volumen sollen die Gemeinsamkeiten und Gegensätze in der Konstruktionstätigkeit ermittelt werden. Wie sich vorwegnehmen lässt, spielte das Bauen als Statussymbol durch alle sozialen Schichten eine große Rolle.

Kursbeschreibung:
Die Erforschung der deutschen Kolonialgeschichte hat Konjunktur. Immer mehr staatliche Institutionen, Wissenschaftler/innen und zivilgesellschaftliche Gruppen beschäftigen sich mit dem kolonialen Erbe Deutschlands und dessen Fortleben in der Gegenwart. Vor allem die Epoche des deutschen Kolonialreiches zwischen 1885 und 1918 ist dabei zu einem bevorzugten Forschungsgegenstand geworden. Die europäische Expansion begann jedoch nicht erst im 19. Jahrhundert, sondern hat eine weitaus längere Geschichte, die bis zum Beginn der europäischen Moderne zurückreicht. Das Seminar befasst sich mit den ersten Versuchen deutscher Kaufleute, Könige und Fürsten in der frühen Neuzeit, am Kolonialhandel teilzuhaben oder eigene Kolonien zu gründen. Sie begannen bereits im 16. Jahrhundert mit den Fuggern und Welsern in Südamerika, wurden fortgeführt von den Brandenburgischen Fürsten und führten auf diese Weise eine Reihe deutscher Kaufleute und Kolonialherren im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert nach Afrika und Amerika. Das Seminar begibt sich auf die Spuren deutscher Kolonialherrschaft vom 16. bis 18. Jahrhundert und fragt nach ihren historischen Entstehungsbedingungen, erörtert ihre wirtschaftlichen, ideologischen und kulturellen Voraussetzungen und diskutiert postkoloniale Zugänge zur ferneren deutschen Vergangenheit.
Course description:
Research into German colonial history is currently experiencing a major resurgence. A growing network of academics, state institutions, and civil society groups are actively re-examining Germany's colonial legacy and its enduring impact. While recent scholarship often centers on the German Empire (1885–1918), European expansion began long before the 19th century. This seminar turns the spotlight back to the dawn of European modernity, examining the earliest colonial ambitions of German merchants, kings, and princes. From the 16th-century ventures of the Fugger and Welser families in South America to the 17th- and 18th-century trade networks established by the Electors of Brandenburg across Africa and the Americas, students will trace the deep historical roots of early modern German imperialism. Together, we will analyze the political conditions, economic motivations, and ideological frameworks behind these expansionist efforts, while applying contemporary postcolonial approaches to Germany's early modern past.

Zu Brandenburg gehörten historisch und gehören teils bis in die Gegenwart Großstädte wie Berlin und Potsdam, aber auch kleinere Städte wie etwa Cottbus oder Eberswalde. Aber Brandenburg war auch immer ländlich geprägt. Das Blockseminar beschäftigt sich mit dem Wandel von ländlichen Lebensverhältnissen von den preußischen Reformen zu Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts üner die Gutserrscahftswelt des kaiserreichs und der Weiarer Republik bis zu den Folgen der Bodenreform von 1945 und den LPGs in der DDR. DAei werden vor allem die unterschelichen sozialen Gruppen betrachtet: adlige Gutsherrschaftsfamilien und LandarbeiterInnen, bäuerliche Gruppen, Pfarrer und Beamte, Verwalter und Stiftsdamen, Handwerker und Parteifunktionäre. Das Seminar findet als Blockseminar statt. Nach einführenden Sitzungen am 13.10., 20.10. und 27.10. gibt es einen Blocktag am 11.12. an der Universität Potsdam sowie einen Besuch im Stift Heiligengrabe in der Prignitz am 29.1.2027.

Wie konstituierten globale Dynamiken das vermeintlich Lokale – und wie formten lokale Akteure ihrerseits globale Prozesse mit? Diese Frage steht im Mittelpunkt der Geschichtswerkstatt. Am Beispiel Potsdams und Brandenburgs untersuchen wir, wie koloniale Machtstrukturen und sozialistische Solidaritätsnetzwerke in die Stadtgeschichte und die Geschichte des Landes eingeschrieben sind und wie beides in einem grundlegend asymmetrischen Verhältnis zur weiteren Welt stand.

Das Seminar ist forschungsorientiert angelegt. Die Teilnehmenden erschließen unter Anleitung Quellen in Archiven, Museen und weiteren Institutionen der Region und entwickeln eigene Fragestellungen. Mögliche Ausgangspunkte sind etwa: Wie veränderten koloniale Beziehungen die politische und soziale Ordnung Potsdams? Über welche Kanäle wurden sozialistische Solidaritätsbewegungen von lokalen Akteuren aufgenommen, adaptiert oder umgedeutet?

Ziel ist es, historische Quellenarbeit mit Konzepten der Globalgeschichte zu verbinden und dabei ein methodisch reflektiertes Verständnis glokaler Verflechtungen zu entwickeln – eines, das auch nach der gegenwärtigen Bedeutung dieser Verbindungen fragt.

Das Hauptseminar widmet sich zentralen Kontroversen und Streitfragen im ersten Jahrzehnt nach der Deutschen Einheit. Im Mittelpunkt stehen politische, gesellschaftliche, kulturelle und wirtschaftliche Auseinandersetzungen, etwa um die ökonomische Integration Ostdeutschlands, die Asyl- und Migrationspolitik, den Umgang mit Rechtsextremismus, Erinnnerungskultur und Geschichtspolitik sowie die Rolle des vereinigten Deutschlands in Europa und der Welt. Anhand von Quellen, Forschungsliteratur und öffentlichen Debatten analysieren wir prägende Konflikte dieser Epoche und diskutieren deren Nachwirkungen bis in die Gegenwart. Die Veranstaltung richtet sich an fortgeschrittene Studierende im Bachelor, die sich kritisch und forschungsorientiert mit der jüngeren deutschen Zeitgeschichte auseinandersetzen möchten. Die Lehrveranstaltung ist als Quellen- und Lektürekurs angelegt, entsprechend wichtig ist die Bereitschaft, die einzelnen Sitzungen selbständig vor- und nachzubereiten. Aktive Teilnahme, Diskussionen und eigenständige Recherchen sind ausdrücklich erwünscht.

Die Lehrveranstaltung widmet sich der Geschichte imperialer Gewalt und Expansion in Ostasien von den Opiumkriegen bis zum Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges. Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele erhalten die Studierenden einen allgemeinen Überblick über die Geschichte des (europäischen) Imperialismus in Ostasien vom frühen Neunzehnten bis zur Mitte des zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts. Sie setzen sich mit dem Beginn der europäischen Expansion und dem Ende der Qing-Hegemonie, Modernisierungsprozessen in Ostasien, dem Aufstieg Japans zur Großmacht und dem Ende der westlichen Vorherrschaft in der Region anhand einschlägiger Fachliteratur und ausgewählter Quellen auseinander. Die Studierenden lernen, die Logiken und Grenzen, nach denen Ostasien als imperialer Raum in Europa wahrgenommen und behandelt wurde, nachzuvollziehen und die damit verbundenen politischen Entscheidungsprozesse kritisch zu analysieren. Darüber hinaus werden Studierende anhand ausgewählter Dokumente an die Auswertung gedruckter und handschriftlicher Quellen in deutscher und englischer Sprache herangeführt.

This seminar takes you on a voyage into the past. Like many of the explorers you will meet along the way, you will explore the history of the modern world. You will learn about the past you will also learn about how to think about the past – to consider models and concepts for explaining the cycles of integration and disintegration, like empire and free trade, religious conversion and global governance. The aim of this course is to understand the forces that pull the parts together as well as those that drive them apart.

Course themes include migration and statelessness, economic integration, warfare and conflict, the transformation of the ecological balance, and cultural responses and innovations. To grapple with these themes, we explore first-hand perspectives of historical actors through a collection of texts and images. And because learning global history is much more exciting in a global context, you will join teams from different universities all over the world, including from the University of Cambridge's Global History Lab.

In this global history course, you will learn not just by reading excerpts from the textbook, watching lectures and engaging in class discussions. The core of this course is a series of weekly lab assignments in which you will work in teams to use historical knowledge from the course to solve problems and develop new connections and interpretations of primary sources. You will then discuss your results across teams and themes.

This class consists of online lectures, in class group and group presentations work to solve challenges and questions based on primary source problem sets, textbook reading, and class discussions. The course will run from October until Christmas break only and will give you the option to write a final paper (due date March 31st).

This course explores the History of the Holocaust, the Nazi attempt to murder the Jewish population in Europe, in its temporal, geographical and conceptual complexity. The "road to Auschwitz" was not paved by destiny but took shape as a result of concrete decisions taken by German Nazi officials and their allies, acting under specific circumstances of occupation and total war, with a particular historical baggage of extreme nationalism and antisemitism.
In the sessions we will delve into the main historiographical debates and questions in the field. Was the genocide the execution of a prearranged "exterminatory mindset" or the unanticipated result of a process of "cumulative radicalization"? Were the perpetrators "ordinary men" or "willing executioners"? Why the Germans and why the Jews? What did the world know? How did the Jews react?
Students will engage these conundrums through the reading of secondary literature and primary sources emanating from the victims, perpetrators and bystanders. By analyzing phenomena spanning throughout the Nazi dictatorship and World War II, comprising Germany but also Western, Eastern and Southeastern Europe, and involving Jewish groups and persons with different backgrounds, the course will provide an introductory picture of an event of such magnitude that its aftermath still reverberates in our contemporary world.

Voraussetzung

Teilnahmevoraussetzungen sind passive Englischkenntnisse. Spanischkenntnisse sind willkommen, aber nicht unbedingt notwendig.

Literatur

Eine Literaturliste wird in der Veranstaltung zur Verfügung gestellt.

Leistungsnachweis

Leistungskriterien sind regelmäßige Lektüren, die schriftliche Bearbeitung einer Aufgabe (1 Seite) in einer asynchronen Sitzung sowie ein kurzes Impulsreferat zur Einführung und Diskussion von einem der vorgegebenen Seminartexte. Für benotete Studienleistungen wird zusätzlich die Verschriftlichung des Impulsreferats in Form einer wissenschaftlichen Besprechung des Seminartexts erbeten. Der konkrete Umfang der Verschriftlichung folgt den Vorgaben der jeweiligen Modulordnungen der unterschiedlichen Studiengänge.

Kommentar

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

Dieser Online-Kurs im Rahmen des EU-geförderten, internationalen Forschungsprojektes „EUMES - European Minorities in Urban Spaces: Mutual Recognition, Social Inclusion and Sense of Belonging" beschäftigt sich mit der Situation und dem Zusammenleben von jüdischen, muslimischen und Roma-Minderheiten in ausgewählten städtischen Räumen in Europa (Prag, Krakow, Potsdam, London, Bratislava). Der Kurs vermittelt den Studierenden zudem analytische und pädagogische Instrumente, wie Wissen und Erkenntnisse zu diesen Minderheiten einer breiteren Öffentlichkeit vermittelt werden können. Kommentar

In diesem Seminar werden wir das Problem des Bösen, wie es von den wichtigsten Philosophen der frühen Neuzeit diskutiert wurde, besprechen. Bei Leibniz wird dieses Problem im religiösen Kontext gestellt und diskutiert, sie wirft aber bei ihm viele metaphysische und ethische Fragen auf. Kant kritisiert alle versuche, dieses Problem in einem solchen Kontext theoretisch zu lösen. Er selbst aber stellt die starke These auf, dass das Böse in menschlicher Natur verwurzelt ist.

Kommentar

Das Seminar gliedert sich in drei Teile:
Im ersten Teil („Denken") untersuchen wir typische kognitive Biases und Fallstricke des moralischen Denkens sowie die logische Form moralischer Argumente.
Im zweiten Teil („Streiten") geht es um produktiven Dissens: Wie können wir auch bei grundlegenden Meinungsverschiedenheiten konstruktiv diskutieren? Dabei erproben wir Strategien des produktiven Dissenses in der Diskussion sowohl kontroverser Themen (z. B. Schwangerschaftsabbrüche, Meinungsfreiheit vs. Cancel culture, sowie Themen aus der Tier- und Umweltethik) als auch ausgewählter „Hot Takes" (provokante oder überraschende Thesen, z. B. dass Ghosting je nach Kontext moralisch zulässig oder sogar geboten sein kann, oder dass angehende Eltern eine Lizenz benötigen sollten).
Im dritten Teil („Handeln") richtet sich der Blick auf die praktische Umsetzung: Wie können wir mit unseren Entscheidungen verantwortungsvoll umgehen und möglichst effektiv Gutes tun? Dabei betrachten wir unter anderem auch die Rolle der eigenen Berufswahl.

An Lobpreisungen der Liebe kommt man nicht schwer, sowohl in der Philosophie als auch außerhalb. Doch was ist damit gemeint? Ein Gefühl? Ein Verhältnis? Eine Tätigkeit? Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Do	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.11.1.25	15.10.2026	Jenny Vorpahl

Kommentar

Im Seminar werden Feste und Feiern als soziale Praktiken untersuchen, in denen Zugehörigkeiten hergestellt, Werte vermittelt und gesellschaftliche Ordnungen sichtbar werden. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein vergleichender religionswissenschaftlicher Zugang zu religiösen Festkulturen – etwa Weihnachten, Ramadan oder Pessach – und säkularen Anlässen wie Geburtstagen, Hochzeiten, Jugendfeiern oder staatlichen Gedenktagen.

Ausgehend von theoretischen Perspektiven auf Ritual, Performanz, Materialität, Emotion und Gemeinschaft wird gefragt: Was macht ein Ereignis zu einem Fest? Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele werden wir analysieren, welche Rollen Räume, Dinge, Essen, Kleidung, Musik und Medien spielen? Und wie verändern Kommerzialisierung, Migration, Digitalisierung oder gesellschaftliche Pluralisierung gegenwärtige Festkulturen?

Das Seminar vermittelt dabei grundlegende Begriffe und Methoden der religionswissenschaftlichen Ritual- und Kulturforschung und erprobt diese an konkreten Quellen, Bildern, Objekten und medialen Darstellungen.

Lernziele sind, Feste und Feiern als kulturell und historisch situierte Praktiken zu beschreiben, religiöse und säkulare Festformen vergleichend zu analysieren sowie deren soziale, politische und mediale Bedeutungen kritisch zu reflektieren.

Kommentar

Diese Veranstaltung richtet sich an Studierende, die bereits eine romanische Sprache gut bis sehr gut beherrschen (Französisch, Portugiesisch oder Italienisch) und als Fach studieren. In dieser Übung können die Teilnehmer*innen ihre philologischen Kenntnisse einbringen und weiterentwickeln. Ziel des Kurses ist es, leichte bis mittelschwere Texte auf Spanisch lesen und verstehen zu können.

Das notwendige Arbeitsmaterial wird den Studierenden zu Beginn des Semesters über Moodle zur Verfügung gestellt.

Dieser Kurs wird mit einer Klausur am Ende der Vorlesungszeit abgeschlossen (90 Minuten).

Zur Evaluation gehören auch die Abgabe von schriftlichen Aufgaben im Laufe des Semesters, sowie die aktive Teilnahme in der Diskussion der jeweiligen Sitzungen.

Die Aktivitäten des Kurses bestehen aus Lektüren, Übungen (mündlich/schriftlich) sowie vergleichenden grammatikalischen Analysen des Spanisch und der jeweils anderen romanischen Sprache.

Der Kurs richtet sich an Studierende mit mindestens C1-Niveau.
Im Rahmen dieses Kurses zur literarischen Übersetzung werden sowohl sprachliche als auch kulturelle Aspekte des Übersetzens behandelt. Wie vermittelt eine Übersetzung die Realien und kulturellen Kontexte der Ausgangssprache in einer anderen Sprache und für eine anders strukturierte Gesellschaft? Was geht beim Übersetzen verloren?
Analysiert werden Auszüge aus der russischen Übersetzung von Heinrich Bölls Roman Billard um halb zehn sowie aus der deutschen Übersetzung von Wassili Grossmans Roman Alles fließt. Darüber hinaus werden weitere Passagen aus diesen Romanen übersetzt und Übersetzungen von Texten aus anderen Genres – Essays, literaturkritischen Beiträgen, Kinderprosa u. a. – angefertigt.
Im Unterricht werden sowohl Übersetzungskompetenzen als auch die Fähigkeit trainiert, auf Russisch über literarische Werke und die Besonderheiten ihrer Übersetzung in eine andere Sprache zu sprechen.

Der Kurs richtet sich an Studierende mit mindestens B2-Niveau. Im Unterricht werden Zusammenfassungen und Kurztexte, Briefe und E-Mails sowie Essays verfasst. Bereits auf den vorherigen Niveaustufen erworbene grammatische Strukturen und der entsprechende Wortschatz werden wiederholt und gefestigt und die schriftsprachlichen Kompetenzen gezielt weiterentwickelt.

Ziel ist es, das nächste Niveau der Sprachbeherrschung zu erreichen: die Fähigkeit, über ein und dasselbe Thema – etwa Kultur, gesellschaftliches Leben oder berufliche Kommunikation – in unterschiedlichen Registern und Stilen zu schreiben, beispielsweise formell, informell oder persönlich.

Der Kurs Sprachkurs Griechisch I Basismodul richtet sich an Studierende, die keine oder nur geringe Kenntnisse des Altgriechischen besitzen. Wünschenswert wäre die Kenntnis des Alphabets. Das Lehrbuch ist Kairos kompakt . Empfohlen wird die Anschaffung einer Grammatik (z.B. Langenscheidts Kurzgrammatik Altgriechisch).

Der Lernerfolg beruht auf der gewissenhaften Vorbereitung der Übungstexte und auf der Nachbereitung des Stundenpensums.

Participants will have the opportunity to practice and develop all key language competencies -- listening, speaking, reading, and writing -- through a range of general and academic topics featured in the course material. Special focus will be given to selected areas of vocabulary and grammar, laying a solid foundation for independent study.

The course is open to students from all disciplines, offering a valuable opportunity to boost their linguistic abilities, no matter their field of study.

Materials / Material

Course materials will be provided via Moodle.

Testing / Leistungserfassung

Students usually take the course test that is conducted in the last week of classes during class time. Alternatively, participants can also sign up for the UNIcert II exam which assesses achievement of course aims, e.g. progress in all four language skills (reading, listening, speaking, and writing) and content knowledge. Interested course participants will receive all necessary information concerning registration for the UNIcert II exam by e-mail at the beginning of registration, approximately in the 8th week of the lecture period. The UNIcert II certificate is a prerequisite for some Master degree programs, internships and study abroad programs such as ERASMUS exchanges. The UNIcert exam will be held in the last week of the lecture period and in the following week.

Credits / LP

6 credits (Leistungspunkte) or 6 ECTS points if these requirements are met: 80 % attendance and active course participation; a score of at least 55% in each section of the course test or the UNIcert II exam.

Neben der Systematisierung der grammatikalischen Inhalte und deren aktivem und bewusstem Einsatz werden Landeskundliche Themen durch Übungen zum Hör- und Leseverstehen anhand authentischer Texte diskutiert. Außerdem werden Sprech- und Schreibfertigkeit im Hinblick auf einen Studienaufenthalt in Italien trainiert. Die im Kurs behandelten landeskundlichen Themen sind Gegenstand der Prüfung UNIcert II, die das Verstehen eines gesprochenen Textes (Hörverstehen) und eines schriftlichen Textes (Leseverstehen), eine mündliche Prüfung und das Verfassen eines argumentativen Textes vorsieht. Um diesen letzten Prüfungsteil zu trainieren, wird im Kurs besonderen Wert auf das Schreiben gelegt. Das setzt von den Studierenden die Bereitschaft voraus, während des Semesters Texte unterschiedlicher Länge zu verfassen.

Kommentar

Diese Veranstaltung baut auf der Übung Lateinische Grammatik I des vorangegangenen Semesters auf und eröffnet einen vertieften Einblick in die Welt der lateinischen Nebensätze.
Im Mittelpunkt steht die Syntax des klassischen Lateins, wie sie in den Werken der Meister der Prosa – Caesar und Cicero – begegnet.
Gemeinsam erarbeitet werden Schritt für Schritt die Strukturen sowohl der konjunktivischer als auch ier indikativischer Nebensätze. Zugleich wiederholen und festigen wir den Gebrauch der Partizipial- und Gerundivkonstruktionen, um ein sicheres und flexibles Verständnis lateinischer Satzarchitektur zu entwickeln.

Voraussetzung

Voraussetzung für die erfolgreiche Teilnahme an Grammatik II sind gefestigte Kenntnisse der lateinischen Formenlehre, Syntax und Lexik.

In der Vorlesung werden wir uns mit sprachlichen Strukturen beschäftigen. Dabei gehen wir von den kleinsten Bestandteilen – den Lauten und Buchstaben – aus und enden beim (einfachen) Satz. In der Fachsprache werden wir also Grundzüge der Phonologie, Graphematik, Morphologie und Syntax kennenlernen. Gemeinhin wird das als Grammatik bezeichnet, die Lexik hingegen wird häufig als der ‚gelernte' Teil (Vokabeln) verstanden – es geht also um die Möglichkeiten und die Grenzen der strukturellen Beschreibung.

Das Ende der DDR nutzten einige konservative westdeutsche Intellektuelle, aber auch ostdeutsche Autor:innen, die die DDR verlassen hatten, für ein Scherbengericht über die Literatur des untergegangen Landes. Eine pauschale Abwertung als „Gesinnungskitsch" konnte sich jedoch langfristig nicht durchsetzen: Auch mehr als 30 Jahre nach der Wiedervereinigung ist die DDR-Literatur keineswegs in Vergessenheit geraten, sondern wird weiterhin geschätzt, gelesen und erforscht.
Dabei hat sich eine differenzierte und kulturhistorisch informierte Perspektive etabliert: Der DDR-Literatur, hier zunächst heuristisch verstanden als Korpus literarischer Texte, die zwischen 1949 und 1989 von in der DDR sozialisierten und/oder dort lebenden Autor:innen verfasst wurden, kommt in der deutschsprachigen Literaturgeschichte des 20. Jahrhunderts ein besonderer Status zu: Zwar eng mit der westdeutschen Literaturgeschichte verflochten, zeichnet sich die DDR-Literatur durch spezifische Entstehungs-, Publikations- und Rezeptionskontexte aus, die sich deutlich von der Bundesrepublik unterscheiden. In diesem Sinne wollen wir im Seminar ausgewählte Texte wichtiger DDR-Autor:innen (u.a. Jurek Becker, Volker Braun, Franz Fühmann, Uwe Johnson, Sarah Kirsch, Brigitte Reimann, Christa Wolf) lesen, sie in literarische Traditionen und Diskussion einordnen und im Zusammenhang kulturpolitischer Stationen und Programmatiken (Formalismus-Debatte, Sozialistischer Realismus, Bitterfelder Weg, Kahlschlagplenum, Biermann-Ausbürgerung, Glasnost-Kulturpolitik) betrachten, um so ein angemessenes Verständnis und literarhistorisch fundierte Deutungsperspektiven zu erarbeiten.

Begleitend findet am 28./29. Januar 2027 am Potsdamer Einstein Forum der Workshop „Der Literaturbetrieb der DDR. Institutionen, Netzwerke und Strukturen" statt; der Besuch ausgewählter Vorträge ist Teil des Seminars.

Kommentar

Das Ziel des Seminars ist, anhand ausgewählter Gedichte aus verschiedenen Jahrhunderten Einblicke in die Formenvielfalt deutschsprachiger Lyrik zu erhalten und Grundkompetenzen für die Analyse lyrischer Gedichte zu erwerben und zu erproben. Zentrale Begriffe und Kategorien für die Beschreibung von Gedichten wie Vers, Rhythmus, Metapher oder Reim werden im Seminar eingeführt und an konkreten Gedichten erläutert. Drei methodisch unterschiedlich vorgehende Gedichtinterpretationen werden als Modellanalysen diskutiert.

Der Aufbau des Seminars gliedert sich in vier Analyseebenen von Lyrik: die lexikalisch-syntaktische Ebene, klanglich-rhythmische Ebene, die bildlich-metaphorische Ebene und die graphisch-visuelle Ebene. Im Verlauf des Seminars sind sechs Seminaraufgaben während einer Sitzung erfolgreich zu bearbeiten (unbenotet).

Die im Seminar erworbenen Kompetenzen werden im letzten Drittel des Seminars individuell getestet (unbenotet): Alle Teilnehmenden wählen aus einem vorgegebenen Textkorpus ein Gedicht aus, zu dem sie eine Analyse verfassen (drei Seiten). Diese wird anonym von einer anderen Person hinsichtlich ihrer Plausibilität kommentiert. Einige der Analysen werden am Semesterende gemeinsam besprochen.

Kommentar

Unterstreichen, markieren, kommentieren, strukturieren – es gibt viele Formen, Texte zu bearbeiten und mit zusätzlichen Informationen auszuzeichen. Diese Formen können Annotation genannt werden. Im Seminar steht also eine Methode im Zentrum, die Sie wahrscheinlich bereits zur Bearbeitung von Primär- und Sekundärtexten nutzen, die aber im Enprodukt Ihrer wissenschaftlichen Arbeit z.B. in Form einer Hausarbeit versteckt bleibt. Wir wollen diese Methode genauer unter die Lupe nehmen und den Prozess der Textbearbeitung und damit der Grundlage für die Argumentation und die Interpretation literarischer Texte transparent machen. Dafür fragen wir uns zuerst, was Annotationen sind, welche Ziele sie verfolgen und wie bei der Annotation vorgegangen wird.

Wir wollen darauf aufbauend praktisch arbeiten. Das heißt, wir annotieren Texte gemeinsam, diskutieren die Annotationen und gehen der Frage nach, wann das Verständnis einer Textstelle von unserer Interpretation abhängt und wann nicht.

Zuletzt stehen ihre Fragestellungen/Themen im Fokus, die Sie in Gruppen durch die Methode der Annotation bearbeiten.

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Gerade Frauen waren politisch in ihrer Publizistik. Mit welchen Themen haben sie sich beschäftigt, unter welchen Bedingungen, welche publizistischen Formate und Tricks haben sie genutzt um ihre Stimmen hörbar zu machen? Manche der Texte von politischen Publizistischen aus dem 19. jahrhundert scheinen uns in ihren Forderungen und auch in ihrem Stil modern und brandaktuell, wirken aber heutzutage in der Öffentlichkeit unter Goethes et al. Sockel begraben zu liegen. Drei zu ihren Lebzeiten sehr bekannte Publizistinnen (Huber, Assing und v. Arnim) werden wir kennenlernen. Wir werden diese Texte entdecken, ihre interessanten Ideen kennenlernen und sie gemeinsam wiederbeleben, denn die Publizistinnen von damals sind in ihrer Unverzagtheit und in ihrem Widerstand gegen rechte Kräfte Vorbilder für heute.

Mediävistische Einführungsseminare stellen das Wissen bereit, das notwendig ist, um deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters lesen, verstehen und wissenschaftlich beschreiben zu können. Anhand ausgewählter Texte ist einerseits kultur- und literaturwissenschaftliches Grundwissen zu erarbeiten, andererseits soll das Mittelhochdeutsche erlernt und das Übersetzen geübt werden. Das Seminar ist entsprechend für Anfänger (bis zum max. 4. Fachsemester), nicht für Fortgeschrittene konzipiert.

Das Seminar führt in grundlegende Begriffe, Fragestellungen und Vorgehensweisen ein, die für die literaturwissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur seit ca. 1750 relevant sind. Diskutiert und erprobt werden diese anhand von individuell zu lesenden literarischen Texten aus den 1960er Jahren (BRD, DDR, Österreich). Lernziel ist, anhand konkreter Texte wichtige Aspekte und Praktiken literaturwissenschaftlichen Arbeitens kennenzulernen und zu reflektieren. Der Aufbau des Seminars orientiert sich an den vier literarischen Hauptgattungen: Erzählliteratur (Epik), Lyrik, Dramatik und literarische Gebrauchsformen (wie Brief, Essay oder Reisebericht). Diese vier Hauptgattungen werden jeweils in ihren charakteristischen Merkmalen und Analysekategorien eingeführt. Weiterhin werden allgemeine Fragen des Literaturbegriffs, der Methodik und der Literaturgeschichtsschreibung behandelt.

Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende vor allem des ersten und zweiten Semesters. Für eine erfolgreiche Teilnahme sind die Lektüre der behandelten Texte und die erfolgreiche Bearbeitung einer Anwendungsaufgabe (ca. 15 min) an sechs angegebenen Seminarterminen (unbenotet; max. zwei verpasste oder nicht bestandene Seminaraufgaben können in der letzten Seminarsitzung wiederholt werden).

Kommentar

Das Ziel dieser Veranstaltung ist es, anhand von ausgewählten Textbeispielen aus dem 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhundert in die Literatur der Frühen Neuzeit einzuführen. Einen zentralen Ansatzpunkt bildet dabei die Frage, warum man die Frühe Neuzeit als ‚rhetorisches Zeitalter' bezeichnen kann, und zwar nicht nur in Bezug auf die Textproduktion. Im Einzelnen geht es um formale Gesichtspunkte wie beliebte Gattungen, um metrische und stilistische Eigenheiten sowie um bevorzugte Themen. Außerdem kommen Fragen der Normierung zur Sprache, und zwar sowohl in theoretischer Hinsicht (Rhetorik und Poetik) als auch in sozialgeschichtlicher Hinsicht (Mäzenatentum und Gebrauchsdichtung). Schlaglichtartig bietet der Kurs eine Einführung in die spezifischen Hilfsmittel der germanistischen Frühneuzeitforschung, d.h. in nützliche Wörterbücher und Nachschlagewerke, Datenbanken, Kataloge und Internetseiten sowie in den wissenschaftlichen Umgang mit frühneuzeitlichen Quellen (Frakturschrift, Besonderheiten im Druckbild, Abkürzungen etc.).

Die Vorlesung führt problemorientiert in zentrale Begriffe, Gegenstände, Fragestellungen und Methoden der germanistischen Literaturwissenschaft ein. Lernziel ist, einen aspektreichen Überblick über die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur in systematischer wie historischer Hinsicht zu gewinnen. Die Vorlesung ist in drei Abschnitte untergliedert:

1. systematischer Zugriff: Womit beschäftigt sich (germanistische) Literaturwissenschaft?

2. historischer Zugriff: Welche Veränderungen durchliefen die deutschsprachige Literatur und die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit ihr im Laufe der Jahrhunderte?

3. methodologischer Zugriff: Wie geht man literaturwissenschaftlich vor?

Der Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung liegt auf der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 18. bis 21. Jahrhunderts, punktuell werden auch Aspekte früherer Literaturepochen berücksichtigt. Die Vorlesung schließt mit einer Klausur ab, diese ist zugleich die Modulprüfung für das gesamte Basismodul GER_BA_006. Sie findet am 9. Juli um 16.15 Uhr statt. Ich empfehle, die Vorlesung nicht vor dem zweiten Fachsemester zu besuchen.

Wolframs ‚Willehalm' (um 1210/20) ist eines der erfolgreichsten Epen des Mittelalters: Nicht nur überliefern 81 (!) teils bebilderte Handschriften dieses Epos, es entstanden auch Vorgeschichten und Fortsetzungen dieser Erzählung von Krieg, Liebe, Glaube und Verwandtschaft. Diese Aufzählung deutet an, dass es im ‚Willehalm' nicht nur um Krieg geht, sondern vor allem um all' die Fragen, die mit Krieg zusammenhängen: Was sind die Gründe dafür, dass Menschen einander töten, kann das Töten auf dem Schlachtfeld Ehre verschaffen? Was wären Alternativen zum oder Auswegen aus dem Krieg, was folgt aus ihm, vor allem für jene, die mit beiden Kriegsparteien verbunden sind und (wie) kann es gelingen, auch unter den Bedingungen von Krieg irgendwie menschlich zu bleiben? Wolfram von Eschenbach setzt sich mit diesen auf erschreckende Weise aktuellen Fragen auf komplexe Weise auseinander und verzichtet an vielen Stellen auf eindeutige Antworten. Wie lesen Auszüge aus Wolframs großer Erzählung vom Krieg, behandeln auf der Grundlage seiner altfranzösischen Vorlage seine Bearbeitungstendenzen und setzen uns mit den Handschriftenillustrationen auseinander.

Kommentar

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Gegenwartsliteratur steht heutzutage in einem prekären Verhältnis zu anderen (Freizeit-)Medien. Anhand eines ambitionierten Fallbeispiels wollen wir untersuchen, wie das Buch-Medium auf unsere multimediale Gegenwart reagiert. »Miami Punk« (2019) von Juan S. Guse liest sich wie ein Videospiel (Moll/Weber 2023) und erzählt von Bewohner:innen einer unserer Realität entrückten Stadt, die von einer schleichenden Naturkatastrophe gezeichnet wurde. Zusätzlich wuchert »Miami Punk« über die klassische Romanform hinaus: als im Buch versteckte URLs, als Social-Media-Accounts, insbesondere als Hörspiel-Spiel »Miami Punk: The complete DLC«.

Die Vorlesung will einen ersten Einblick in wichtige Stationen der deutschsprachigen Literatur des – so der Historiker Hobsbawm – „langen 19. Jahrhunderts" geben. Gemeint ist damit eine bei allen Veränderungen erkennbare Kontinuität von Problemen und Themen aus der Zeit von 1789 (Beginn der Französischen Revolution) bis 1914 (Ausbruch des Ersten Weltkriegs). In der Vorlesung werden wir wichtige Aspekte der romantischen Literatur aufarbeiten, um dann die Zeit des Vormärz und des Nachmärz, die man auch als erste Phase des „Zeitalter des Realismus" (Stockinger) bezeichnet hat, zu verfolgen, das den Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung bilden wird. Am Ende der Vorlesung gehen wir auf Spielarten der Moderne seit etwa 1890 ein.

Das Ziel dieser Vorlesung ist es, wichtige Bedingungen und Eigenheiten der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts überblicksartig zu vergegenwärtigen. Neben grundlegenden Charakteristika der Epoche (emblematisches Weltbild, Affektenlehre, Neustoizismus, Eschatologie, Konfessionalisierung etc.) werden drei Bereiche im Vordergrund stehen: Erstens gilt es, zentrale Werke und ihre Autoren im Zusammenhang mit der Reformpoetik und ihren Institutionen kennenzulernen. Dabei werden auch konkrete Textbeispiele – vorrangig aus dem deutschsprachigen Bereich, jedoch mit Ausblicken auf die Neulateinische Dichtung – vorgestellt. Zweitens sollen theoretische Aspekte in den Blick genommen werden, darunter neben den beliebtesten Gattungsmodellen und ihrer Normierung auch die rhetorischen und poetologischen Grundlagen zeitgenössischer Dichtungskonzeptionen. Drittens wird es darum gehen, die im deutschen Sprachraum entstandene Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts nach stilistischen, thematischen und historischen Kriterien im europäischen Kontext zu verorten, um ein problemorientiertes Epochenverständnis zu vermitteln.

Die intendierte Verdrängung des Alten durch das Neue gehört zum Selbstverständnis der Moderne. Meist wird diese lineare Überbietungserzählung einer kontinuierlichen kulturellen Verbesserung auf den menschheitlich-teleologischen Optimismus der Aufklärung zurückgeführt, der das zyklische Geschichtsverständnis der Antike ersetzt habe. Im Seminar werden wir uns mit vielfältig konzipierten Fortschrittserzählungen von der Antike über die Aufklärung bis hin zur aktuell verbreiteten Quarterlife Crisis befassen und durch möglichst genaue Lektüren versuchen, das Phantom des Fortschritts in seiner zeitbedingten Widersprüchlichkeit zu verstehen. Es wird deutlich werden, dass der scheinbar unbeirrbare Fortschrittsglaube der Moderne nicht erst in unserer Gegenwart mit ihren populären Untergangserzählungen und auch nicht erst seit Nietzsche, Adorno und Horkheimer, sondern bereits in der entscheidenden begriffsgeschichtlichen Phase der Aufklärung äußerst fragwürdig erscheint - und dadurch zeitübergreifend künstlerisch-intellektuelles Potential freisetzt.

Kommentar

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Im Seminar wird anhand ausgewählter Filmbeispiele die Befragung der Darstellungsweisen und der damit verbundenen Deutungen jüdischer Geschichte und Kultur nachgegangen, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der geschichtlichen Kontexte, in den die Filme entstanden sind.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Kommentar

124045 S - Digital Drama Analysis: Theory and Application

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft

Kommentar

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit vielen verschiedenen Themen rund um den Aufbau von deutschen Sätzen. Wir erörtern ausführlich, wie Verben die Form von Sätzen prägen; wir fragen, welche Abhängigkeiten zwischen einzelnen Satzteilen bestehen, und es geht Dinge wie Passiv, Tempus, Konjunktiv und Attribute.
Ein wesentlicher Fokus liegt auf der Satzanalyse. Mit syntaktischen Strukturbäumen machen wir den hierarchischen Aufbau von Sätzen sichtbar. Dabei legen wir besonderen Wert darauf, auch authentische Sätze analysieren zu können.

1	S	Do	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.16	15.10.2026	Christl Langer

Kommentar

Im Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit den Besonderheiten der Interaktion in schulischen Interaktionen und besonders mit der Interaktion im Klassenzimmer, die sich von alltäglicher Kommunikation in vielen Punkten unterscheidet (Breidenstein/Tyagunova 2022). Wir analysieren, wie Gespräche im Klassenzimmer organisiert sind – etwa hinsichtlich des Sprecher*innenwechsels (McHoul 1978), der sequenziellen Organisation (Mehan 1979) oder Reparaturverfahren (McHoul 1990). Wir schauen uns an, wie Lehrkräfte und Schüler*innen im Unterricht sprachlich und interaktional handeln, wie sie ihre Beiträge dabei bedeutungsvoll gestalten und welche sprachlichen und nicht-sprachlichen Mittel sie einsetzen, um ihre Beiträge bedeutungsvoll zu gestalten.

Nach einer Wiederholung der theoretischen Grundlagen und Methoden der Konversationsanalyse arbeiten wir mit Videodaten von Unterrichtsinteraktion, besprechen einschlägige Studien und führen gemeinsam Analysen durch. Parallel dazu entwickeln die Teilnehmer*innen ein eigenes Forschungsprojekt, das am Ende der Veranstaltung präsentiert und im Plenum dikutiert wird.

Voraussetzung

Teilnahmevoraussetzung ist eine grundlegende Bereitschaft zur Lektüre englischsprachiger Fachtexte und zur Arbeit in Projektgruppen. Es wird dringend empfohlen, das Seminar erst nach erfolgreichem Abschluss der sprachwissenschaftlichen Basismodule GER_BA_001 und GER_BA_002 zu belegen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar führt in zentrale Fragestellungen und Methoden der historischen Soziolinguistik des Deutschen ein. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Frage, wie gesellschaftliche Strukturen, soziale Gruppen und historische Kommunikationsbedingungen mit Sprachvariation und Sprachwandel zusammenhängen. Behandelt werden unter anderem soziale und regionale Variation, Mehrsprachigkeit und Sprachkontakt sowie Prozesse der Normierung und Standardisierung. Standardisierung wird dabei nicht allein als institutionell und normativ gesteuerter Prozess „von oben", sondern auch aus einer „bottom-up"-Perspektive betrachtet. Anhand unterschiedlicher historischer Quellen und Textsorten wie Briefen, Zeitungen und anderer Gebrauchstexte werden Möglichkeiten und Grenzen der Rekonstruktion vergangener Sprachverhältnisse diskutiert. Zugleich werden grundlegende Methoden der qualitativen und quantitativen Analyse historischer Sprachdaten und Korpora vermittelt und praktisch erprobt.

Was ist eigentlich Standardsprache? Seit wann gibt es sie und wie verhält sie sich zu sprachlicher Variation?

Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Wir beschäftigen uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Standardsprache, ihrer historischen Entwicklung und den Ideologien, die mit dem Standard verbunden sind. Anschließend widmen wir uns dem Verhältnis zwischen Standardsprache und Variation. Anhand verschiedener Fallstudien werden wir die Dimensionen der Variation systematisch erarbeiten und die Faktoren diskutieren, die zu Variation führen können oder geführt haben. Im letzten Teil des Seminars wenden wir das Gelernte an: wir formulieren eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine empirische Studie.

Kommentar

Im Projektseminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg als sprachlichem und kulturellem Phänomen. Ausgangspunkt ist die bestehende Webseite „Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg" des SVM (Zentrum Sprache - Variation - Mehrsprachigkeit) mit ihren unterschiedlichen Themenbereichen und Studierendenprojekten. Wir analysieren die vorhandenen Inhalte und Darstellungsformen und überlegen gemeinsam, an welchen Stellen die Webseite ergänzt oder weiterentwickelt werden kann. Anschließend werden eigene thematische Schwerpunkte gesetzt, Fragestellungen erarbeitet und diese anhand geeigneter Materialien, Daten oder Fallbeispiele analysiert. Die daraus entstehenden Ergebnisse werden adressatengerecht für die Webseite aufbereitet und tragen zu deren inhaltlicher und konzeptioneller Weiterentwicklung bei.

Kommentar

Dieses Projektseminar zu Linguistic Landscapes startet mit einer Einführung zu Hintergründen und empirischen Methoden der Erfassung, Merkmalsbestimmung und Auswertung vielfältiger sprachlicher und semiotischer Fundstücke im öffentlichen Raum. Schwerpunkt sind dabei Analysen dieser Diskurse aus linguistischer, kultureller und politischer Perspektive und damit verbundene Ableitungen. Eine prominente Rolle spielt in diesem Zusammenhang Mehrsprachigkeit in multilingualen Gesellschaften. Forschungsgegenstand ist beispielsweise der Status von Sprachen in unterschiedlichen Funktionen wie die Übermittlung informeller, institutioneller und werbender Botschaften durch sprachliche Praktiken wie Graffiti, Sticker, Plakate etc.

Im zweiten Teil des Seminars formulieren Teilnehmende eigene Forschungsfragen, denen sie in kleinen Feldforschungsprojekten in Berlin und Brandenburg nachgehen. Die Ergebnisse werden am Ende des Kurses vorgestellt und zusammengetragen. Die Einbindung und Nutzung der Potenziale von Linguistic Landscaping in regulären DaF/DaZ-Unterrichtsszenarien bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses.

Kommentar

Nach einem Überblick zu unterschiedlichen Schriftsystemen und Varianten des Analphabetismus erfolgt in diesem Seminar die Auseinandersetzung mit verschiedenen Stufen und Methoden der ein- und mehrsprachigen Alphabetisierung im Deutschen. Dabei kommt einer Betrachtung des Zusammenflusses von lautlichen, morphologischen und syntaktischen Prinzipien innerhalb der deutschen Orthografie eine besondere Rolle zu. Die Diskussion sowohl etablierter als auch innovativer Vermittlungsstrategien, die den Erwerb orthografischer Prinzipien unterstützen, bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses. Inwiefern Forschungsdesiderate in einschlägigen Lehrwerken umgesetzt werden und für welche Zielgruppen sie geeignete sind erkundet dieser Kurs ebenfalls.

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Die Semantik beschäftigt sich mit der Bedeutung sprachlicher Einheiten. Der Kurs schaut sich an, wie die Bedeutung von Wörtern und Sätzen zustande kommt und welche Erklärungsansätze dafür herangezogen werden können. Dabei werden u.a. semantische Beziehungen und der Aufbau des semantischen Teils des mentalen Lexikons diskutiert.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit vielen verschiedenen Themen rund um den Aufbau von deutschen Sätzen. Wir erörtern ausführlich, wie Verben die Form von Sätzen prägen; wir fragen, welche Abhängigkeiten zwischen einzelnen Satzteilen bestehen, und es geht Dinge wie Passiv, Tempus, Konjunktiv und Attribute.
Ein wesentlicher Fokus liegt auf der Satzanalyse. Mit syntaktischen Strukturbäumen machen wir den hierarchischen Aufbau von Sätzen sichtbar. Dabei legen wir besonderen Wert darauf, auch authentische Sätze analysieren zu können.

1	S	Do	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.16	15.10.2026	Christl Langer

Kommentar

Im Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit den Besonderheiten der Interaktion in schulischen Interaktionen und besonders mit der Interaktion im Klassenzimmer, die sich von alltäglicher Kommunikation in vielen Punkten unterscheidet (Breidenstein/Tyagunova 2022). Wir analysieren, wie Gespräche im Klassenzimmer organisiert sind – etwa hinsichtlich des Sprecher*innenwechsels (McHoul 1978), der sequenziellen Organisation (Mehan 1979) oder Reparaturverfahren (McHoul 1990). Wir schauen uns an, wie Lehrkräfte und Schüler*innen im Unterricht sprachlich und interaktional handeln, wie sie ihre Beiträge dabei bedeutungsvoll gestalten und welche sprachlichen und nicht-sprachlichen Mittel sie einsetzen, um ihre Beiträge bedeutungsvoll zu gestalten.

Nach einer Wiederholung der theoretischen Grundlagen und Methoden der Konversationsanalyse arbeiten wir mit Videodaten von Unterrichtsinteraktion, besprechen einschlägige Studien und führen gemeinsam Analysen durch. Parallel dazu entwickeln die Teilnehmer*innen ein eigenes Forschungsprojekt, das am Ende der Veranstaltung präsentiert und im Plenum dikutiert wird.

Voraussetzung

Teilnahmevoraussetzung ist eine grundlegende Bereitschaft zur Lektüre englischsprachiger Fachtexte und zur Arbeit in Projektgruppen. Es wird dringend empfohlen, das Seminar erst nach erfolgreichem Abschluss der sprachwissenschaftlichen Basismodule GER_BA_001 und GER_BA_002 zu belegen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar führt in zentrale Fragestellungen und Methoden der historischen Soziolinguistik des Deutschen ein. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Frage, wie gesellschaftliche Strukturen, soziale Gruppen und historische Kommunikationsbedingungen mit Sprachvariation und Sprachwandel zusammenhängen. Behandelt werden unter anderem soziale und regionale Variation, Mehrsprachigkeit und Sprachkontakt sowie Prozesse der Normierung und Standardisierung. Standardisierung wird dabei nicht allein als institutionell und normativ gesteuerter Prozess „von oben", sondern auch aus einer „bottom-up"-Perspektive betrachtet. Anhand unterschiedlicher historischer Quellen und Textsorten wie Briefen, Zeitungen und anderer Gebrauchstexte werden Möglichkeiten und Grenzen der Rekonstruktion vergangener Sprachverhältnisse diskutiert. Zugleich werden grundlegende Methoden der qualitativen und quantitativen Analyse historischer Sprachdaten und Korpora vermittelt und praktisch erprobt.

Kommentar

Was ist eigentlich Standardsprache? Seit wann gibt es sie und wie verhält sie sich zu sprachlicher Variation?

Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Wir beschäftigen uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Standardsprache, ihrer historischen Entwicklung und den Ideologien, die mit dem Standard verbunden sind. Anschließend widmen wir uns dem Verhältnis zwischen Standardsprache und Variation. Anhand verschiedener Fallstudien werden wir die Dimensionen der Variation systematisch erarbeiten und die Faktoren diskutieren, die zu Variation führen können oder geführt haben. Im letzten Teil des Seminars wenden wir das Gelernte an: wir formulieren eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine empirische Studie.

Kommentar

Im Projektseminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg als sprachlichem und kulturellem Phänomen. Ausgangspunkt ist die bestehende Webseite „Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg" des SVM (Zentrum Sprache - Variation - Mehrsprachigkeit) mit ihren unterschiedlichen Themenbereichen und Studierendenprojekten. Wir analysieren die vorhandenen Inhalte und Darstellungsformen und überlegen gemeinsam, an welchen Stellen die Webseite ergänzt oder weiterentwickelt werden kann. Anschließend werden eigene thematische Schwerpunkte gesetzt, Fragestellungen erarbeitet und diese anhand geeigneter Materialien, Daten oder Fallbeispiele analysiert. Die daraus entstehenden Ergebnisse werden adressatengerecht für die Webseite aufbereitet und tragen zu deren inhaltlicher und konzeptioneller Weiterentwicklung bei.

Kommentar

Dieses Projektseminar zu Linguistic Landscapes startet mit einer Einführung zu Hintergründen und empirischen Methoden der Erfassung, Merkmalsbestimmung und Auswertung vielfältiger sprachlicher und semiotischer Fundstücke im öffentlichen Raum. Schwerpunkt sind dabei Analysen dieser Diskurse aus linguistischer, kultureller und politischer Perspektive und damit verbundene Ableitungen. Eine prominente Rolle spielt in diesem Zusammenhang Mehrsprachigkeit in multilingualen Gesellschaften. Forschungsgegenstand ist beispielsweise der Status von Sprachen in unterschiedlichen Funktionen wie die Übermittlung informeller, institutioneller und werbender Botschaften durch sprachliche Praktiken wie Graffiti, Sticker, Plakate etc.

Im zweiten Teil des Seminars formulieren Teilnehmende eigene Forschungsfragen, denen sie in kleinen Feldforschungsprojekten in Berlin und Brandenburg nachgehen. Die Ergebnisse werden am Ende des Kurses vorgestellt und zusammengetragen. Die Einbindung und Nutzung der Potenziale von Linguistic Landscaping in regulären DaF/DaZ-Unterrichtsszenarien bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses.

Nach einem Überblick zu unterschiedlichen Schriftsystemen und Varianten des Analphabetismus erfolgt in diesem Seminar die Auseinandersetzung mit verschiedenen Stufen und Methoden der ein- und mehrsprachigen Alphabetisierung im Deutschen. Dabei kommt einer Betrachtung des Zusammenflusses von lautlichen, morphologischen und syntaktischen Prinzipien innerhalb der deutschen Orthografie eine besondere Rolle zu. Die Diskussion sowohl etablierter als auch innovativer Vermittlungsstrategien, die den Erwerb orthografischer Prinzipien unterstützen, bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses. Kommentar

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Kommentar

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Die Semantik beschäftigt sich mit der Bedeutung sprachlicher Einheiten. Der Kurs schaut sich an, wie die Bedeutung von Wörtern und Sätzen zustande kommt und welche Erklärungsansätze dafür herangezogen werden können. Dabei werden u.a. semantische Beziehungen und der Aufbau des semantischen Teils des mentalen Lexikons diskutiert.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit vielen verschiedenen Themen rund um den Aufbau von deutschen Sätzen. Wir erörtern ausführlich, wie Verben die Form von Sätzen prägen; wir fragen, welche Abhängigkeiten zwischen einzelnen Satzteilen bestehen, und es geht Dinge wie Passiv, Tempus, Konjunktiv und Attribute.
Ein wesentlicher Fokus liegt auf der Satzanalyse. Mit syntaktischen Strukturbäumen machen wir den hierarchischen Aufbau von Sätzen sichtbar. Dabei legen wir besonderen Wert darauf, auch authentische Sätze analysieren zu können.

1	S	Do	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.16	15.10.2026	Christl Langer

Kommentar

Im Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit den Besonderheiten der Interaktion in schulischen Interaktionen und besonders mit der Interaktion im Klassenzimmer, die sich von alltäglicher Kommunikation in vielen Punkten unterscheidet (Breidenstein/Tyagunova 2022). Wir analysieren, wie Gespräche im Klassenzimmer organisiert sind – etwa hinsichtlich des Sprecher*innenwechsels (McHoul 1978), der sequenziellen Organisation (Mehan 1979) oder Reparaturverfahren (McHoul 1990). Wir schauen uns an, wie Lehrkräfte und Schüler*innen im Unterricht sprachlich und interaktional handeln, wie sie ihre Beiträge dabei bedeutungsvoll gestalten und welche sprachlichen und nicht-sprachlichen Mittel sie einsetzen, um ihre Beiträge bedeutungsvoll zu gestalten.

Nach einer Wiederholung der theoretischen Grundlagen und Methoden der Konversationsanalyse arbeiten wir mit Videodaten von Unterrichtsinteraktion, besprechen einschlägige Studien und führen gemeinsam Analysen durch. Parallel dazu entwickeln die Teilnehmer*innen ein eigenes Forschungsprojekt, das am Ende der Veranstaltung präsentiert und im Plenum dikutiert wird.

Voraussetzung

Teilnahmevoraussetzung ist eine grundlegende Bereitschaft zur Lektüre englischsprachiger Fachtexte und zur Arbeit in Projektgruppen. Es wird dringend empfohlen, das Seminar erst nach erfolgreichem Abschluss der sprachwissenschaftlichen Basismodule GER_BA_001 und GER_BA_002 zu belegen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar führt in zentrale Fragestellungen und Methoden der historischen Soziolinguistik des Deutschen ein. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Frage, wie gesellschaftliche Strukturen, soziale Gruppen und historische Kommunikationsbedingungen mit Sprachvariation und Sprachwandel zusammenhängen. Behandelt werden unter anderem soziale und regionale Variation, Mehrsprachigkeit und Sprachkontakt sowie Prozesse der Normierung und Standardisierung. Standardisierung wird dabei nicht allein als institutionell und normativ gesteuerter Prozess „von oben", sondern auch aus einer „bottom-up"-Perspektive betrachtet. Anhand unterschiedlicher historischer Quellen und Textsorten wie Briefen, Zeitungen und anderer Gebrauchstexte werden Möglichkeiten und Grenzen der Rekonstruktion vergangener Sprachverhältnisse diskutiert. Zugleich werden grundlegende Methoden der qualitativen und quantitativen Analyse historischer Sprachdaten und Korpora vermittelt und praktisch erprobt.

Was ist eigentlich Standardsprache? Seit wann gibt es sie und wie verhält sie sich zu sprachlicher Variation?

124045 S - Digital Drama Analysis: Theory and Application

1	S	Di	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	13.10.2026	Dr. Luca Giovannini

Kommentar

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Im Projektseminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg als sprachlichem und kulturellem Phänomen. Ausgangspunkt ist die bestehende Webseite „Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg" des SVM (Zentrum Sprache - Variation - Mehrsprachigkeit) mit ihren unterschiedlichen Themenbereichen und Studierendenprojekten. Wir analysieren die vorhandenen Inhalte und Darstellungsformen und überlegen gemeinsam, an welchen Stellen die Webseite ergänzt oder weiterentwickelt werden kann. Anschließend werden eigene thematische Schwerpunkte gesetzt, Fragestellungen erarbeitet und diese anhand geeigneter Materialien, Daten oder Fallbeispiele analysiert. Die daraus entstehenden Ergebnisse werden adressatengerecht für die Webseite aufbereitet und tragen zu deren inhaltlicher und konzeptioneller Weiterentwicklung bei.

Nach einem Überblick zu unterschiedlichen Schriftsystemen und Varianten des Analphabetismus erfolgt in diesem Seminar die Auseinandersetzung mit verschiedenen Stufen und Methoden der ein- und mehrsprachigen Alphabetisierung im Deutschen. Dabei kommt einer Betrachtung des Zusammenflusses von lautlichen, morphologischen und syntaktischen Prinzipien innerhalb der deutschen Orthografie eine besondere Rolle zu. Die Diskussion sowohl etablierter als auch innovativer Vermittlungsstrategien, die den Erwerb orthografischer Prinzipien unterstützen, bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses. Inwiefern Forschungsdesiderate in einschlägigen Lehrwerken umgesetzt werden und für welche Zielgruppen sie geeignete sind erkundet dieser Kurs ebenfalls.

Kommentar

Dieses Projektseminar zu Linguistic Landscapes startet mit einer Einführung zu Hintergründen und empirischen Methoden der Erfassung, Merkmalsbestimmung und Auswertung vielfältiger sprachlicher und semiotischer Fundstücke im öffentlichen Raum. Schwerpunkt sind dabei Analysen dieser Diskurse aus linguistischer, kultureller und politischer Perspektive und damit verbundene Ableitungen. Eine prominente Rolle spielt in diesem Zusammenhang Mehrsprachigkeit in multilingualen Gesellschaften. Forschungsgegenstand ist beispielsweise der Status von Sprachen in unterschiedlichen Funktionen wie die Übermittlung informeller, institutioneller und werbender Botschaften durch sprachliche Praktiken wie Graffiti, Sticker, Plakate etc.

Im zweiten Teil des Seminars formulieren Teilnehmende eigene Forschungsfragen, denen sie in kleinen Feldforschungsprojekten in Berlin und Brandenburg nachgehen. Die Ergebnisse werden am Ende des Kurses vorgestellt und zusammengetragen. Die Einbindung und Nutzung der Potenziale von Linguistic Landscaping in regulären DaF/DaZ-Unterrichtsszenarien bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses.

In diesem Seminar geht es um die Wiederholung, Vertiefung, Festigung und Erweiterung von Morphologie , Syntax und Graphematik .

Ein Fokus liegt dabei erstens auf dem sinnentnehmenden Lesen und Verstehen der entsprechenden Fachliteratur sowie zweitens auf der direkten Anwendung des Gelernten durch Übungen.

Ziel ist, dass Sie sich sicherer durch die Grundlagen der deutschen Grammatik wie auch durch die Fachliteratur bewegen können.

Kommentar

Das Ziel des Seminars ist, anhand ausgewählter Gedichte aus verschiedenen Jahrhunderten Einblicke in die Formenvielfalt deutschsprachiger Lyrik zu erhalten und Grundkompetenzen für die Analyse lyrischer Gedichte zu erwerben und zu erproben. Zentrale Begriffe und Kategorien für die Beschreibung von Gedichten wie Vers, Rhythmus, Metapher oder Reim werden im Seminar eingeführt und an konkreten Gedichten erläutert. Drei methodisch unterschiedlich vorgehende Gedichtinterpretationen werden als Modellanalysen diskutiert.

Der Aufbau des Seminars gliedert sich in vier Analyseebenen von Lyrik: die lexikalisch-syntaktische Ebene, klanglich-rhythmische Ebene, die bildlich-metaphorische Ebene und die graphisch-visuelle Ebene. Im Verlauf des Seminars sind sechs Seminaraufgaben während einer Sitzung erfolgreich zu bearbeiten (unbenotet).

Die im Seminar erworbenen Kompetenzen werden im letzten Drittel des Seminars individuell getestet (unbenotet): Alle Teilnehmenden wählen aus einem vorgegebenen Textkorpus ein Gedicht aus, zu dem sie eine Analyse verfassen (drei Seiten). Diese wird anonym von einer anderen Person hinsichtlich ihrer Plausibilität kommentiert. Einige der Analysen werden am Semesterende gemeinsam besprochen.

Kommentar

Unterstreichen, markieren, kommentieren, strukturieren – es gibt viele Formen, Texte zu bearbeiten und mit zusätzlichen Informationen auszuzeichen. Diese Formen können Annotation genannt werden. Im Seminar steht also eine Methode im Zentrum, die Sie wahrscheinlich bereits zur Bearbeitung von Primär- und Sekundärtexten nutzen, die aber im Enprodukt Ihrer wissenschaftlichen Arbeit z.B. in Form einer Hausarbeit versteckt bleibt. Wir wollen diese Methode genauer unter die Lupe nehmen und den Prozess der Textbearbeitung und damit der Grundlage für die Argumentation und die Interpretation literarischer Texte transparent machen. Dafür fragen wir uns zuerst, was Annotationen sind, welche Ziele sie verfolgen und wie bei der Annotation vorgegangen wird.

Wir wollen darauf aufbauend praktisch arbeiten. Das heißt, wir annotieren Texte gemeinsam, diskutieren die Annotationen und gehen der Frage nach, wann das Verständnis einer Textstelle von unserer Interpretation abhängt und wann nicht.

Zuletzt stehen ihre Fragestellungen/Themen im Fokus, die Sie in Gruppen durch die Methode der Annotation bearbeiten.

Kommentar

Wolframs ‚Willehalm' (um 1210/20) ist eines der erfolgreichsten Epen des Mittelalters: Nicht nur überliefern 81 (!) teils bebilderte Handschriften dieses Epos, es entstanden auch Vorgeschichten und Fortsetzungen dieser Erzählung von Krieg, Liebe, Glaube und Verwandtschaft. Diese Aufzählung deutet an, dass es im ‚Willehalm' nicht nur um Krieg geht, sondern vor allem um all' die Fragen, die mit Krieg zusammenhängen: Was sind die Gründe dafür, dass Menschen einander töten, kann das Töten auf dem Schlachtfeld Ehre verschaffen? Was wären Alternativen zum oder Auswegen aus dem Krieg, was folgt aus ihm, vor allem für jene, die mit beiden Kriegsparteien verbunden sind und (wie) kann es gelingen, auch unter den Bedingungen von Krieg irgendwie menschlich zu bleiben? Wolfram von Eschenbach setzt sich mit diesen auf erschreckende Weise aktuellen Fragen auf komplexe Weise auseinander und verzichtet an vielen Stellen auf eindeutige Antworten. Wie lesen Auszüge aus Wolframs großer Erzählung vom Krieg, behandeln auf der Grundlage seiner altfranzösischen Vorlage seine Bearbeitungstendenzen und setzen uns mit den Handschriftenillustrationen auseinander.

Kommentar

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

121878 S - Jüdische Thematiken im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Mi	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.12.0.01	14.10.2026	Dr. Ulrike Schneider

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Im Seminar wird anhand ausgewählter Filmbeispiele die Befragung der Darstellungsweisen und der damit verbundenen Deutungen jüdischer Geschichte und Kultur nachgegangen, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der geschichtlichen Kontexte, in den die Filme entstanden sind.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

In der Vorlesung werden wir uns mit sprachlichen Strukturen beschäftigen. Dabei gehen wir von den kleinsten Bestandteilen – den Lauten und Buchstaben – aus und enden beim (einfachen) Satz. In der Fachsprache werden wir also Grundzüge der Phonologie, Graphematik, Morphologie und Syntax kennenlernen. Gemeinhin wird das als Grammatik bezeichnet, die Lexik hingegen wird häufig als der ‚gelernte' Teil (Vokabeln) verstanden – es geht also um die Möglichkeiten und die Grenzen der strukturellen Beschreibung.

Das Ende der DDR nutzten einige konservative westdeutsche Intellektuelle, aber auch ostdeutsche Autor:innen, die die DDR verlassen hatten, für ein Scherbengericht über die Literatur des untergegangen Landes. Eine pauschale Abwertung als „Gesinnungskitsch" konnte sich jedoch langfristig nicht durchsetzen: Auch mehr als 30 Jahre nach der Wiedervereinigung ist die DDR-Literatur keineswegs in Vergessenheit geraten, sondern wird weiterhin geschätzt, gelesen und erforscht.
Dabei hat sich eine differenzierte und kulturhistorisch informierte Perspektive etabliert: Der DDR-Literatur, hier zunächst heuristisch verstanden als Korpus literarischer Texte, die zwischen 1949 und 1989 von in der DDR sozialisierten und/oder dort lebenden Autor:innen verfasst wurden, kommt in der deutschsprachigen Literaturgeschichte des 20. Jahrhunderts ein besonderer Status zu: Zwar eng mit der westdeutschen Literaturgeschichte verflochten, zeichnet sich die DDR-Literatur durch spezifische Entstehungs-, Publikations- und Rezeptionskontexte aus, die sich deutlich von der Bundesrepublik unterscheiden. In diesem Sinne wollen wir im Seminar ausgewählte Texte wichtiger DDR-Autor:innen (u.a. Jurek Becker, Volker Braun, Franz Fühmann, Uwe Johnson, Sarah Kirsch, Brigitte Reimann, Christa Wolf) lesen, sie in literarische Traditionen und Diskussion einordnen und im Zusammenhang kulturpolitischer Stationen und Programmatiken (Formalismus-Debatte, Sozialistischer Realismus, Bitterfelder Weg, Kahlschlagplenum, Biermann-Ausbürgerung, Glasnost-Kulturpolitik) betrachten, um so ein angemessenes Verständnis und literarhistorisch fundierte Deutungsperspektiven zu erarbeiten.

Begleitend findet am 28./29. Januar 2027 am Potsdamer Einstein Forum der Workshop „Der Literaturbetrieb der DDR. Institutionen, Netzwerke und Strukturen" statt; der Besuch ausgewählter Vorträge ist Teil des Seminars.

Kommentar

Das Ziel des Seminars ist, anhand ausgewählter Gedichte aus verschiedenen Jahrhunderten Einblicke in die Formenvielfalt deutschsprachiger Lyrik zu erhalten und Grundkompetenzen für die Analyse lyrischer Gedichte zu erwerben und zu erproben. Zentrale Begriffe und Kategorien für die Beschreibung von Gedichten wie Vers, Rhythmus, Metapher oder Reim werden im Seminar eingeführt und an konkreten Gedichten erläutert. Drei methodisch unterschiedlich vorgehende Gedichtinterpretationen werden als Modellanalysen diskutiert.

Der Aufbau des Seminars gliedert sich in vier Analyseebenen von Lyrik: die lexikalisch-syntaktische Ebene, klanglich-rhythmische Ebene, die bildlich-metaphorische Ebene und die graphisch-visuelle Ebene. Im Verlauf des Seminars sind sechs Seminaraufgaben während einer Sitzung erfolgreich zu bearbeiten (unbenotet).

Die im Seminar erworbenen Kompetenzen werden im letzten Drittel des Seminars individuell getestet (unbenotet): Alle Teilnehmenden wählen aus einem vorgegebenen Textkorpus ein Gedicht aus, zu dem sie eine Analyse verfassen (drei Seiten). Diese wird anonym von einer anderen Person hinsichtlich ihrer Plausibilität kommentiert. Einige der Analysen werden am Semesterende gemeinsam besprochen.

Kommentar

Unterstreichen, markieren, kommentieren, strukturieren – es gibt viele Formen, Texte zu bearbeiten und mit zusätzlichen Informationen auszuzeichen. Diese Formen können Annotation genannt werden. Im Seminar steht also eine Methode im Zentrum, die Sie wahrscheinlich bereits zur Bearbeitung von Primär- und Sekundärtexten nutzen, die aber im Enprodukt Ihrer wissenschaftlichen Arbeit z.B. in Form einer Hausarbeit versteckt bleibt. Wir wollen diese Methode genauer unter die Lupe nehmen und den Prozess der Textbearbeitung und damit der Grundlage für die Argumentation und die Interpretation literarischer Texte transparent machen. Dafür fragen wir uns zuerst, was Annotationen sind, welche Ziele sie verfolgen und wie bei der Annotation vorgegangen wird.

Wir wollen darauf aufbauend praktisch arbeiten. Das heißt, wir annotieren Texte gemeinsam, diskutieren die Annotationen und gehen der Frage nach, wann das Verständnis einer Textstelle von unserer Interpretation abhängt und wann nicht.

Zuletzt stehen ihre Fragestellungen/Themen im Fokus, die Sie in Gruppen durch die Methode der Annotation bearbeiten.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Gerade Frauen waren politisch in ihrer Publizistik. Mit welchen Themen haben sie sich beschäftigt, unter welchen Bedingungen, welche publizistischen Formate und Tricks haben sie genutzt um ihre Stimmen hörbar zu machen? Manche der Texte von politischen Publizistischen aus dem 19. jahrhundert scheinen uns in ihren Forderungen und auch in ihrem Stil modern und brandaktuell, wirken aber heutzutage in der Öffentlichkeit unter Goethes et al. Sockel begraben zu liegen. Drei zu ihren Lebzeiten sehr bekannte Publizistinnen (Huber, Assing und v. Arnim) werden wir kennenlernen. Wir werden diese Texte entdecken, ihre interessanten Ideen kennenlernen und sie gemeinsam wiederbeleben, denn die Publizistinnen von damals sind in ihrer Unverzagtheit und in ihrem Widerstand gegen rechte Kräfte Vorbilder für heute.

Mediävistische Einführungsseminare stellen das Wissen bereit, das notwendig ist, um deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters lesen, verstehen und wissenschaftlich beschreiben zu können. Anhand ausgewählter Texte ist einerseits kultur- und literaturwissenschaftliches Grundwissen zu erarbeiten, andererseits soll das Mittelhochdeutsche erlernt und das Übersetzen geübt werden. Das Seminar ist entsprechend für Anfänger (bis zum max. 4. Fachsemester), nicht für Fortgeschrittene konzipiert.

Das Seminar führt in grundlegende Begriffe, Fragestellungen und Vorgehensweisen ein, die für die literaturwissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur seit ca. 1750 relevant sind. Diskutiert und erprobt werden diese anhand von individuell zu lesenden literarischen Texten aus den 1960er Jahren (BRD, DDR, Österreich). Lernziel ist, anhand konkreter Texte wichtige Aspekte und Praktiken literaturwissenschaftlichen Arbeitens kennenzulernen und zu reflektieren. Der Aufbau des Seminars orientiert sich an den vier literarischen Hauptgattungen: Erzähllliteratur (Epik), Lyrik, Dramatik und literarische Gebrauchsformen (wie Brief, Essay oder Reisebericht). Diese vier Hauptgattungen werden jeweils in ihren charakteristischen Merkmalen und Analysekategorien eingeführt. Weiterhin werden allgemeine Fragen des Literaturbegriffs, der Methodik und der Literaturgeschichtsschreibung behandelt.

Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende vor allem des ersten und zweiten Semesters. Für eine erfolgreiche Teilnahme sind die Lektüre der behandelten Texte und die erfolgreiche Bearbeitung einer Anwendungsaufgabe (ca. 15 min) an sechs angegebenen Seminarterminen (unbenotet; max. zwei verpasste oder nicht bestandene Seminaraufgaben können in der letzten Seminarsitzung wiederholt werden).

Kommentar

Das Ziel dieser Veranstaltung ist es, anhand von ausgewählten Textbeispielen aus dem 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhundert in die Literatur der Frühen Neuzeit einzuführen. Einen zentralen Ansatzpunkt bildet dabei die Frage, warum man die Frühe Neuzeit als ‚rhetorisches Zeitalter' bezeichnen kann, und zwar nicht nur in Bezug auf die Textproduktion. Im Einzelnen geht es um formale Gesichtspunkte wie beliebte Gattungen, um metrische und stilistische Eigenheiten sowie um bevorzugte Themen. Außerdem kommen Fragen der Normierung zur Sprache, und zwar sowohl in theoretischer Hinsicht (Rhetorik und Poetik) als auch in sozialgeschichtlicher Hinsicht (Mäzenatentum und Gebrauchsdichtung). Schlaglichtartig bietet der Kurs eine Einführung in die spezifischen Hilfsmittel der germanistischen Frühneuzeitforschung, d.h. in nützliche Wörterbücher und Nachschlagewerke, Datenbanken, Kataloge und Internetseiten sowie in den wissenschaftlichen Umgang mit frühneuzeitlichen Quellen (Frakturschrift, Besonderheiten im Druckbild, Abkürzungen etc.).

Die Vorlesung führt problemorientiert in zentrale Begriffe, Gegenstände, Fragestellungen und Methoden der germanistischen Literaturwissenschaft ein. Lernziel ist, einen aspektreichen Überblick über die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit deutschsprachiger Literatur in systematischer wie historischer Hinsicht zu gewinnen. Die Vorlesung ist in drei Abschnitte untergliedert:

1. systematischer Zugriff: Womit beschäftigt sich (germanistische) Literaturwissenschaft?

2. historischer Zugriff: Welche Veränderungen durchliefen die deutschsprachige Literatur und die wissenschaftliche Beschäftigung mit ihr im Laufe der Jahrhunderte?

3. methodologischer Zugriff: Wie geht man literaturwissenschaftlich vor?

Der Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung liegt auf der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 18. bis 21. Jahrhunderts, punktuell werden auch Aspekte früherer Literaturepochen berücksichtigt. Die Vorlesung schließt mit einer Klausur ab, diese ist zugleich die Modulprüfung für das gesamte Basismodul GER_BA_006. Sie findet am 9. Juli um 16.15 Uhr statt. Ich empfehle, die Vorlesung nicht vor dem zweiten Fachsemester zu besuchen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit vielen verschiedenen Themen rund um den Aufbau von deutschen Sätzen. Wir erörtern ausführlich, wie Verben die Form von Sätzen prägen; wir fragen, welche Abhängigkeiten zwischen einzelnen Satzteilen bestehen, und es geht Dinge wie Passiv, Tempus, Konjunktiv und Attribute.
Ein wesentlicher Fokus liegt auf der Satzanalyse. Mit syntaktischen Strukturbäumen machen wir den hierarchischen Aufbau von Sätzen sichtbar. Dabei legen wir besonderen Wert darauf, auch authentische Sätze analysieren zu können.

122265 S - Sprechen, Handeln, Lernen – Konversationsanalyse schulischer Interaktion

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Do	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.16	15.10.2026	Christl Langer

Kommentar

Im Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit den Besonderheiten der Interaktion in schulischen Interaktionen und besonders mit der Interaktion im Klassenzimmer, die sich von alltäglicher Kommunikation in vielen Punkten unterscheidet (Breidenstein/Tyagunova 2022). Wir analysieren, wie Gespräche im Klassenzimmer organisiert sind – etwa hinsichtlich des Sprecher*innenwechsels (McHoul 1978), der sequenziellen Organisation (Mehan 1979) oder Reparaturverfahren (McHoul 1990). Wir schauen uns an, wie Lehrkräfte und Schüler*innen im Unterricht sprachlich und interaktional handeln, wie sie ihre Beiträge dabei bedeutungsvoll gestalten und welche sprachlichen und nicht-sprachlichen Mittel sie einsetzen, um ihre Beiträge bedeutungsvoll zu gestalten.

Nach einer Wiederholung der theoretischen Grundlagen und Methoden der Konversationsanalyse arbeiten wir mit Videodaten von Unterrichtsinteraktion, besprechen einschlägige Studien und führen gemeinsam Analysen durch. Parallel dazu entwickeln die Teilnehmer*innen ein eigenes Forschungsprojekt, das am Ende der Veranstaltung präsentiert und im Plenum dikutiert wird.

Voraussetzung

Teilnahmevoraussetzung ist eine grundlegende Bereitschaft zur Lektüre englischsprachiger Fachtexte und zur Arbeit in Projektgruppen. Es wird dringend empfohlen, das Seminar erst nach erfolgreichem Abschluss der sprachwissenschaftlichen Basismodule GER_BA_001 und GER_BA_002 zu belegen.

Im Kurs geht es um die Frage, wie wir Sprache über die eigentliche Bedeutung hinaus verwenden. Nach der Festigung der pragmatischen Grundlagen wird es neben der Diskursstruktur v.a. um textlinguistische Aspekte gehen, wobei Zusammenhänge innerhalb von Texten sowie die Kennzeichen von Textsorten herausgearbeitet werden sollen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar führt in zentrale Fragestellungen und Methoden der historischen Soziolinguistik des Deutschen ein. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Frage, wie gesellschaftliche Strukturen, soziale Gruppen und historische Kommunikationsbedingungen mit Sprachvariation und Sprachwandel zusammenhängen. Behandelt werden unter anderem soziale und regionale Variation, Mehrsprachigkeit und Sprachkontakt sowie Prozesse der Normierung und Standardisierung. Standardisierung wird dabei nicht allein als institutionell und normativ gesteuerter Prozess „von oben", sondern auch aus einer „bottom-up"-Perspektive betrachtet. Anhand unterschiedlicher historischer Quellen und Textsorten wie Briefen, Zeitungen und anderer Gebrauchstexte werden Möglichkeiten und Grenzen der Rekonstruktion vergangener Sprachverhältnisse diskutiert. Zugleich werden grundlegende Methoden der qualitativen und quantitativen Analyse historischer Sprachdaten und Korpora vermittelt und praktisch erprobt.

m Mittelpunkt des Seminars steht die Variation der Sprache auf dem Gebiet der ehemaligen DDR. Dazu werden sprachliche Erhebungen aus den 1960er Jahren ausgewertet. Thematisiert wird auch die Frage danach, welche gesellschaftlichen und politischen Hintergründe zu der Zuschreibung „Ostdeutsch" geführt haben und auf welchem Stand die sprachliche Einheit Deutschlands steht.

Was ist eigentlich Standardsprache? Seit wann gibt es sie und wie verhält sie sich zu sprachlicher Variation?

Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Wir beschäftigen uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Standardsprache, ihrer historischen Entwicklung und den Ideologien, die mit dem Standard verbunden sind. Anschließend widmen wir uns dem Verhältnis zwischen Standardsprache und Variation. Anhand verschiedener Fallstudien werden wir die Dimensionen der Variation systematisch erarbeiten und die Faktoren diskutieren, die zu Variation führen können oder geführt haben. Im letzten Teil des Seminars wenden wir das Gelernte an: wir formulieren eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine empirische Studie.

Im Projektseminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg als sprachlichem und kulturellem Phänomen. Ausgangspunkt ist die bestehende Webseite „Mehrsprachigkeit in Brandenburg" des SVM (Zentrum Sprache - Variation - Mehrsprachigkeit) mit ihren unterschiedlichen Themenbereichen und Studierendenprojekten. Wir analysieren die vorhandenen Inhalte und Darstellungsformen und überlegen gemeinsam, an welchen Stellen die Webseite ergänzt oder weiterentwickelt werden kann. Anschließend werden eigene thematische Schwerpunkte gesetzt, Fragestellungen erarbeitet und diese anhand geeigneter Materialien, Daten oder Fallbeispiele analysiert. Die daraus entstehenden Ergebnisse werden adressatengerecht für die Webseite aufbereitet und tragen zu deren inhaltlicher und konzeptioneller Weiterentwicklung bei.

Kommentar

Dieses Projektseminar zu Linguistic Landscapes startet mit einer Einführung zu Hintergründen und empirischen Methoden der Erfassung, Merkmalsbestimmung und Auswertung vielfältiger sprachlicher und semiotischer Fundstücke im öffentlichen Raum. Schwerpunkt sind dabei Analysen dieser Diskurse aus linguistischer, kultureller und politischer Perspektive und damit verbundene Ableitungen. Eine prominente Rolle spielt in diesem Zusammenhang Mehrsprachigkeit in multilingualen Gesellschaften. Forschungsgegenstand ist beispielsweise der Status von Sprachen in unterschiedlichen Funktionen wie die Übermittlung informeller, institutioneller und werbender Botschaften durch sprachliche Praktiken wie Graffiti, Sticker, Plakate etc.

Im zweiten Teil des Seminars formulieren Teilnehmende eigene Forschungsfragen, denen sie in kleinen Feldforschungsprojekten in Berlin und Brandenburg nachgehen. Die Ergebnisse werden am Ende des Kurses vorgestellt und zusammengetragen. Die Einbindung und Nutzung der Potenziale von Linguistic Landscaping in regulären DaF/DaZ-Unterrichtsszenarien bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses.

Kommentar

Nach einem Überblick zu unterschiedlichen Schriftsystemen und Varianten des Analphabetismus erfolgt in diesem Seminar die Auseinandersetzung mit verschiedenen Stufen und Methoden der ein- und mehrsprachigen Alphabetisierung im Deutschen. Dabei kommt einer Betrachtung des Zusammenflusses von lautlichen, morphologischen und syntaktischen Prinzipien innerhalb der deutschen Orthografie eine besondere Rolle zu. Die Diskussion sowohl etablierter als auch innovativer Vermittlungsstrategien, die den Erwerb orthografischer Prinzipien unterstützen, bildet einen weiteren Schwerpunkt des Kurses. Inwiefern Forschungsdesiderate in einschlägigen Lehrwerken umgesetzt werden und für welche Zielgruppen sie geeignete sind erkundet dieser Kurs ebenfalls.

Kommentar

Wolframs ‚Willehalm' (um 1210/20) ist eines der erfolgreichsten Epen des Mittelalters: Nicht nur überliefern 81 (!) teils bebilderte Handschriften dieses Epos, es entstanden auch Vorgeschichten und Fortsetzungen dieser Erzählung von Krieg, Liebe, Glaube und Verwandtschaft. Diese Aufzählung deutet an, dass es im ‚Willehalm' nicht nur um Krieg geht, sondern vor allem um all' die Fragen, die mit Krieg zusammenhängen: Was sind die Gründe dafür, dass Menschen einander töten, kann das Töten auf dem Schlachtfeld Ehre verschaffen? Was wären Alternativen zum oder Auswegen aus dem Krieg, was folgt aus ihm, vor allem für jene, die mit beiden Kriegsparteien verbunden sind und (wie) kann es gelingen, auch unter den Bedingungen von Krieg irgendwie menschlich zu bleiben? Wolfram von Eschenbach setzt sich mit diesen auf erschreckende Weise aktuellen Fragen auf komplexe Weise auseinander und verzichtet an vielen Stellen auf eindeutige Antworten. Wie lesen Auszüge aus Wolframs großer Erzählung vom Krieg, behandeln auf der Grundlage seiner altfranzösischen Vorlage seine Bearbeitungstendenzen und setzen uns mit den Handschriftenillustrationen auseinander.

Kommentar

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wollen wir die literarhistorische Entwicklung des Stoffes am Beispiel folgender Texte nachverfolgen: des mittelhochdeutschen Reinhart Fuchs von ca. 1180, des niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs von 1498 (in Übersetzung) und (auszugsweise, weil er inhaltlich mit dem niederdeutschen Reineke Fuchs übereinstimmt) dem Reineke Fuchs Goethes von 1794. Dabei fragen wir vor allem nach den Verlaufslinien der Entwicklung auf Figuren-, Motiv- und Strukturebene. Die Texte liegen komfortabel aufbereitet und kommentiert in Reclam-Ausgaben vor.

Gegenwartsliteratur steht heutzutage in einem prekären Verhältnis zu anderen (Freizeit-)Medien. Anhand eines ambitionierten Fallbeispiels wollen wir untersuchen, wie das Buch-Medium auf unsere multimediale Gegenwart reagiert. »Miami Punk« (2019) von Juan S. Guse liest sich wie ein Videospiel (Moll/Weber 2023) und erzählt von Bewohner:innen einer unserer Realität entrückten Stadt, die von einer schleichenden Naturkatastrophe gezeichnet wurde. Zusätzlich wuchert »Miami Punk« über die klassische Romanform hinaus: als im Buch versteckte URLs, als Social-Media-Accounts, insbesondere als Hörspiel-Spiel »Miami Punk: The complete DLC«.

Bitte besorgen Sie sich vor Seminarbeginn die dieses Jahr im S. Fischer Verlag erschienene Taschenbuchausgabe von »Miami Punk«. Alle weiteren Medien werden bereitgestellt.

Schlagwörter: Videospiel-Nostalgie, Glitches, Bullshit Jobs, Open World, Naturkatastrophe, experimentelle Gegenwartsliteratur

Kommentar

Die Vorlesung will einen ersten Einblick in wichtige Stationen der deutschsprachigen Literatur des – so der Historiker Hobsbawm – „langen 19. Jahrhunderts" geben. Gemeint ist damit eine bei allen Veränderungen erkennbare Kontinuität von Problemen und Themen aus der Zeit von 1789 (Beginn der Französischen Revolution) bis 1914 (Ausbruch des Ersten Weltkriegs). In der Vorlesung werden wir wichtige Aspekte der romantischen Literatur aufarbeiten, um dann die Zeit des Vormärz und des Nachmärz, die man auch als erste Phase des „Zeitalter des Realismus" (Stockinger) bezeichnet hat, zu verfolgen, das den Schwerpunkt der Vorlesung bilden wird. Am Ende der Vorlesung gehen wir auf Spielarten der Moderne seit etwa 1890 ein.

Das Ziel dieser Vorlesung ist es, wichtige Bedingungen und Eigenheiten der deutschsprachigen Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts überblicksartig zu vergegenwärtigen. Neben grundlegenden Charakteristika der Epoche (emblematisches Weltbild, Affektenlehre, Neustoizismus, Eschatologie, Konfessionalisierung etc.) werden drei Bereiche im Vordergrund stehen: Erstens gilt es, zentrale Werke und ihre Autoren im Zusammenhang mit der Reformpoetik und ihren Institutionen kennenzulernen. Dabei werden auch konkrete Textbeispiele – vorrangig aus dem deutschsprachigen Bereich, jedoch mit Ausblicken auf die Neulateinische Dichtung – vorgestellt. Zweitens sollen theoretische Aspekte in den Blick genommen werden, darunter neben den beliebtesten Gattungsmodellen und ihrer Normierung auch die rhetorischen und poetologischen Grundlagen zeitgenössischer Dichtungskonzeptionen. Drittens wird es darum gehen, die im deutschen Sprachraum entstandene Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts nach stilistischen, thematischen und historischen Kriterien im europäischen Kontext zu verorten, um ein problemorientiertes Epochenverständnis zu vermitteln.

Die intendierte Verdrängung des Alten durch das Neue gehört zum Selbstverständnis der Moderne. Meist wird diese lineare Überbietungserzählung einer kontinuierlichen kulturellen Verbesserung auf den menschheitlich-teleologischen Optimismus der Aufklärung zurückgeführt, der das zyklische Geschichtsverständnis der Antike ersetzt habe. Im Seminar werden wir uns mit vielfältig konzipierten Fortschrittserzählungen von der Antike über die Aufklärung bis hin zur aktuell verbreiteten Quarterlife Crisis befassen und durch möglichst genaue Lektüren versuchen, das Phantom des Fortschritts in seiner zeitbedingten Widersprüchlichkeit zu verstehen. Es wird deutlich werden, dass der scheinbar unbeirrbare Fortschrittsglaube der Moderne nicht erst in unserer Gegenwart mit ihren populären Untergangserzählungen und auch nicht erst seit Nietzsche, Adorno und Horkheimer, sondern bereits in der entscheidenden begriffsgeschichtlichen Phase der Aufklärung äußerst fragwürdig erscheint - und dadurch zeitübergreifend künstlerisch-intellektuelles Potential freisetzt.

Ein literarischer Text, den wir in einem Buch oder im Internet lesen, ist in der Regel das Endproduktion eines längeren Prozesses von Entwürfen, Änderungen, Streichungen und weiteren Bearbeitungsstufen. Dieser Entstehungsprozess des Textes bis zur gültigen Endfassung wird als Textgenese bezeichnet. Abhängig davon, wie viele dieser Entwürfe und Fassungen eines Textes überliefert worden sind, lassen sich anhand der Textgenese die gedankliche und sprachliche Arbeit der Autorin bzw. des Autors sowie Änderungen in der Konzeption oder im Stil eines Textes nachvollziehen und gegebenenfalls Perspektiven für die Interpretation des Endproduktes (des 'Textes') gewinnen. Jeder Text hat in diesem Sinne eine Vorgeschichte, die kennenzulernen interessant und aufschlussreich ist.

Das in Kooperation mit der Leiterin des Literaturarchivs der Akademie der Künste (Berlin) Dr. Gabriele Radecke durchgeführte Seminar wird anhand von Gedichten und kurzen Prosatexten von Eva Strittmatter, Elke Erb und Thomas Brasch v.a. aus den 1970er Jahren in die Grundlagen der Darstellung der Textgenese und der analytisch-interpretatorischen Arbeit mit ihr einführen. Um mit Originaldokumenten früher Textfassungen umgehen zu können, werden einige Seminarsitzungen im Literaturarchiv der Akademie der Künste (Robert-Koch-Platz 10, Berlin-Mitte) stattfinden; die Teilnahme an diesen Archiv-Terminen ist Pflicht.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Zur deutschsprachigen Reiseliteratur des 14. Jahrhunderts gehören sowohl rein fiktionale Texte, die neben Berichten von Wundervölkern auch legendarische Figuren, wie den Priesterkönig Johannes, in den Fokus setzen, als auch literarisch überarbeitete Berichte von tatsächlich stattgefundenen (Pilger-)Reisen ins Heilige Land. Wir werden uns in dem Semester mit zwei Reisetexten beschäftigen (die ‚Reisen' des Jean de Mandeville, in der Bearbeitung von Otto von Diemeringen und Marco Polos Reisebericht in der mitteldeutschen Bearbeitung). Im Mittelpunkt unserer Diskussionen werden Fragen der Fremderfahrung, Identität, der kulturellen Konzeption des Reisens in der Literatur der Vormoderne und die Frage nach den Formen des Wissens stehen, die diese Texte präsentieren.

Can we measure drama, and what happens when we 'count' a play instead of reading it? This seminar introduces students to digital methods for the analysis of dramatic texts. No prior knowledge of digital humanities or programming is required .

In a first block, we cover the foundations of computational literary studies: the idea of "distant reading", literary texts as structured data (TEI/XML), basic quantitative text analysis, and the concept of operationalisation: how do we translate a literary-theoretical concept into something a computer can measure?

The second block puts this into practice. Using DraCor (dracor.org), an open platform hosting thousands of encoded plays, we work through some classic theories of drama -- from Aristotle's ideas to Gustav Freytag's dramatic pyramid, from the 'quantitative formalism' approaches of Boris Yarkho and Solomon Marcus to Franco Moretti's network theory of plot. Each theory session (student presentation + plenary discussion) is followed the next week by a hands-on session in which we test the theory against real data using prepared, click-through Colab notebooks. Again, no programming skills are required.

By the end of the seminar, students will be able to read foundational texts of drama theory critically, understand how theoretical concepts can (and cannot) be operationalised, and carry out small guided digital analyses of dramatic texts.

Auf der Grundlage einer Unterrichtssequenz zum seminarspezifischen Gegenstand (Epik, Lyrik, Dramatik) durchlaufen die Studierenden in allen Modellierungsseminaren beispielhaft den Planungsprozess einer Unterrichtsstunde. Sie vertiefen damit ihre Kenntnisse und Fa#higkeiten zur schu#lerorientierten und gegenstandsgerechten Strukturierung und Gestaltung von Literaturunterricht. Sie lernen zudem, die Arbeitsergebnisse im schriftlichen Unterrichtsentwurf darzustellen. Die Erarbeitung der Seminarergebnisse findet kontinuierlich und kooperativ statt.

Kommentar

Ziel der Lehrveranstaltung ist es, sprachliches Lernen verständlich zu machen, um sprachbezogene Lernprozesse im Deutschunterricht gezielt planen zu können. Dazu vermittelt das Seminar im ersten Drittel allgemeine lern- und motivationspsychologische Kenntnisse, die im zweiten Drittel auf sprachliches Lernen bezogen und im dritten Drittel auf die Kompetenzfelder des Deutschunterrichts angewendet werden. Anspruch des Seminars ist es, den Teilnehmenden einen fundierten Überblick über den muttersprachlichen Kompetenzerwerb zu vermitteln und so spätere Unterrichtsplanungen auf ein solides theoretisches, aber dennoch praktisch handhabbares Fundament zu stellen.

Kommentar

Gruppe 1 - Herr Granzow-Emden:

Allgemein bezeichnet das Wort Aufgabe „etwas, das jemandem zu tun aufgegeben ist". Eine speziellere Bedeutung hat es in der Schule als ein „dem Denken aufgegebenes Problem". Die Auswahl dessen, was hier aufgegeben wird, trifft die Didaktik in ihrem Kern: An den Aufgaben zeigen sich ganz praktisch die Unterschiede, wie ein Wissensbereich theoretisch gedacht wird. Im Seminar wollen wir uns anhand praktischer Aufgaben für die Schule der faszinierenden Welt unserer Sprache zuwenden. Dabei geht es nicht um grammatische Regeln oder das Bewerten von Schülerinnen und Schülern, sondern um das Entdecken der Muster, die in der Sprache lebendig sind.

Gruppe 2 - Herr Granzow-Emden:

Wer sich für eine Sprache als Schulfach entscheidet, bekommt es früher oder später auch mit ihrer Grammatik zu tun. Die Erinnerungen an den selbst erlebten Grammatikunterricht lösen nicht bei allen Lehramtsstudierenden Vorfreude aus. Dieses Seminar möchte dazu beitragen, mit der Grammatik die in der Sprache gewachsene und in der Schrift kultivierte Schönheit in einer neuen Weise sehen zu lernen: Als ein Modell, mit dem wir die Formen und Funktionen und mit ihnen die sprachlichen Muster sichtbar machen können. Damit solche Modelle eine gute Orientierung in der Sprache ermöglichen, ist es sinnvoll, sich von unangemessenen Vorstellungen in den seit jeher tradierten schulgrammatischen Wissensbeständen zu lösen und neue Erkenntnisse einzubeziehen, mit denen sich das Sprachsystem angemessener darstellen lässt.

Gruppe 3 - Herr Müller:

Der Kompetenzbereich Schreiben bildet einen Kernbereich des Deutschunterrichts, weil er weit mehr beinhaltet, als die eigenen Gedanken in angemessener schriftlicher Form niederzulegen. Vielmehr muss Schreiben als eine eigene Form der Wissenserschließung aufgefasst werden, die für Schreibende oft ähnlich große Erkenntnisgewinne mit sich bringt wie für die Lesenden. Im Seminar werden wir uns den Schreibprozess als kognitionspsychologisches Problem ansehen und exemplarisch Unterrichtsreihen zur Schreibförderung entwickeln. Ziel des Seminars ist es, Techniken der Unterrichtsplanung kennen zu lernen und am Beispiel Schreiben praktisch zu erproben.

Je eine Kleingruppe von 5 Studierenden übernimmt – nach Vorbereitungsveranstaltungen – für zwei bis drei Wochen den Deutschunterricht einer Klasse in Schulen in Potsdam, Berlin und Umland zu einer vorgegebenen literaturspezifischen Thematik. Die Lehrveranstaltung setzt sich zusammen aus: Planungsgesprächen in der Kleingruppe, Gestaltung je einer Unterrichtsstunde oder eines Unterrichtsblocks durch jede/n Studierende/n und Auswertungsgesprächen in der Kleingruppe.

Für die Anerkennung der FTP ist die Teilnahme an allen Terminen/Veranstaltungen in der zugelassenen Gruppe verpflichtend. Melden Sie sich also bitte nur zu einer Gruppe an, deren Termine Sie wahrnehmen können. Vermeiden Sie zudem Überschneidungen mit anderen FTPs! Empfehlungen zur Studienverlaufsplanung der fachdidaktischen Lehrveranstaltungen im Bachelor finden Sie auf der Seite der Germanistik unter Studium & Lehre - Schulpraktische Studien (SPS). Die FTP in der Literaturdidaktik können entweder als semesterbegleitender Kurs oder als Blockveranstaltung in der lehrveranstaltungsfreien Zeit absolviert werden. Es ist erforderlich, dass alle Studierenden der jeweiligen Gruppe die festgelegten Termine in der Schule wahrnehmen. Diese werden entsprechend den Unterrichtstafeln der Schulen besucht und können gegebenenfalls aus schulorganisatorischen Gründen angepasst werden. Bitte beachten Sie dies bei Ihrer Planung.

Kommentar

Dies ist der Kommentar für alle SPS-Kurse in der Sprachdidaktik.

Die SPS in der Sprachdidaktik können auf zwei Wegen absolviert werden:

- als Blockveranstaltung in den Semesterferien
- als semesterbegleitender Kurs

1. Blockveranstaltungen

Die Blockveranstaltungen finden in folgenden Zeiträumen statt:

- Block 1: 8.2.–26.2.2027

- Block 2: 1.3. – 19.3.2027

Die FTP-Gruppen (i.d.R. 5 Teilnehmende) werden von Mitarbeiter/innen der Sprachdidaktik oder Lehrerkräften aus Potsdam, Berlin oder dem nahen Umland betreut. Zusätzlich zu den 3 Praktiumswochen sollten in Absprache mit den Betreuer/innen Termine für Vorbesprechungen eingeplant werden. Die Anwesenheit an allen FTP-Terminen ist verpflichtend. Vermeiden Sie daher Überschneidungen mit anderen FTP!

Hinweis zur Anmeldung:

Bitte melden Sie sich zu Beginn des Einschreibezeitraumes möglichst schnell an, damit wir den Bedarf kennen und Absprachen treffen können. Mehrfachanmeldungen mit Angabe der Priorität sind willkommen. Wer im kommenden Semester in den Master wechseln möchte, sollte besser den ersten Zeitraum wählen. Näheres zum Verfahren wird in einer Rundmail während des Einschreibezeitraumes mitgeteilt.

Bitte melden Sie zusätzlich bei Ihrem ersten FTP ein Portfolio zur Notenverbuchung Ihrer Modulnote bei Frau Anne Neumann (Literaturdidaktik) an, weil sie die Endnote auf Ihr FTP verbucht.

2. Semesterbegleitende Kurse

Die übrigen PULS-Gruppen sind semesterbegleitende Kurse die von je einem/einer Mitarbeiter/innen der Fachdidaktiken angeboten werden. Jeder Kurs besteht in der Regel aus 5 Teilnehmenden, sodass deutlich weniger Studierenden ein semesterbegleitender Platz angeboten werden kann.

Achtung! Die Auswahl zur Zulassung erfolgt streng nach den Regeln der Studien- und Zulassungsordnung und wir bitten dringend , von Zulassungsgesuchen an die Seminarleiter/innen abzusehen, sofern Sie nicht unter die Härtefallregelung fallen und dies mit einer entsprechenden Bescheinigung nachweisen können.

Kommentar

Das um 1200 entstandene Nibelungenlied gehört zu den großartigsten Texten des Hochmittelalters, der nach zwei Jahrhunderten der Erforschung immer noch viele Fragen und Rätsel aufgibt. Grund dafür ist die Komplexität dieses Heldenepos, das einerseits höfischen Glanz, Minne-Szenarien und spielerisch-lebhafte Dialoge, andererseits heroische Ausnahmegestalten, zugespitzte Konflikte und Gewalteskalationen bis hin zum Untergang bietet. Neben dem Drachentöter Siegfried, dem höfischen König Gunther und dem ebenso treuen wie untreuen Hagen von Tronje dominieren mit Kriemhild und Brünhild zwei außergewöhnliche Frauenfiguren die Erzählung: Brünhilds exorbitante Stärke und Kriemhilds radikale Rache ermöglichen beiden ein Gewalthandeln, das sich zeitgenössischen Weiblichkeitskonstrukten sperrt. Also doch kein Heldenepos, sondern eher ein Heldinnenroman?

Grenzüberschreitungen und Ausnahmeereignisse bestimmen jedenfalls die Handlung, daher wandeln sich die 'Spielregeln' der nibelungischen Welt im Verlauf der Geschichte und wirken oft unergründlich. Durch die überlieferte Gestalt des Nibelungenliedes hindurch schimmert zudem eine mündliche Sagentradition, die auch in der altnordischen Literatur Dichtungen über Sigurd, Gunnar und Brynhild angeregt hat. Wie diese Werke arbeitet der mittelhochdeutsche Text an der Bewältigung einer bisweilen widersprüchlichen Fülle des Stoffs und seinen Ambivalenzen. Den Kern und zentralen Kipppunkt der Geschichte bildet die heimtückische Ermordung Siegfrieds, der als einzigartiger Heros auch noch nach seinem Tod die erzählte Welt beherrscht.

Im Seminar besprechen wir außer grundlegenden Aspekten – wie Stoffgeschichte, Figuren, Handlungsmuster – auch die besonderen Formen der Gewalt (vom Turnierkampf bis zum Gemetzel) und der Emotionalität (von höfischer Minne bis zu eigensinniger Trauer und rasender Wut), Rechtsprobleme, Begehrensdynamiken und Geschlechtsidentitäten, die Wechselspiele homo- und heterosozialer Bindungen sowie die mythischen Substrate (Drachenkampf, Nibelungenhort), die dem Stoff eingeschrieben sind.

1	S	Mo	12:00 - 14:00	wöch.	1.12.1.01	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. phil. Stefanie Stockhorst

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die poetologischen Grundbegriffe ‚Nachahmung', ‚Originalität' und ‚Autorschaft', die für das Verständnis von Literatur und Kunst insgesamt konstitutiv sind. Der Schwerpunkt liegt auf ästhetischen und literaturtheoretischen Positionen des 18. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere auf Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, dessen Überlegungen zu Kunst, Wirkung und Darstellung maßgeblich zur Neubestimmung des Verhältnisses von Mimesis und schöpferischer Originalität beitragen. Ergänzend werden Positionen u. a. von Johann Christoph Gottsched, Johann Joachim Winckelmann, Karl Philipp Moritz und Johann Wolfgang von Goethe einbezogen, um die Herausbildung moderner Autorschaftskonzepte und die Aufwertung des Geniebegriffs um 1800 nachzuvollziehen. Ausgehend von der aristotelischen Mimesis-Konzeption wird die Entwicklung dieser Begriffe historisch rekonstruiert und zugleich kritisch reflektiert: von der antiken Theorie der Nachahmung über frühneuzeitliche Regelpoetiken bis hin zur modernen Vorstellung des autonomen, originären Subjekts. Dabei wird sichtbar, wie sich die drei Leitbegriffe gegenseitig bedingen und zugleich in Spannung zu einander stehen.

Die Ringvorlesung bietet eine Einführung in aktuelle theoretische und methodische Grundlagen der germanistischen Sprachwissenschaft. Die Beiträge von ExpertInnen mit Schwerpunkten in verschiedenen Gebieten der Linguistik umfassen die Kernbereiche der gegenwärtigen linguistischen Forschung wie z.B. die Grammatiktheorie, die Variationslinguistik, die Korpuslinguistik, die Konversationsanalyse und Interaktionale Linguistik, die Sprachgeschichte und diachrone Linguistik, die Mehrsprachigkeitsforschung und Zweit- sowie Fremdsprachenerwerbsforschung. Studierende lernen moderne Forschungszugänge sowie Methoden der sprachwissenschaftlichen Forschung kennen und werden durch den Besuch der Vorlesung auch befähigt, diese selbst anzuwenden und kritisch zu reflektieren.

Unsere Sprache variiert u.a. in Abhängigkeit von der regionalen Herkunft eines Sprechers und der jeweiligen Sprechsituation. Um derartige Variationen genauer untersuchen zu können, müssen Sprachdaten in linguistischen Studien erhoben werden. Wie solche Studien geplant, durchgeführt und ausgewertet werden, soll im Mittelpunkt dieses Kurses stehen.

1	S	Do	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.09.2.16	15.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Andreas Degen

Kommentar

Wovon handeln Naturgedichte? Die Antwort darauf kann vielfältig ausfallen: von eigenen Empfindungen, von Gott, von der Sehnsucht nach Ganzheit oder einer Gegenwelt, von der Natur, spätestens seit der Zeit um 1800 auch von Geschichte und dem Erleben des Geschichtsprozesses. Auf unterschiedliche Weise können literarisch aufgerufene Erscheinungen oder Situationen der Natur mit konkret historischer oder allgemein geschichtsphilosophischer Bedeutsamkeit aufgeladen sein und zu mehr oder weniger deutlich verständlichen Zeichen für Vergangenes, Gegenwärtiges oder Künftiges werden. Gegenwärtig erlebt die literarische Beschäftigung mit Natur-Sujets unter dem Stichwort Nature Writing eine neue Konjunktur.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit drei wichtigen Vertretern dieser Art von Naturlyrik im 20. Jahrhundert, genauer in der Nachkriegszeit: mit Peter Huchel (1903-1981), Erich Arendt (1903-1984) und Johannes Bobrowski (1917-1965). Diese drei Autoren, die sich persönlich gut kannten, sind eng mit Brandenburg und Berlin verbunden: Huchel lebte lange in Wilhelmshorst bei Potsdam, Arendt wuchs in Neuruppin auf und lebte, wie auch Bobrowski, nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges in (Ost-)Berlin. Gegenstand der Seminararbeit sind Gedichte der drei Lyriker, außerdem wird es um ihre Erfahrungen mit und Konzeptionen von Geschichte und Geschichtlichkeit sowie um die entsprechende zeichenhafte Verwendung von Sprache. Vorkenntnisse zur Lyrikanalyse sind von Vorteil, aber nicht Bedingung für die Teilnahme.

Kommentar

Alexander Kluge (1932-2026) war Filmemacher, literarischer Autor und kritischer Theoretiker – und gerade das Zusammenspiel dieser drei Rollen macht sein Werk zu einem herausragenden Gegenstand literatur- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Das Seminar nimmt die gegenwärtig zu beobachtende Kanonisierung Kluges zum Anlass, sein seit den 1960er Jahren entstandenes multimediales Werk bis hin zu jüngsten Auseinandersetzungen mit Literatur und Künstlicher Intelligenz zu erschließen. An ausgewählten Filmen, literarischen Texten sowie Fernseh- und Digitalformaten untersuchen wir Problemfelder wie biographisches Erzählen, Kunst und politische Bildung, Literatur und Wissen, Geschichte und Gegenwart, Affekt und Zeit sowie Öffentlichkeit und Ökonomie. Dabei werden literaturwissenschaftliche Fragestellungen gezielt um medien-, kultur- und wissensgeschichtliche Perspektiven erweitert: Die Studierenden vertiefen ihre Fähigkeiten zur eigenständigen Analyse komplexer literarischer und audiovisueller Gegenstände, reflektieren unterschiedliche theoretische und methodische Zugänge und erproben, wie sich das Verhältnis von Literatur, Film und Kritischer Theorie an konkreten Gegenständen als eigenständige Forschungsfrage entwickeln lässt.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Comics oder Graphic Novels sind in den letzten Jahrzehnten zu einem selbstverständlichen Teil der Literatur geworden und seit langem auch ein Gegenstand literaturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Comics beruhen auf der Kombination verschiedener medialer Zeichensysteme, die durch ihr Zusammenwirken eine eigene sprachlich-visuelle Möglichkeit der Erzählung erzeugen. Im Seminar wollen wir an exemplarischen Beispielen verschiedene Möglichkeiten von Comics untersuchen und dabei eingeführte Analysetechniken kennenlernen. Ein genaues Programm wird in der ersten Sitzung vereinbart. Vorschläge für Präsentationen können Sie an fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de richten.

Kommentar

Zur Formenbildung des Verbs stehen im Deutschen flexivische Mittel wie die Affigierung ("lachen": "lach-te") und verschiedene Formen des Vokalwechsels ("lesen": "liest", "las", "läse") zur Verfügung. Klassen von Verben werden im Standarddeutschen danach unterschieden, welche dieser flexivischen Mittel sie zum Ausdruck von Person, Numerus, Tempus und Modus einsetzen (stark vs. schwach flektierende Verben). Aber schon im Standarddeutschen bestehen häufig Unsicherheiten in Bezug auf die Bildung bestimmter Formen: Heißt es im Präteritum "frug" oder "fragte", "dünkte" oder "deuchte", "glomm" oder "glimmte"? In manchen Dialekten hört man Formen wie "gelest" (statt "gelesen") oder "gang" (statt "gegangen"), standardsprachliche Mittel werden also anders eingesetzt als erwartet oder fallen vollständig weg. In diesem Seminar wollen wir uns mit der Formenbildung des Verbs im Standarddeutschen und seinen Varietäten beschäftigen. Wichtige Fragen werden sein, welche Varianten es bei der Bildung individueller Formen gibt und wie die Verwendung dieser formalen Varianten erklärt werden kann.

Kommentar

Haben Sie beim Schreiben oder Lesen schon einmal gedacht „Dieser Satz ist zu kompliziert" und ihn vielleicht sogar umgeschrieben? Woran liegt es, dass wir bestimmte Äußerungen als kompliziert empfinden? Was bedeutet eigentlich „kompliziert" und gibt es ein objektives Maß für sprachliche Komplexität? Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Nachdem wir uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Komplexität und verschiedenen Möglichkeiten ihrer Beschreibung auseinandergesetzt haben, entwickeln wir im zweiten Teil des Seminars eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine eigene Studie.

Ziel des Seminars ist, dass Sie Sätze wie "Der 2008 veröffentlichte Briefwechsel zwischen beiden zeigt, wie schwer es war, eine gemeinsame Sprache zu finden, um den eigentlich unüberbrückbaren Abgrund zwischen beiden Familiengeschichten zu überwinden." (tagesschau.de, 25.6.2026, zum 100.Geburtstag von Ingeborg Bachmann) sicher analysieren können.

Wir können aber mit Sätzen wie "Karl isst Kuchen" beginnen und uns langsam steigern.

Also Wortarten, syntaktische Funktionen, syntagmatische Relationen - alles kommt ran und dann gucken wir mal, wie viele Drehungen wir aufs Parkett legen.

Wir lesen (einzelne) Kapitel in Grundriss der deutschen Grammatik im Detail und lernen grammatisch zu argumentieren. Warum gibt es so viele Arten von Attributen und wo sind die Grenzen? Was können infinite Verbformen im Gegensatz zu finiten Verbformen und warum? Welche Funktionen können Nebensätze einnehmen, wie sind sie also grammatisch zu beschreiben und wie semantisch? Was zeichnet die Wortstellung im Deutschen aus?

Die Themen wählen wir zu Beginn gemeinsam aus.

Der Kurs gibt einen Überblick über die Gebiete der Phonologie und deren Systematik. Neben dem Lautsystem werden phonologische Merkmale und Regeln sowie hierarchische Strukturen zum Aufbau der Silbe und übergeordneter prosodischer Konstituenten betrachtet. Dabei wird auch auf Ableitungsmechanismen für Betonungen und die Beziehungen zu morphologischen und syntaktischen Strukturen eingegangen.

1	S	Di	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Martin Pfeiffer

Kommentar

Eine Frage zu stellen oder eine Antwort zu geben gehört wohl zu den häufigsten und wichtigsten sprachlichen Handlungen, die wir in Gesprächen vollziehen. Es ist uns intuitiv sofort klar, was in einer Frage-Antwort-Sequenz passiert: Wer eine Frage stellt, weist auf eine Wissenslücke hin, die gefüllt werden soll; die Antwort kommt diesem Wunsch nach. Werfen wir jedoch einen Blick auf Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen, wie sie tatsächlich in verschiedenen sozialen Kontexten auftreten, so eröffnet sich ein weitaus vielfältigeres und komplexeres Bild. Wenn eine Lehrkraft eine Frage stellt, geht es oftmals nicht um ein eigenes Wissensdefizit, sondern um die Überprüfung des Wissens eines Schülers/einer Schülerin. Wenn wir zu Beginn eines Gesprächs mit einer Kollegin "Na, wie geht's?" fragen, interessieren wir uns in der Regel nicht wirklich für ihr persönliches Befinden. Vielmehr handelt es sich dabei um ein Ritual, um miteinander in Interaktion zu treten. Auch wenn wir Antworten geben, tun wir mehr, als einfach nur die erfragte Information zu übermitteln. So hat es andere Implikationen, wenn wir auf die Frage "Kommst du morgen?" mit "Natürlich!" anstelle eines einfachen "Ja." antworten.

Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen sind von zentraler Bedeutung für die soziale Interaktion. Die Konversationsanalytikerin Tanya Stivers argumentiert sogar, dass die Frage-Antwort-Sequenz einen Mikrokosmos darstellt, in dem wir im Detail nachvollziehen können, wie wir im Gespräch soziale Beziehungen herstellen und bearbeiten. In diesem Seminar werden wir untersuchen, welche Handlungsspielräume uns Fragen und Antworten in unterschiedlichen alltäglichen Situationen eröffnen (z.B. Gespräch unter Freunden, Eltern-Kind-Interaktion, Schulunterricht, etc.) und welche kommunikativen Zwecke sie erfüllen.

Dieses Seminar startet mit der Analyse struktureller und pragmatischer Ambiguitäten des Deutschen, die häufig Quelle von Missverständnissen sind und insbesondere, aber nicht nur im Zusammenhang mit dem Erwerb des Deutschen als Fremd- und Zweitsprache besonders schwierig zu erwerben sind. Es folgt im zweiten Teil die Rezeption und Diskussion einschlägiger Forschungsbeiträge zu zentralen Ergebnissen aus den Bereichen der mündlichen und schriftlichen Fehlerkorrektur-, Feedback- und Konfliktforschung in DaF/DaZ. Im dritten Teil des Kurses werden - nach Möglichkeit unter Beteiligung von Expertinnen und Experten darüber hinaus auch Mobbing- und Konfliktsituationen im Deutsch- und Fremdsprachenklassenzimmer sowie ganz allgemein an Bildungsinstitutionen und Schulen thematisiert, u. a. im Zusammenhang mit interkulturellen Phänomenen. Ziel dieses letzten Schwerpunkts ist die Vermittlung von entsprechenden kommunikativen Kompetenzen für einen möglichst deeskalierenden und selbstbewussten Umgang mit aufgeladenen Situationen.

Im Seminar analysieren wir unter Verwendung einschlägiger aktueller Literatur typische Erwerbsverläufe des Deutschen als Fremd- und Zweitsprache sowie besondere Herausforderungen beim Erwerb des Deutschen als Zweitsprache. Dazu werden in kooperativen Situationen mit Lernenden des Deutschen u. a. aus Argentinien und Japan Lernersprachen im direkten Gespräch elizitiert. Schwerpunkte der vorbereitenden theoretischen Auseinandersetzung sind typische Erwerbsreihenfolgen, altersabhängige Zeitfenster, der Einfluss der Erstsprachen sowie erfolgversprechende Vermittlungsmethoden von DaF/DaZ. Außerdem erfolgt die Sichtung und Analyse einschlägiger Materialplattformen und sprachbildender Materialien für den Deutsch- und Fachunterricht.

Kommentar

Im Kolloquium wollen wir wissenschaftliche Arbeiten oder Projekte – von der Abschlussarbeit bis zur Dissertation und zum Aufsatz oder zum Buch – gemeinsam diskutieren, um methodische und theoretische Texte zu diskutieren, aber ebenso, um konkrete Arbeitsstrategien zu besprechen. Ergänzend werden aktuelle Theorien, Debatten und Positionen, aber auch Klassiker der Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaften auf der Grundlage gemeinsam vorbereiteter Texte besprochen. Eingeladen sind nicht nur diejenigen, die diesen Kurs ohnehin besuchen müssen, sondern auch fortgeschrittene Studierende, die daran interessiert sind, wie literaturwissenschaftliches Arbeiten in Theorie und Praxis aussieht und die gerne bestimmte Aspekte oder Themen ihres Studiums vertiefen würden, wobei auch eigene Vorschläge für die Gestaltung der Sitzungen willkommen sind. (Es lohnt sich in jedem Fall, auch wenn Sie das Kolloquium nicht per Studienplan besuchen müssen.)
Die Treffen sollen kompakt im Rahmen der vorgeschlagenen Termine stattfinden, nach enger Abstimmung mit den Studierenden. 20.11., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 4.12., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 8.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 15.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 29.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr.
Melden Sie sich deshalb per E-Mail möglichst bald bei fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de .

Kommentar

Am Beispiel Ihrer eigenen geplanten und entstehenden Master- und Doktorarbeiten werden hier Probleme der Themenfindung, Konzeption und Durchführung von Forschungsvorhaben besprochen und geklärt. Die Konzeption des eigenen Vorhabens, ein schon ausformuliertes Kapitel oder ein zu untersuchender Text können präsentiert und gemeinsam besprochen werden, um den eigenen Ansatz zu verbessern. Außerdem werden gemeinsam aktuelle oder besonders reizvolle Forschungstexte gelesen und diskutiert – hier zu können gern vorab Vorschläge unterbreitet werden. Auf diese Weise dient die Veranstaltung als ‚Werkstatt' für Abschlussarbeiten, die auch über mehrere Semester hinweg besucht werden kann. Zugleich führt sie als studentisches und postgraduiertes Laboratorium an die Standards wissenschaftlicher Qualifikationsarbeiten heran. Willkommen sind in diesem Kolloquium selbstverständlich nicht nur Projekte aus der dem Bereich der Frühen Neuzeit, sondern aus der gesamten Breite der Neueren deutschen Literaturwissenschaft (16.-21. Jahrhundert)!

Die Ringvorlesung bietet eine Einführung in aktuelle theoretische und methodische Grundlagen der germanistischen Sprachwissenschaft. Die Beiträge von ExpertInnen mit Schwerpunkten in verschiedenen Gebieten der Linguistik umfassen die Kernbereiche der gegenwärtigen linguistischen Forschung wie z.B. die Grammatiktheorie, die Variationslinguistik, die Korpuslinguistik, die Konversationsanalyse und Interaktionale Linguistik, die Sprachgeschichte und diachrone Linguistik, die Mehrsprachigkeitsforschung und Zweit- sowie Fremdsprachenerwerbsforschung. Studierende lernen moderne Forschungszugänge sowie Methoden der sprachwissenschaftlichen Forschung kennen und werden durch den Besuch der Vorlesung auch befähigt, diese selbst anzuwenden und kritisch zu reflektieren.

Unsere Sprache variiert u.a. in Abhängigkeit von der regionalen Herkunft eines Sprechers und der jeweiligen Sprechsituation. Um derartige Variationen genauer untersuchen zu können, müssen Sprachdaten in linguistischen Studien erhoben werden. Wie solche Studien geplant, durchgeführt und ausgewertet werden, soll im Mittelpunkt dieses Kurses stehen.

Kommentar

Zur Formenbildung des Verbs stehen im Deutschen flexivische Mittel wie die Affigierung ("lachen": "lach-te") und verschiedene Formen des Vokalwechsels ("lesen": "liest", "las", "läse") zur Verfügung. Klassen von Verben werden im Standarddeutschen danach unterschieden, welche dieser flexivischen Mittel sie zum Ausdruck von Person, Numerus, Tempus und Modus einsetzen (stark vs. schwach flektierende Verben). Aber schon im Standarddeutschen bestehen häufig Unsicherheiten in Bezug auf die Bildung bestimmter Formen: Heißt es im Präteritum "frug" oder "fragte", "dünkte" oder "deuchte", "glomm" oder "glimmte"? In manchen Dialekten hört man Formen wie "gelest" (statt "gelesen") oder "gang" (statt "gegangen"), standardsprachliche Mittel werden also anders eingesetzt als erwartet oder fallen vollständig weg. In diesem Seminar wollen wir uns mit der Formenbildung des Verbs im Standarddeutschen und seinen Varietäten beschäftigen. Wichtige Fragen werden sein, welche Varianten es bei der Bildung individueller Formen gibt und wie die Verwendung dieser formalen Varianten erklärt werden kann.

Kommentar

Haben Sie beim Schreiben oder Lesen schon einmal gedacht „Dieser Satz ist zu kompliziert" und ihn vielleicht sogar umgeschrieben? Woran liegt es, dass wir bestimmte Äußerungen als kompliziert empfinden? Was bedeutet eigentlich „kompliziert" und gibt es ein objektives Maß für sprachliche Komplexität? Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Nachdem wir uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Komplexität und verschiedenen Möglichkeiten ihrer Beschreibung auseinandergesetzt haben, entwickeln wir im zweiten Teil des Seminars eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine eigene Studie.

Ziel des Seminars ist, dass Sie Sätze wie "Der 2008 veröffentlichte Briefwechsel zwischen beiden zeigt, wie schwer es war, eine gemeinsame Sprache zu finden, um den eigentlich unüberbrückbaren Abgrund zwischen beiden Familiengeschichten zu überwinden." (tagesschau.de, 25.6.2026, zum 100.Geburtstag von Ingeborg Bachmann) sicher analysieren können.

Wir können aber mit Sätzen wie "Karl isst Kuchen" beginnen und uns langsam steigern.

Also Wortarten, syntaktische Funktionen, syntagmatische Relationen - alles kommt ran und dann gucken wir mal, wie viele Drehungen wir aufs Parkett legen.

Wir lesen (einzelne) Kapitel in Grundriss der deutschen Grammatik im Detail und lernen grammatisch zu argumentieren. Warum gibt es so viele Arten von Attributen und wo sind die Grenzen? Was können infinite Verbformen im Gegensatz zu finiten Verbformen und warum? Welche Funktionen können Nebensätze einnehmen, wie sind sie also grammatisch zu beschreiben und wie semantisch? Was zeichnet die Wortstellung im Deutschen aus?

Die Themen wählen wir zu Beginn gemeinsam aus.

122419 S - Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen in ihrer Vielfalt

1	S	Di	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Martin Pfeiffer

Kommentar

Eine Frage zu stellen oder eine Antwort zu geben gehört wohl zu den häufigsten und wichtigsten sprachlichen Handlungen, die wir in Gesprächen vollziehen. Es ist uns intuitiv sofort klar, was in einer Frage-Antwort-Sequenz passiert: Wer eine Frage stellt, weist auf eine Wissenslücke hin, die gefüllt werden soll; die Antwort kommt diesem Wunsch nach. Werfen wir jedoch einen Blick auf Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen, wie sie tatsächlich in verschiedenen sozialen Kontexten auftreten, so eröffnet sich ein weitaus vielfältigeres und komplexeres Bild. Wenn eine Lehrkraft eine Frage stellt, geht es oftmals nicht um ein eigenes Wissensdefizit, sondern um die Überprüfung des Wissens eines Schülers/einer Schülerin. Wenn wir zu Beginn eines Gesprächs mit einer Kollegin "Na, wie geht's?" fragen, interessieren wir uns in der Regel nicht wirklich für ihr persönliches Befinden. Vielmehr handelt es sich dabei um ein Ritual, um miteinander in Interaktion zu treten. Auch wenn wir Antworten geben, tun wir mehr, als einfach nur die erfragte Information zu übermitteln. So hat es andere Implikationen, wenn wir auf die Frage "Kommst du morgen?" mit "Natürlich!" anstelle eines einfachen "Ja." antworten.

Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen sind von zentraler Bedeutung für die soziale Interaktion. Die Konversationsanalytikerin Tanya Stivers argumentiert sogar, dass die Frage-Antwort-Sequenz einen Mikrokosmos darstellt, in dem wir im Detail nachvollziehen können, wie wir im Gespräch soziale Beziehungen herstellen und bearbeiten. In diesem Seminar werden wir untersuchen, welche Handlungsspielräume uns Fragen und Antworten in unterschiedlichen alltäglichen Situationen eröffnen (z.B. Gespräch unter Freunden, Eltern-Kind-Interaktion, Schulunterricht, etc.) und welche kommunikativen Zwecke sie erfüllen.

Dieses Seminar startet mit der Analyse struktureller und pragmatischer Ambiguitäten des Deutschen, die häufig Quelle von Missverständnissen sind und insbesondere, aber nicht nur im Zusammenhang mit dem Erwerb des Deutschen als Fremd- und Zweitsprache besonders schwierig zu erwerben sind. Es folgt im zweiten Teil die Rezeption und Diskussion einschlägiger Forschungsbeiträge zu zentralen Ergebnissen aus den Bereichen der mündlichen und schriftlichen Fehlerkorrektur-, Feedback- und Konfliktforschung in DaF/DaZ. Im dritten Teil des Kurses werden - nach Möglichkeit unter Beteiligung von Expertinnen und Experten darüber hinaus auch Mobbing- und Konfliktsituationen im Deutsch- und Fremdsprachenklassenzimmer sowie ganz allgemein an Bildungsinstitutionen und Schulen thematisiert, u. a. im Zusammenhang mit interkulturellen Phänomenen. Ziel dieses letzten Schwerpunkts ist die Vermittlung von entsprechenden kommunikativen Kompetenzen für einen möglichst deeskalierenden und selbstbewussten Umgang mit aufgeladenen Situationen.

121719 S - Das Nibelungenlied: Sagenwelten und höfische Krisen

1	S	Do	12:00 - 14:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	15.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Judith Klinger

Kommentar

Das um 1200 entstandene Nibelungenlied gehört zu den großartigsten Texten des Hochmittelalters, der nach zwei Jahrhunderten der Erforschung immer noch viele Fragen und Rätsel aufgibt. Grund dafür ist die Komplexität dieses Heldenepos, das einerseits höfischen Glanz, Minne-Szenarien und spielerisch-lebhafte Dialoge, andererseits heroische Ausnahmegestalten, zugespitzte Konflikte und Gewalteskalationen bis hin zum Untergang bietet. Neben dem Drachentöter Siegfried, dem höfischen König Gunther und dem ebenso treuen wie untreuen Hagen von Tronje dominieren mit Kriemhild und Brünhild zwei außergewöhnliche Frauenfiguren die Erzählung: Brünhilds exorbitante Stärke und Kriemhilds radikale Rache ermöglichen beiden ein Gewalthandeln, das sich zeitgenössischen Weiblichkeitskonstrukten sperrt. Also doch kein Heldenepos, sondern eher ein Heldinnenroman?

Grenzüberschreitungen und Ausnahmeereignisse bestimmen jedenfalls die Handlung, daher wandeln sich die 'Spielregeln' der nibelungischen Welt im Verlauf der Geschichte und wirken oft unergründlich. Durch die überlieferte Gestalt des Nibelungenliedes hindurch schimmert zudem eine mündliche Sagentradition, die auch in der altnordischen Literatur Dichtungen über Sigurd, Gunnar und Brynhild angeregt hat. Wie diese Werke arbeitet der mittelhochdeutsche Text an der Bewältigung einer bisweilen widersprüchlichen Fülle des Stoffs und seinen Ambivalenzen. Den Kern und zentralen Kipppunkt der Geschichte bildet die heimtückische Ermordung Siegfrieds, der als einzigartiger Heros auch noch nach seinem Tod die erzählte Welt beherrscht.

Im Seminar besprechen wir außer grundlegenden Aspekten – wie Stoffgeschichte, Figuren, Handlungsmuster – auch die besonderen Formen der Gewalt (vom Turnierkampf bis zum Gemetzel) und der Emotionalität (von höfischer Minne bis zu eigensinniger Trauer und rasender Wut), Rechtsprobleme, Begehrensdynamiken und Geschlechtsidentitäten, die Wechselspiele homo- und heterosozialer Bindungen sowie die mythischen Substrate (Drachenkampf, Nibelungenhort), die dem Stoff eingeschrieben sind.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die poetologischen Grundbegriffe ‚Nachahmung', ‚Originalität' und ‚Autorschaft', die für das Verständnis von Literatur und Kunst insgesamt konstitutiv sind. Der Schwerpunkt liegt auf ästhetischen und literaturtheoretischen Positionen des 18. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere auf Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, dessen Überlegungen zu Kunst, Wirkung und Darstellung maßgeblich zur Neubestimmung des Verhältnisses von Mimesis und schöpferischer Originalität beitragen. Ergänzend werden Positionen u. a. von Johann Christoph Gottsched, Johann Joachim Winckelmann, Karl Philipp Moritz und Johann Wolfgang von Goethe einbezogen, um die Herausbildung moderner Autorschaftskonzepte und die Aufwertung des Geniebegriffs um 1800 nachzuvollziehen. Ausgehend von der aristotelischen Mimesis-Konzeption wird die Entwicklung dieser Begriffe historisch rekonstruiert und zugleich kritisch reflektiert: von der antiken Theorie der Nachahmung über frühneuzeitliche Regelpoetiken bis hin zur modernen Vorstellung des autonomen, originären Subjekts. Dabei wird sichtbar, wie sich die drei Leitbegriffe gegenseitig bedingen und zugleich in Spannung zu einander stehen.

Im Kolloquium wollen wir wissenschaftliche Arbeiten oder Projekte – von der Abschlussarbeit bis zur Dissertation und zum Aufsatz oder zum Buch – gemeinsam diskutieren, um methodische und theoretische Texte zu diskutieren, aber ebenso, um konkrete Arbeitsstrategien zu besprechen. Ergänzend werden aktuelle Theorien, Debatten und Positionen, aber auch Klassiker der Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaften auf der Grundlage gemeinsam vorbereiteter Texte besprochen. Eingeladen sind nicht nur diejenigen, die diesen Kurs ohnehin besuchen müssen, sondern auch fortgeschrittene Studierende, die daran interessiert sind, wie literaturwissenschaftliches Arbeiten in Theorie und Praxis aussieht und die gerne bestimmte Aspekte oder Themen ihres Studiums vertiefen würden, wobei auch eigene Vorschläge für die Gestaltung der Sitzungen willkommen sind. (Es lohnt sich in jedem Fall, auch wenn Sie das Kolloquium nicht per Studienplan besuchen müssen.)
Die Treffen sollen kompakt im Rahmen der vorgeschlagenen Termine stattfinden, nach enger Abstimmung mit den Studierenden. 20.11., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 4.12., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 8.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 15.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 29.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr.
Melden Sie sich deshalb per E-Mail möglichst bald bei fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de .

Am Beispiel Ihrer eigenen geplanten und entstehenden Master- und Doktorarbeiten werden hier Probleme der Themenfindung, Konzeption und Durchführung von Forschungsvorhaben besprochen und geklärt. Die Konzeption des eigenen Vorhabens, ein schon ausformuliertes Kapitel oder ein zu untersuchender Text können präsentiert und gemeinsam besprochen werden, um den eigenen Ansatz zu verbessern. Außerdem werden gemeinsam aktuelle oder besonders reizvolle Forschungstexte gelesen und diskutiert – hier zu können gern vorab Vorschläge unterbreitet werden. Auf diese Weise dient die Veranstaltung als ‚Werkstatt' für Abschlussarbeiten, die auch über mehrere Semester hinweg besucht werden kann. Zugleich führt sie als studentisches und postgraduiertes Laboratorium an die Standards wissenschaftlicher Qualifikationsarbeiten heran. Willkommen sind in diesem Kolloquium selbstverständlich nicht nur Projekte aus der dem Bereich der Frühen Neuzeit, sondern aus der gesamten Breite der Neueren deutschen Literaturwissenschaft (16.-21. Jahrhundert)!

Alexander Kluge (1932-2026) war Filmemacher, literarischer Autor und kritischer Theoretiker – und gerade das Zusammenspiel dieser drei Rollen macht sein Werk zu einem herausragenden Gegenstand literatur- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Das Seminar nimmt die gegenwärtig zu beobachtende Kanonisierung Kluges zum Anlass, sein seit den 1960er Jahren entstandenes multimediales Werk bis hin zu jüngsten Auseinandersetzungen mit Literatur und Künstlicher Intelligenz zu erschließen. An ausgewählten Filmen, literarischen Texten sowie Fernseh- und Digitalformaten untersuchen wir Problemfelder wie biographisches Erzählen, Kunst und politische Bildung, Literatur und Wissen, Geschichte und Gegenwart, Affekt und Zeit sowie Öffentlichkeit und Ökonomie. Dabei werden literaturwissenschaftliche Fragestellungen gezielt um medien-, kultur- und wissensgeschichtliche Perspektiven erweitert: Die Studierenden vertiefen ihre Fähigkeiten zur eigenständigen Analyse komplexer literarischer und audiovisueller Gegenstände, reflektieren unterschiedliche theoretische und methodische Zugänge und erproben, wie sich das Verhältnis von Literatur, Film und Kritischer Theorie an konkreten Gegenständen als eigenständige Forschungsfrage entwickeln lässt.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Comics oder Graphic Novels sind in den letzten Jahrzehnten zu einem selbstverständlichen Teil der Literatur geworden und seit langem auch ein Gegenstand literaturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Comics beruhen auf der Kombination verschiedener medialer Zeichensysteme, die durch ihr Zusammenwirken eine eigene sprachlich-visuelle Möglichkeit der Erzählung erzeugen. Im Seminar wollen wir an exemplarischen Beispielen verschiedene Möglichkeiten von Comics untersuchen und dabei eingeführte Analysetechniken kennenlernen. Ein genaues Programm wird in der ersten Sitzung vereinbart. Vorschläge für Präsentationen können Sie an fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de richten.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Unmittelbar nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkriegs begann eine rege Literaturproduktion: Unter prekären Arbeitsbedingungen entstanden auch Werke, in denen sich die Autor:innen aus der deutschen Binnenperspektive (selbst-)kritisch auf die Jahre der NS-Herrschaft bezogen und Fragen von Schuld und Verstrickung verhandelten. Gleichzeitig wurden aus der so genannten Inneren Emigration Rufe nach einem Schlussstrich und einem Neuanfang laut, die von (verbalen) Attacken gegen die „Exilliteratur" begleitet wurden. Aus dem Exil kehrten aber auch die ersten Autor:innen zurück, deren ‚Heimkehr' sich keineswegs leicht gestaltete, andere entschieden sich für das jeweilige Exilland.

Zahlreiche Schriftstellerinnen aus den unterschiedlichen Bereichen, wie bspw. Susanne Kerckhoff, Anna Seghers, Gabriele Tergit, Elisabeth Langgässer oder Ricarda Huch beteiligten sich an diesem Diskurs, der bereits um 1949, also mit der Entstehung der beiden deutschen Staaten (BRD und DDR), ein Ende fand. Das Blockseminar nimmt eine Ausstellung zu Susanne Kerckhoff im Berliner Mitte Museum zum Anlass, dieses kurze Zeitfenster mit seinen oftmals vergessenen Akteurinnen in den Fokus zu rücken.

Kommentar

Das um 1200 entstandene Nibelungenlied gehört zu den großartigsten Texten des Hochmittelalters, der nach zwei Jahrhunderten der Erforschung immer noch viele Fragen und Rätsel aufgibt. Grund dafür ist die Komplexität dieses Heldenepos, das einerseits höfischen Glanz, Minne-Szenarien und spielerisch-lebhafte Dialoge, andererseits heroische Ausnahmegestalten, zugespitzte Konflikte und Gewalteskalationen bis hin zum Untergang bietet. Neben dem Drachentöter Siegfried, dem höfischen König Gunther und dem ebenso treuen wie untreuen Hagen von Tronje dominieren mit Kriemhild und Brünhild zwei außergewöhnliche Frauenfiguren die Erzählung: Brünhilds exorbitante Stärke und Kriemhilds radikale Rache ermöglichen beiden ein Gewalthandeln, das sich zeitgenössischen Weiblichkeitskonstrukten sperrt. Also doch kein Heldenepos, sondern eher ein Heldinnenroman?

Grenzüberschreitungen und Ausnahmeereignisse bestimmen jedenfalls die Handlung, daher wandeln sich die 'Spielregeln' der nibelungischen Welt im Verlauf der Geschichte und wirken oft unergründlich. Durch die überlieferte Gestalt des Nibelungenliedes hindurch schimmert zudem eine mündliche Sagentradition, die auch in der altnordischen Literatur Dichtungen über Sigurd, Gunnar und Brynhild angeregt hat. Wie diese Werke arbeitet der mittelhochdeutsche Text an der Bewältigung einer bisweilen widersprüchlichen Fülle des Stoffs und seinen Ambivalenzen. Den Kern und zentralen Kipppunkt der Geschichte bildet die heimtückische Ermordung Siegfrieds, der als einzigartiger Heros auch noch nach seinem Tod die erzählte Welt beherrscht.

Im Seminar besprechen wir außer grundlegenden Aspekten – wie Stoffgeschichte, Figuren, Handlungsmuster – auch die besonderen Formen der Gewalt (vom Turnierkampf bis zum Gemetzel) und der Emotionalität (von höfischer Minne bis zu eigensinniger Trauer und rasender Wut), Rechtsprobleme, Begehrensdynamiken und Geschlechtsidentitäten, die Wechselspiele homo- und heterosozialer Bindungen sowie die mythischen Substrate (Drachenkampf, Nibelungenhort), die dem Stoff eingeschrieben sind.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die poetologischen Grundbegriffe ‚Nachahmung', ‚Originalität' und ‚Autorschaft', die für das Verständnis von Literatur und Kunst insgesamt konstitutiv sind. Der Schwerpunkt liegt auf ästhetischen und literaturtheoretischen Positionen des 18. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere auf Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, dessen Überlegungen zu Kunst, Wirkung und Darstellung maßgeblich zur Neubestimmung des Verhältnisses von Mimesis und schöpferischer Originalität beitragen. Ergänzend werden Positionen u. a. von Johann Christoph Gottsched, Johann Joachim Winckelmann, Karl Philipp Moritz und Johann Wolfgang von Goethe einbezogen, um die Herausbildung moderner Autorschaftskonzepte und die Aufwertung des Geniebegriffs um 1800 nachzuvollziehen. Ausgehend von der aristotelischen Mimesis-Konzeption wird die Entwicklung dieser Begriffe historisch rekonstruiert und zugleich kritisch reflektiert: von der antiken Theorie der Nachahmung über frühneuzeitliche Regelpoetiken bis hin zur modernen Vorstellung des autonomen, originären Subjekts. Dabei wird sichtbar, wie sich die drei Leitbegriffe gegenseitig bedingen und zugleich in Spannung zu einander stehen.

Im Kolloquium wollen wir wissenschaftliche Arbeiten oder Projekte – von der Abschlussarbeit bis zur Dissertation und zum Aufsatz oder zum Buch – gemeinsam diskutieren, um methodische und theoretische Texte zu diskutieren, aber ebenso, um konkrete Arbeitsstrategien zu besprechen. Ergänzend werden aktuelle Theorien, Debatten und Positionen, aber auch Klassiker der Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaften auf der Grundlage gemeinsam vorbereiteter Texte besprochen. Eingeladen sind nicht nur diejenigen, die diesen Kurs ohnehin besuchen müssen, sondern auch fortgeschrittene Studierende, die daran interessiert sind, wie literaturwissenschaftliches Arbeiten in Theorie und Praxis aussieht und die gerne bestimmte Aspekte oder Themen ihres Studiums vertiefen würden, wobei auch eigene Vorschläge für die Gestaltung der Sitzungen willkommen sind. (Es lohnt sich in jedem Fall, auch wenn Sie das Kolloquium nicht per Studienplan besuchen müssen.)
Die Treffen sollen kompakt im Rahmen der vorgeschlagenen Termine stattfinden, nach enger Abstimmung mit den Studierenden. 20.11., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 4.12., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 8.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 15.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr; 29.1., 13 bis 18 Uhr.
Melden Sie sich deshalb per E-Mail möglichst bald bei fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de .

Am Beispiel Ihrer eigenen geplanten und entstehenden Master- und Doktorarbeiten werden hier Probleme der Themenfindung, Konzeption und Durchführung von Forschungsvorhaben besprochen und geklärt. Die Konzeption des eigenen Vorhabens, ein schon ausformuliertes Kapitel oder ein zu untersuchender Text können präsentiert und gemeinsam besprochen werden, um den eigenen Ansatz zu verbessern. Außerdem werden gemeinsam aktuelle oder besonders reizvolle Forschungstexte gelesen und diskutiert – hier zu können gern vorab Vorschläge unterbreitet werden. Auf diese Weise dient die Veranstaltung als ‚Werkstatt' für Abschlussarbeiten, die auch über mehrere Semester hinweg besucht werden kann. Zugleich führt sie als studentisches und postgraduiertes Laboratorium an die Standards wissenschaftlicher Qualifikationsarbeiten heran. Willkommen sind in diesem Kolloquium selbstverständlich nicht nur Projekte aus der dem Bereich der Frühen Neuzeit, sondern aus der gesamten Breite der Neueren deutschen Literaturwissenschaft (16.-21. Jahrhundert)!

Alexander Kluge (1932-2026) war Filmemacher, literarischer Autor und kritischer Theoretiker – und gerade das Zusammenspiel dieser drei Rollen macht sein Werk zu einem herausragenden Gegenstand literatur- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Das Seminar nimmt die gegenwärtig zu beobachtende Kanonisierung Kluges zum Anlass, sein seit den 1960er Jahren entstandenes multimediales Werk bis hin zu jüngsten Auseinandersetzungen mit Literatur und Künstlicher Intelligenz zu erschließen. An ausgewählten Filmen, literarischen Texten sowie Fernseh- und Digitalformaten untersuchen wir Problemfelder wie biographisches Erzählen, Kunst und politische Bildung, Literatur und Wissen, Geschichte und Gegenwart, Affekt und Zeit sowie Öffentlichkeit und Ökonomie. Dabei werden literaturwissenschaftliche Fragestellungen gezielt um medien-, kultur- und wissensgeschichtliche Perspektiven erweitert: Die Studierenden vertiefen ihre Fähigkeiten zur eigenständigen Analyse komplexer literarischer und audiovisueller Gegenstände, reflektieren unterschiedliche theoretische und methodische Zugänge und erproben, wie sich das Verhältnis von Literatur, Film und Kritischer Theorie an konkreten Gegenständen als eigenständige Forschungsfrage entwickeln lässt.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Comics oder Graphic Novels sind in den letzten Jahrzehnten zu einem selbstverständlichen Teil der Literatur geworden und seit langem auch ein Gegenstand literaturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Comics beruhen auf der Kombination verschiedener medialer Zeichensysteme, die durch ihr Zusammenwirken eine eigene sprachlich-visuelle Möglichkeit der Erzählung erzeugen. Im Seminar wollen wir an exemplarischen Beispielen verschiedene Möglichkeiten von Comics untersuchen und dabei eingeführte Analysetechniken kennenlernen. Ein genaues Programm wird in der ersten Sitzung vereinbart. Vorschläge für Präsentationen können Sie an fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de richten.

Ziel des Seminars ist, dass Sie Sätze wie "Der 2008 veröffentlichte Briefwechsel zwischen beiden zeigt, wie schwer es war, eine gemeinsame Sprache zu finden, um den eigentlich unüberbrückbaren Abgrund zwischen beiden Familiengeschichten zu überwinden." (tagesschau.de, 25.6.2026, zum 100.Geburtstag von Ingeborg Bachmann) sicher analysieren können.

Wir können aber mit Sätzen wie "Karl isst Kuchen" beginnen und uns langsam steigern.

Also Wortarten, syntaktische Funktionen, syntagmatische Relationen - alles kommt ran und dann gucken wir mal, wie viele Drehungen wir aufs Parkett legen.

Wir lesen (einzelne) Kapitel in Grundriss der deutschen Grammatik im Detail und lernen grammatisch zu argumentieren. Warum gibt es so viele Arten von Attributen und wo sind die Grenzen? Was können infinite Verbformen im Gegensatz zu finiten Verbformen und warum? Welche Funktionen können Nebensätze einnehmen, wie sind sie also grammatisch zu beschreiben und wie semantisch? Was zeichnet die Wortstellung im Deutschen aus?

Die Themen wählen wir zu Beginn gemeinsam aus.

Der Kurs gibt einen Überblick über die Gebiete der Phonologie und deren Systematik. Neben dem Lautsystem werden phonologische Merkmale und Regeln sowie hierarchische Strukturen zum Aufbau der Silbe und übergeordneter prosodischer Konstituenten betrachtet. Dabei wird auch auf Ableitungsmechanismen für Betonungen und die Beziehungen zu morphologischen und syntaktischen Strukturen eingegangen.

1	S	Di	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Martin Pfeiffer

Kommentar

Eine Frage zu stellen oder eine Antwort zu geben gehört wohl zu den häufigsten und wichtigsten sprachlichen Handlungen, die wir in Gesprächen vollziehen. Es ist uns intuitiv sofort klar, was in einer Frage-Antwort-Sequenz passiert: Wer eine Frage stellt, weist auf eine Wissenslücke hin, die gefüllt werden soll; die Antwort kommt diesem Wunsch nach. Werfen wir jedoch einen Blick auf Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen, wie sie tatsächlich in verschiedenen sozialen Kontexten auftreten, so eröffnet sich ein weitaus vielfältigeres und komplexeres Bild. Wenn eine Lehrkraft eine Frage stellt, geht es oftmals nicht um ein eigenes Wissensdefizit, sondern um die Überprüfung des Wissens eines Schülers/einer Schülerin. Wenn wir zu Beginn eines Gesprächs mit einer Kollegin "Na, wie geht's?" fragen, interessieren wir uns in der Regel nicht wirklich für ihr persönliches Befinden. Vielmehr handelt es sich dabei um ein Ritual, um miteinander in Interaktion zu treten. Auch wenn wir Antworten geben, tun wir mehr, als einfach nur die erfragte Information zu übermitteln. So hat es andere Implikationen, wenn wir auf die Frage "Kommst du morgen?" mit "Natürlich!" anstelle eines einfachen "Ja." antworten.

Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen sind von zentraler Bedeutung für die soziale Interaktion. Die Konversationsanalytikerin Tanya Stivers argumentiert sogar, dass die Frage-Antwort-Sequenz einen Mikrokosmos darstellt, in dem wir im Detail nachvollziehen können, wie wir im Gespräch soziale Beziehungen herstellen und bearbeiten. In diesem Seminar werden wir untersuchen, welche Handlungsspielräume uns Fragen und Antworten in unterschiedlichen alltäglichen Situationen eröffnen (z.B. Gespräch unter Freunden, Eltern-Kind-Interaktion, Schulunterricht, etc.) und welche kommunikativen Zwecke sie erfüllen.

Dieses Seminar startet mit der Analyse struktureller und pragmatischer Ambiguitäten des Deutschen, die häufig Quelle von Missverständnissen sind und insbesondere, aber nicht nur im Zusammenhang mit dem Erwerb des Deutschen als Fremd- und Zweitsprache besonders schwierig zu erwerben sind. Es folgt im zweiten Teil die Rezeption und Diskussion einschlägiger Forschungsbeiträge zu zentralen Ergebnissen aus den Bereichen der mündlichen und schriftlichen Fehlerkorrektur-, Feedback- und Konfliktforschung in DaF/DaZ. Im dritten Teil des Kurses werden - nach Möglichkeit unter Beteiligung von Expertinnen und Experten darüber hinaus auch Mobbing- und Konfliktsituationen im Deutsch- und Fremdsprachenklassenzimmer sowie ganz allgemein an Bildungsinstitutionen und Schulen thematisiert, u. a. im Zusammenhang mit interkulturellen Phänomenen. Ziel dieses letzten Schwerpunkts ist die Vermittlung von entsprechenden kommunikativen Kompetenzen für einen möglichst deeskalierenden und selbstbewussten Umgang mit aufgeladenen Situationen.

Im Seminar analysieren wir unter Verwendung einschlägiger aktueller Literatur typische Erwerbsverläufe des Deutschen als Fremd- und Zweitsprache sowie besondere Herausforderungen beim Erwerb des Deutschen als Zweitsprache. Dazu werden in kooperativen Situationen mit Lernenden des Deutschen u. a. aus Argentinien und Japan Lernersprachen im direkten Gespräch elizitiert. Schwerpunkte der vorbereitenden theoretischen Auseinandersetzung sind typische Erwerbsreihenfolgen, altersabhängige Zeitfenster, der Einfluss der Erstsprachen sowie erfolgversprechende Vermittlungsmethoden von DaF/DaZ. Außerdem erfolgt die Sichtung und Analyse einschlägiger Materialplattformen und sprachbildender Materialien für den Deutsch- und Fachunterricht.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Unmittelbar nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkriegs begann eine rege Literaturproduktion: Unter prekären Arbeitsbedingungen entstanden auch Werke, in denen sich die Autor:innen aus der deutschen Binnenperspektive (selbst-)kritisch auf die Jahre der NS-Herrschaft bezogen und Fragen von Schuld und Verstrickung verhandelten. Gleichzeitig wurden aus der so genannten Inneren Emigration Rufe nach einem Schlussstrich und einem Neuanfang laut, die von (verbalen) Attacken gegen die „Exilliteratur" begleitet wurden. Aus dem Exil kehrten aber auch die ersten Autor:innen zurück, deren ‚Heimkehr' sich keineswegs leicht gestaltete, andere entschieden sich für das jeweilige Exilland.

Zahlreiche Schriftstellerinnen aus den unterschiedlichen Bereichen, wie bspw. Susanne Kerckhoff, Anna Seghers, Gabriele Tergit, Elisabeth Langgässer oder Ricarda Huch beteiligten sich an diesem Diskurs, der bereits um 1949, also mit der Entstehung der beiden deutschen Staaten (BRD und DDR), ein Ende fand. Das Blockseminar nimmt eine Ausstellung zu Susanne Kerckhoff im Berliner Mitte Museum zum Anlass, dieses kurze Zeitfenster mit seinen oftmals vergessenen Akteurinnen in den Fokus zu rücken.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

121719 S - Das Nibelungenlied: Sagenwelten und höfische Krisen

Kommentar

Das um 1200 entstandene Nibelungenlied gehört zu den großartigsten Texten des Hochmittelalters, der nach zwei Jahrhunderten der Erforschung immer noch viele Fragen und Rätsel aufgibt. Grund dafür ist die Komplexität dieses Heldenepos, das einerseits höfischen Glanz, Minne-Szenarien und spielerisch-lebhafte Dialoge, andererseits heroische Ausnahmegestalten, zugespitzte Konflikte und Gewalteskalationen bis hin zum Untergang bietet. Neben dem Drachentöter Siegfried, dem höfischen König Gunther und dem ebenso treuen wie untreuen Hagen von Tronje dominieren mit Kriemhild und Brünhild zwei außergewöhnliche Frauenfiguren die Erzählung: Brünhilds exorbitante Stärke und Kriemhilds radikale Rache ermöglichen beiden ein Gewalthandeln, das sich zeitgenössischen Weiblichkeitskonstrukten sperrt. Also doch kein Heldenepos, sondern eher ein Heldinnenroman?

Grenzüberschreitungen und Ausnahmeereignisse bestimmen jedenfalls die Handlung, daher wandeln sich die 'Spielregeln' der nibelungischen Welt im Verlauf der Geschichte und wirken oft unergründlich. Durch die überlieferte Gestalt des Nibelungenliedes hindurch schimmert zudem eine mündliche Sagentradition, die auch in der altnordischen Literatur Dichtungen über Sigurd, Gunnar und Brynhild angeregt hat. Wie diese Werke arbeitet der mittelhochdeutsche Text an der Bewältigung einer bisweilen widersprüchlichen Fülle des Stoffs und seinen Ambivalenzen. Den Kern und zentralen Kipppunkt der Geschichte bildet die heimtückische Ermordung Siegfrieds, der als einzigartiger Heros auch noch nach seinem Tod die erzählte Welt beherrscht.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit drei wichtigen Vertretern dieser Art von Naturlyrik im 20. Jahrhundert, genauer in der Nachkriegszeit: mit Peter Huchel (1903-1981), Erich Arendt (1903-1984) und Johannes Bobrowski (1917-1965). Diese drei Autoren, die sich persönlich gut kannten, sind eng mit Brandenburg und Berlin verbunden: Huchel lebte lange in Wilhelmshorst bei Potsdam, Arendt wuchs in Neuruppin auf und lebte, wie auch Bobrowski, nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges in (Ost-)Berlin. Gegenstand der Seminararbeit sind Gedichte der drei Lyriker, außerdem wird es um ihre Erfahrungen mit und Konzeptionen von Geschichte und Geschichtlichkeit sowie um die entsprechende zeichenhafte Verwendung von Sprache. Vorkenntnisse zur Lyrikanalyse sind von Vorteil, aber nicht Bedingung für die Teilnahme.

Comics oder Graphic Novels sind in den letzten Jahrzehnten zu einem selbstverständlichen Teil der Literatur geworden und seit langem auch ein Gegenstand literaturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Comics beruhen auf der Kombination verschiedener medialer Zeichensysteme, die durch ihr Zusammenwirken eine eigene sprachlich-visuelle Möglichkeit der Erzählung erzeugen. Im Seminar wollen wir an exemplarischen Beispielen verschiedene Möglichkeiten von Comics untersuchen und dabei eingeführte Analysetechniken kennenlernen. Ein genaues Programm wird in der ersten Sitzung vereinbart. Vorschläge für Präsentationen können Sie an fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de richten.

Kommentar

Alexander Kluge (1932-2026) war Filmemacher, literarischer Autor und kritischer Theoretiker – und gerade das Zusammenspiel dieser drei Rollen macht sein Werk zu einem herausragenden Gegenstand literatur- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Das Seminar nimmt die gegenwärtig zu beobachtende Kanonisierung Kluges zum Anlass, sein seit den 1960er Jahren entstandenes multimediales Werk bis hin zu jüngsten Auseinandersetzungen mit Literatur und Künstlicher Intelligenz zu erschließen. An ausgewählten Filmen, literarischen Texten sowie Fernseh- und Digitalformaten untersuchen wir Problemfelder wie biographisches Erzählen, Kunst und politische Bildung, Literatur und Wissen, Geschichte und Gegenwart, Affekt und Zeit sowie Öffentlichkeit und Ökonomie. Dabei werden literaturwissenschaftliche Fragestellungen gezielt um medien-, kultur- und wissensgeschichtliche Perspektiven erweitert: Die Studierenden vertiefen ihre Fähigkeiten zur eigenständigen Analyse komplexer literarischer und audiovisueller Gegenstände, reflektieren unterschiedliche theoretische und methodische Zugänge und erproben, wie sich das Verhältnis von Literatur, Film und Kritischer Theorie an konkreten Gegenständen als eigenständige Forschungsfrage entwickeln lässt.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die poetologischen Grundbegriffe ‚Nachahmung', ‚Originalität' und ‚Autorschaft', die für das Verständnis von Literatur und Kunst insgesamt konstitutiv sind. Der Schwerpunkt liegt auf ästhetischen und literaturtheoretischen Positionen des 18. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere auf Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, dessen Überlegungen zu Kunst, Wirkung und Darstellung maßgeblich zur Neubestimmung des Verhältnisses von Mimesis und schöpferischer Originalität beitragen. Ergänzend werden Positionen u. a. von Johann Christoph Gottsched, Johann Joachim Winckelmann, Karl Philipp Moritz und Johann Wolfgang von Goethe einbezogen, um die Herausbildung moderner Autorschaftskonzepte und die Aufwertung des Geniebegriffs um 1800 nachzuvollziehen. Ausgehend von der aristotelischen Mimesis-Konzeption wird die Entwicklung dieser Begriffe historisch rekonstruiert und zugleich kritisch reflektiert: von der antiken Theorie der Nachahmung über frühneuzeitliche Regelpoetiken bis hin zur modernen Vorstellung des autonomen, originären Subjekts. Dabei wird sichtbar, wie sich die drei Leitbegriffe gegenseitig bedingen und zugleich in Spannung zu einander stehen.

Kommentar

Zur Formenbildung des Verbs stehen im Deutschen flexivische Mittel wie die Affigierung ("lachen": "lach-te") und verschiedene Formen des Vokalwechsels ("lesen": "liest", "las", "läse") zur Verfügung. Klassen von Verben werden im Standarddeutschen danach unterschieden, welche dieser flexivischen Mittel sie zum Ausdruck von Person, Numerus, Tempus und Modus einsetzen (stark vs. schwach flektierende Verben). Aber schon im Standarddeutschen bestehen häufig Unsicherheiten in Bezug auf die Bildung bestimmter Formen: Heißt es im Präteritum "frug" oder "fragte", "dünkte" oder "deuchte", "glomm" oder "glimmte"? In manchen Dialekten hört man Formen wie "gelest" (statt "gelesen") oder "gang" (statt "gegangen"), standardsprachliche Mittel werden also anders eingesetzt als erwartet oder fallen vollständig weg. In diesem Seminar wollen wir uns mit der Formenbildung des Verbs im Standarddeutschen und seinen Varietäten beschäftigen. Wichtige Fragen werden sein, welche Varianten es bei der Bildung individueller Formen gibt und wie die Verwendung dieser formalen Varianten erklärt werden kann.

Haben Sie beim Schreiben oder Lesen schon einmal gedacht „Dieser Satz ist zu kompliziert" und ihn vielleicht sogar umgeschrieben? Woran liegt es, dass wir bestimmte Äußerungen als kompliziert empfinden? Was bedeutet eigentlich „kompliziert" und gibt es ein objektives Maß für sprachliche Komplexität? Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Nachdem wir uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Komplexität und verschiedenen Möglichkeiten ihrer Beschreibung auseinandergesetzt haben, entwickeln wir im zweiten Teil des Seminars eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine eigene Studie.

Wir können aber mit Sätzen wie "Karl isst Kuchen" beginnen und uns langsam steigern.

Also Wortarten, syntaktische Funktionen, syntagmatische Relationen - alles kommt ran und dann gucken wir mal, wie viele Drehungen wir aufs Parkett legen.

Wir lesen (einzelne) Kapitel in Grundriss der deutschen Grammatik im Detail und lernen grammatisch zu argumentieren. Warum gibt es so viele Arten von Attributen und wo sind die Grenzen? Was können infinite Verbformen im Gegensatz zu finiten Verbformen und warum? Welche Funktionen können Nebensätze einnehmen, wie sind sie also grammatisch zu beschreiben und wie semantisch? Was zeichnet die Wortstellung im Deutschen aus?

Die Themen wählen wir zu Beginn gemeinsam aus.

Eine Frage zu stellen oder eine Antwort zu geben gehört wohl zu den häufigsten und wichtigsten sprachlichen Handlungen, die wir in Gesprächen vollziehen. Es ist uns intuitiv sofort klar, was in einer Frage-Antwort-Sequenz passiert: Wer eine Frage stellt, weist auf eine Wissenslücke hin, die gefüllt werden soll; die Antwort kommt diesem Wunsch nach. Werfen wir jedoch einen Blick auf Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen, wie sie tatsächlich in verschiedenen sozialen Kontexten auftreten, so eröffnet sich ein weitaus vielfältigeres und komplexeres Bild. Wenn eine Lehrkraft eine Frage stellt, geht es oftmals nicht um ein eigenes Wissensdefizit, sondern um die Überprüfung des Wissens eines Schülers/einer Schülerin. Wenn wir zu Beginn eines Gesprächs mit einer Kollegin "Na, wie geht's?" fragen, interessieren wir uns in der Regel nicht wirklich für ihr persönliches Befinden. Vielmehr handelt es sich dabei um ein Ritual, um miteinander in Interaktion zu treten. Auch wenn wir Antworten geben, tun wir mehr, als einfach nur die erfragte Information zu übermitteln. So hat es andere Implikationen, wenn wir auf die Frage "Kommst du morgen?" mit "Natürlich!" anstelle eines einfachen "Ja." antworten.

Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen sind von zentraler Bedeutung für die soziale Interaktion. Die Konversationsanalytikerin Tanya Stivers argumentiert sogar, dass die Frage-Antwort-Sequenz einen Mikrokosmos darstellt, in dem wir im Detail nachvollziehen können, wie wir im Gespräch soziale Beziehungen herstellen und bearbeiten. In diesem Seminar werden wir untersuchen, welche Handlungsspielräume uns Fragen und Antworten in unterschiedlichen alltäglichen Situationen eröffnen (z.B. Gespräch unter Freunden, Eltern-Kind-Interaktion, Schulunterricht, etc.) und welche kommunikativen Zwecke sie erfüllen.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

121719 S - Das Nibelungenlied: Sagenwelten und höfische Krisen

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Do	12:00 - 14:00	wöch.	1.09.2.12	15.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Judith Klinger

Kommentar

Das um 1200 entstandene Nibelungenlied gehört zu den großartigsten Texten des Hochmittelalters, der nach zwei Jahrhunderten der Erforschung immer noch viele Fragen und Rätsel aufgibt. Grund dafür ist die Komplexität dieses Heldenepos, das einerseits höfischen Glanz, Minne-Szenarien und spielerisch-lebhafte Dialoge, andererseits heroische Ausnahmegestalten, zugespitzte Konflikte und Gewalteskalationen bis hin zum Untergang bietet. Neben dem Drachentöter Siegfried, dem höfischen König Gunther und dem ebenso treuen wie untreuen Hagen von Tronje dominieren mit Kriemhild und Brünhild zwei außergewöhnliche Frauenfiguren die Erzählung: Brünhilds exorbitante Stärke und Kriemhilds radikale Rache ermöglichen beiden ein Gewalthandeln, das sich zeitgenössischen Weiblichkeitskonstrukten sperrt. Also doch kein Heldenepos, sondern eher ein Heldinnenroman?

Grenzüberschreitungen und Ausnahmeereignisse bestimmen jedenfalls die Handlung, daher wandeln sich die 'Spielregeln' der nibelungischen Welt im Verlauf der Geschichte und wirken oft unergründlich. Durch die überlieferte Gestalt des Nibelungenliedes hindurch schimmert zudem eine mündliche Sagentradition, die auch in der altnordischen Literatur Dichtungen über Sigurd, Gunnar und Brynhild angeregt hat. Wie diese Werke arbeitet der mittelhochdeutsche Text an der Bewältigung einer bisweilen widersprüchlichen Fülle des Stoffs und seinen Ambivalenzen. Den Kern und zentralen Kipppunkt der Geschichte bildet die heimtückische Ermordung Siegfrieds, der als einzigartiger Heros auch noch nach seinem Tod die erzählte Welt beherrscht.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit drei wichtigen Vertretern dieser Art von Naturlyrik im 20. Jahrhundert, genauer in der Nachkriegszeit: mit Peter Huchel (1903-1981), Erich Arendt (1903-1984) und Johannes Bobrowski (1917-1965). Diese drei Autoren, die sich persönlich gut kannten, sind eng mit Brandenburg und Berlin verbunden: Huchel lebte lange in Wilhelmshorst bei Potsdam, Arendt wuchs in Neuruppin auf und lebte, wie auch Bobrowski, nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges in (Ost-)Berlin. Gegenstand der Seminararbeit sind Gedichte der drei Lyriker, außerdem wird es um ihre Erfahrungen mit und Konzeptionen von Geschichte und Geschichtlichkeit sowie um die entsprechende zeichenhafte Verwendung von Sprache. Vorkenntnisse zur Lyrikanalyse sind von Vorteil, aber nicht Bedingung für die Teilnahme.

Comics oder Graphic Novels sind in den letzten Jahrzehnten zu einem selbstverständlichen Teil der Literatur geworden und seit langem auch ein Gegenstand literaturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Comics beruhen auf der Kombination verschiedener medialer Zeichensysteme, die durch ihr Zusammenwirken eine eigene sprachlich-visuelle Möglichkeit der Erzählung erzeugen. Im Seminar wollen wir an exemplarischen Beispielen verschiedene Möglichkeiten von Comics untersuchen und dabei eingeführte Analysetechniken kennenlernen. Ein genaues Programm wird in der ersten Sitzung vereinbart. Vorschläge für Präsentationen können Sie an fabian.lampart@uni-potsdam.de richten.

Kommentar

Alexander Kluge (1932-2026) war Filmemacher, literarischer Autor und kritischer Theoretiker – und gerade das Zusammenspiel dieser drei Rollen macht sein Werk zu einem herausragenden Gegenstand literatur- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Forschung. Das Seminar nimmt die gegenwärtig zu beobachtende Kanonisierung Kluges zum Anlass, sein seit den 1960er Jahren entstandenes multimediales Werk bis hin zu jüngsten Auseinandersetzungen mit Literatur und Künstlicher Intelligenz zu erschließen. An ausgewählten Filmen, literarischen Texten sowie Fernseh- und Digitalformaten untersuchen wir Problemfelder wie biographisches Erzählen, Kunst und politische Bildung, Literatur und Wissen, Geschichte und Gegenwart, Affekt und Zeit sowie Öffentlichkeit und Ökonomie. Dabei werden literaturwissenschaftliche Fragestellungen gezielt um medien-, kultur- und wissensgeschichtliche Perspektiven erweitert: Die Studierenden vertiefen ihre Fähigkeiten zur eigenständigen Analyse komplexer literarischer und audiovisueller Gegenstände, reflektieren unterschiedliche theoretische und methodische Zugänge und erproben, wie sich das Verhältnis von Literatur, Film und Kritischer Theorie an konkreten Gegenständen als eigenständige Forschungsfrage entwickeln lässt.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die poetologischen Grundbegriffe ‚Nachahmung', ‚Originalität' und ‚Autorschaft', die für das Verständnis von Literatur und Kunst insgesamt konstitutiv sind. Der Schwerpunkt liegt auf ästhetischen und literaturtheoretischen Positionen des 18. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere auf Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, dessen Überlegungen zu Kunst, Wirkung und Darstellung maßgeblich zur Neubestimmung des Verhältnisses von Mimesis und schöpferischer Originalität beitragen. Ergänzend werden Positionen u. a. von Johann Christoph Gottsched, Johann Joachim Winckelmann, Karl Philipp Moritz und Johann Wolfgang von Goethe einbezogen, um die Herausbildung moderner Autorschaftskonzepte und die Aufwertung des Geniebegriffs um 1800 nachzuvollziehen. Ausgehend von der aristotelischen Mimesis-Konzeption wird die Entwicklung dieser Begriffe historisch rekonstruiert und zugleich kritisch reflektiert: von der antiken Theorie der Nachahmung über frühneuzeitliche Regelpoetiken bis hin zur modernen Vorstellung des autonomen, originären Subjekts. Dabei wird sichtbar, wie sich die drei Leitbegriffe gegenseitig bedingen und zugleich in Spannung zu einander stehen.

Zur Formenbildung des Verbs stehen im Deutschen flexivische Mittel wie die Affigierung ("lachen": "lach-te") und verschiedene Formen des Vokalwechsels ("lesen": "liest", "las", "läse") zur Verfügung. Klassen von Verben werden im Standarddeutschen danach unterschieden, welche dieser flexivischen Mittel sie zum Ausdruck von Person, Numerus, Tempus und Modus einsetzen (stark vs. schwach flektierende Verben). Aber schon im Standarddeutschen bestehen häufig Unsicherheiten in Bezug auf die Bildung bestimmter Formen: Heißt es im Präteritum "frug" oder "fragte", "dünkte" oder "deuchte", "glomm" oder "glimmte"? In manchen Dialekten hört man Formen wie "gelest" (statt "gelesen") oder "gang" (statt "gegangen"), standardsprachliche Mittel werden also anders eingesetzt als erwartet oder fallen vollständig weg. In diesem Seminar wollen wir uns mit der Formenbildung des Verbs im Standarddeutschen und seinen Varietäten beschäftigen. Wichtige Fragen werden sein, welche Varianten es bei der Bildung individueller Formen gibt und wie die Verwendung dieser formalen Varianten erklärt werden kann.

Haben Sie beim Schreiben oder Lesen schon einmal gedacht „Dieser Satz ist zu kompliziert" und ihn vielleicht sogar umgeschrieben? Woran liegt es, dass wir bestimmte Äußerungen als kompliziert empfinden? Was bedeutet eigentlich „kompliziert" und gibt es ein objektives Maß für sprachliche Komplexität? Diesen Fragen gehen wir im Seminar nach. Nachdem wir uns zunächst mit dem Begriff der Komplexität und verschiedenen Möglichkeiten ihrer Beschreibung auseinandergesetzt haben, entwickeln wir im zweiten Teil des Seminars eine eigene Fragestellung und planen dazu eine eigene Studie.

Ziel des Seminars ist, dass Sie Sätze wie "Der 2008 veröffentlichte Briefwechsel zwischen beiden zeigt, wie schwer es war, eine gemeinsame Sprache zu finden, um den eigentlich unüberbrückbaren Abgrund zwischen beiden Familiengeschichten zu überwinden." (tagesschau.de, 25.6.2026, zum 100.Geburtstag von Ingeborg Bachmann) sicher analysieren können.

Wir können aber mit Sätzen wie "Karl isst Kuchen" beginnen und uns langsam steigern.

Also Wortarten, syntaktische Funktionen, syntagmatische Relationen - alles kommt ran und dann gucken wir mal, wie viele Drehungen wir aufs Parkett legen.

Wir lesen (einzelne) Kapitel in Grundriss der deutschen Grammatik im Detail und lernen grammatisch zu argumentieren. Warum gibt es so viele Arten von Attributen und wo sind die Grenzen? Was können infinite Verbformen im Gegensatz zu finiten Verbformen und warum? Welche Funktionen können Nebensätze einnehmen, wie sind sie also grammatisch zu beschreiben und wie semantisch? Was zeichnet die Wortstellung im Deutschen aus?

Die Themen wählen wir zu Beginn gemeinsam aus.

Der Kurs gibt einen Überblick über die Gebiete der Phonologie und deren Systematik. Neben dem Lautsystem werden phonologische Merkmale und Regeln sowie hierarchische Strukturen zum Aufbau der Silbe und übergeordneter prosodischer Konstituenten betrachtet. Dabei wird auch auf Ableitungsmechanismen für Betonungen und die Beziehungen zu morphologischen und syntaktischen Strukturen eingegangen.

Kommentar

Eine Frage zu stellen oder eine Antwort zu geben gehört wohl zu den häufigsten und wichtigsten sprachlichen Handlungen, die wir in Gesprächen vollziehen. Es ist uns intuitiv sofort klar, was in einer Frage-Antwort-Sequenz passiert: Wer eine Frage stellt, weist auf eine Wissenslücke hin, die gefüllt werden soll; die Antwort kommt diesem Wunsch nach. Werfen wir jedoch einen Blick auf Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen, wie sie tatsächlich in verschiedenen sozialen Kontexten auftreten, so eröffnet sich ein weitaus vielfältigeres und komplexeres Bild. Wenn eine Lehrkraft eine Frage stellt, geht es oftmals nicht um ein eigenes Wissensdefizit, sondern um die Überprüfung des Wissens eines Schülers/einer Schülerin. Wenn wir zu Beginn eines Gesprächs mit einer Kollegin "Na, wie geht's?" fragen, interessieren wir uns in der Regel nicht wirklich für ihr persönliches Befinden. Vielmehr handelt es sich dabei um ein Ritual, um miteinander in Interaktion zu treten. Auch wenn wir Antworten geben, tun wir mehr, als einfach nur die erfragte Information zu übermitteln. So hat es andere Implikationen, wenn wir auf die Frage "Kommst du morgen?" mit "Natürlich!" anstelle eines einfachen "Ja." antworten.

Frage-Antwort-Sequenzen sind von zentraler Bedeutung für die soziale Interaktion. Die Konversationsanalytikerin Tanya Stivers argumentiert sogar, dass die Frage-Antwort-Sequenz einen Mikrokosmos darstellt, in dem wir im Detail nachvollziehen können, wie wir im Gespräch soziale Beziehungen herstellen und bearbeiten. In diesem Seminar werden wir untersuchen, welche Handlungsspielräume uns Fragen und Antworten in unterschiedlichen alltäglichen Situationen eröffnen (z.B. Gespräch unter Freunden, Eltern-Kind-Interaktion, Schulunterricht, etc.) und welche kommunikativen Zwecke sie erfüllen.

Im Seminar lernen Sie didaktische Ansätze und Methoden kennen, wie Sie Ihren Unterricht sowohl diversitätssensibel als auch diversitätsreflexiv gestalten können. Ein diversitätssensibles Unterrichten ist darauf ausgerichtet, besondere Bedarfe Ihrer Schüler*innen in der Unterrichtsgestaltung zu berücksichtigen, ohne ihre individuellen Stärken und Ausgangslage zu vernachlässigen. Dies betrifft zum Beispiel neurodiverse Schüler*innen oder solche, die sprachlichen Förderbedarf haben. Diversitätsreflexive Unterrichtsgestaltung zielt hingegen zum einen darauf, Lerngegenstände (Texte und Medien) auszuwählen, die zum einen die Pluralität und Diversität der Schüler*innen und der Lebenswelt repräsentieren. Dazu gehören beispielsweise Medien, in denen geschlechtliche Vielfalt dargestellt wird. Ebenso geht es darum, die postmigrantische Gesellschaft zu präsentieren oder aber auch Dis_Ability-Figuren in den Texten empowernd wiederzufinden. Sie werden im Seminar entsprechend Texte und Medien kennenlernen, die diversitätsreflexiv gestaltet sind. Diversitätsreflexiv bedeutet jedoch auch, soziale Kategorien (z.B. Geschlecht, Klasse, Kultur und Rasse, Dis_Ability) kritisch zu hinterfragen und Texte und Medien kritisch gegenzulesen. Wir werden also auch Texte und Medien dahingehend prüfen, wie sie Diversität darstellen und ob es ihnen gelingt, Stereotypisierungen und Exklusionsmechanismen und Besonderung zu vermeiden. Weiterführend geht es dann auch darum, Schüler*innen für die Macht von sozialen Kategorisierungen zu sensibilisieren und Texte so zu analysieren, dass Stereotypisierungen deutlich werden.

Das grundlegende Muster eines jeden deutschen Satzes ist seine vom Verb ausgehende Einteilung in Felder. Wer dieses Muster kennt, bekommt mehr und mehr einen grammatischen Blick auf Sprache und Sprachen. Dieses Seminar möchte zeigen, wie Sie sich über das Feldermodell allen in der Schule wichtigen Mustern der Grammatik annähern können. Wir machen das anhand ausgewählter Texte und praktischer Aufgaben, die auch im Grammatikunterricht eingesetzt werden können. Dabei werden Sie einen neuen Blick und vielleicht sogar so etwas wie Vorfreude darauf gewinnen.

Im Seminar sollen nach einer genuin kognitionstheoretischen Einführung in die Zusammenhänge von Sprache, Fachwissen und Kompetenzerwerb Ziele, Methoden und Vorgehensweisen des sprachsensiblen Fachunterrichts dargestellt sowie anhand der Umarbeitung konkreter Unterrichtsreihen erarbeitet und diskutiert werden. Ziel ist es, die Teilnehmenden für die Bedeutung wie die Besonderheiten sprachlichen Lernens zu sensibilisieren und Stolpersteine wie Chancen im Umgang mit sprachlichen Problemen bewusst zu machen.

Die Arbeitsweise in dem Seminar haben die Teilnehmenden der vergangenen Semester (und auch ich) als ebenso sinnvoll wie beglückend erfahren: Anhand praktischer Aufgaben für die Schule wird sich zeigen, dass das Entdecken der grundlegenden Muster unserer Sprache Freude machen kann. Wenn Sie Grammatisches bisher eher umgangen haben oder Ihr Wissen auffrischen wollen, sind Sie hier richtig.

Wenn Sie sich dazu entschließen, stellen Sie für die sieben Werktage des Seminars alle sonstigen Verpflichtungen zurück, damit Sie sich ggf. Zeit für die Nacharbeit bzw. Vorbereitung nehmen können. Wir arbeiten immer von 10.00 bis ca. 13.30 Uhr, sodass Sie am Nachmittag frei haben.

Da es sich um ein forschungsorientiertes Seminar handelt, ist eine regelmäßige Teilnahme Voraussetzung für Leistungspunkte. Sie haben weiterhin sehr viel mehr vom Seminar, wenn Sie sich vorab mit der Seminarliteratur auseinandersetzen.

Korrekturen bilden als formatives Feedback einen entscheidenden Baustein im systematischen Kompetenzerwerb – so die Theorie. In der Praxis hingegen sieht es leider häufig anders aus, denn oft werden Korrekturen ausgerechnet von denjenigen Schüler/innen nicht hinreichend rezipiert, die sie im Grunde am nötigsten hätten. Verbunden mit der Tatsache, dass Korrekturen einen erheblichen Teil der Arbeit von Deutschlehrkräften binden und als mühsam und anstrengend wahrgenommen werden, hat das Berggruen-Gymnasium Berlin einen mutigen Schritt gewagt und – mit wissenschaftlicher Begleitung der Uni Potsdam – neue Wege der Korrektur- und Feedbackpraxis beschritten. Im Projektseminar begleiten wir diesen Weg, und zwar bereits zum dritten Mal. Unser Ziel ist es, im Austausch mit den Lehrkräften und in Auseinandersetzung mit der wissenschaftlichen Literatur zur Wirksamkeit von Korrekturen eine sinnvolle Feedbackpraxis zu entwickeln und zu evaluieren. Ziel ist eine Korrekturpraxis, die Lernende wirklich fördert und Lehrende nicht über Gebühr belastet.

Kommentar

Im Literaturunterricht soll laut Bildungsstandards für den mittleren Schulabschluss (2022) Literatur in unterschiedlicher Medialität berücksichtigt werden. Dazu zählen neben audiovisueller (Filme, Computerspiele) auch grafische Literatur wie Comics und deren Sonderform Graphic Novels. Im Rahmen des Seminars lernen die Studierenden zunächst die theoretischen Grundlagen dieses, doch bisher eher wenig beachteten Unterrichtsgegenstandes, sowie bekannte Werke und Recherchemöglichkeiten kennen. Im Zentrum des Seminar des Seminars steht anschließend die Didaktisierung von Comics im Unterricht sowie die eigene Erprobung von analytischen, handlungs- und produktionsorientierten Methoden zur Erschließung von Comics. Die Testatleistung besteht darin, einen Auszug aus einem selbst gewählten Comic für den Untericht im Team auszuwählen und dazu ein ziel-, gegenstands- und lernendenorientiertes Aufgabenset zu entwickeln.

Im Seminar lernen Sie didaktische Ansätze und Methoden kennen, wie Sie Ihren Unterricht sowohl diversitätssensibel als auch diversitätsreflexiv gestalten können. Ein diversitätssensibles Unterrichten ist darauf ausgerichtet, besondere Bedarfe Ihrer Schüler*innen in der Unterrichtsgestaltung zu berücksichtigen, ohne ihre individuellen Stärken und Ausgangslage zu vernachlässigen. Dies betrifft zum Beispiel neurodiverse Schüler*innen oder solche, die sprachlichen Förderbedarf haben. Diversitätsreflexive Unterrichtsgestaltung zielt hingegen zum einen darauf, Lerngegenstände (Texte und Medien) auszuwählen, die zum einen die Pluralität und Diversität der Schüler*innen und der Lebenswelt repräsentieren. Dazu gehören beispielsweise Medien, in denen geschlechtliche Vielfalt dargestellt wird. Ebenso geht es darum, die postmigrantische Gesellschaft zu präsentieren oder aber auch Dis_Ability-Figuren in den Texten empowernd wiederzufinden. Sie werden im Seminar entsprechend Texte und Medien kennenlernen, die diversitätsreflexiv gestaltet sind. Diversitätsreflexiv bedeutet jedoch auch, soziale Kategorien (z.B. Geschlecht, Klasse, Kultur und Rasse, Dis_Ability) kritisch zu hinterfragen und Texte und Medien kritisch gegenzulesen. Wir werden also auch Texte und Medien dahingehend prüfen, wie sie Diversität darstellen und ob es ihnen gelingt, Stereotypisierungen und Exklusionsmechanismen und Besonderung zu vermeiden. Weiterführend geht es dann auch darum, Schüler*innen für die Macht von sozialen Kategorisierungen zu sensibilisieren und Texte so zu analysieren, dass Stereotypisierungen deutlich werden.

Das grundlegende Muster eines jeden deutschen Satzes ist seine vom Verb ausgehende Einteilung in Felder. Wer dieses Muster kennt, bekommt mehr und mehr einen grammatischen Blick auf Sprache und Sprachen. Dieses Seminar möchte zeigen, wie Sie sich über das Feldermodell allen in der Schule wichtigen Mustern der Grammatik annähern können. Wir machen das anhand ausgewählter Texte und praktischer Aufgaben, die auch im Grammatikunterricht eingesetzt werden können. Dabei werden Sie einen neuen Blick und vielleicht sogar so etwas wie Vorfreude darauf gewinnen.

Sprache und Sprachgebrauch sind aus keinem schulischen Lernprozess wegzudenken und bilden eines der wesentlichen Fundamente für den Lernerfolg von Schülerinnen und Schülern im Laufe ihrer Schullaufbahn. Aus diesem Grund ist Sprache als Schlüsselkompetenz auch in den außersprachlichen Fachdisziplinen ins Zentrum des Interesses gerückt.
Im Seminar sollen nach einer genuin kognitionstheoretischen Einführung in die Zusammenhänge von Sprache, Fachwissen und Kompetenzerwerb Ziele, Methoden und Vorgehensweisen des sprachsensiblen Fachunterrichts dargestellt sowie anhand der Umarbeitung konkreter Unterrichtsreihen erarbeitet und diskutiert werden. Ziel ist es, die Teilnehmenden für die Bedeutung wie die Besonderheiten sprachlichen Lernens zu sensibilisieren und Stolpersteine wie Chancen im Umgang mit sprachlichen Problemen bewusst zu machen.

Kommentar

Dieses Grundlagenseminar richtet sich an Studierende mit Deutschkenntnissen auf dem Niveau B1–B2, die ihre Aussprache und ihr Hörverstehen im Deutschen gezielt verbessern möchten. Aussprache und Intonation sind zentrale Bestandteile sprachlicher Kompetenz und spielen eine wichtige Rolle für Verständlichkeit und kommunikative Sicherheit.

Im Seminar werden grundlegende Aspekte der deutschen Phonetik und Prosodie eingeführt und mit praktischen Übungen verbunden. Die Studierenden lernen zentrale Laut- und Betonungsmuster des Deutschen kennen und entwickeln ein besseres Bewusstsein für Rhythmus, Melodie und Artikulation der Sprache.

Neben der Arbeit an Einzellauten und prosodischen Strukturen werden auch der Einsatz von Stimme, Atmung und Körper in der gesprochenen Sprache thematisiert. Ziel ist es, sowohl ein grundlegendes Verständnis für phonetische Strukturen zu entwickeln als auch die eigene Aussprache praktisch zu trainieren.

Phonetische Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich. Das Grundlagenseminar kann nur in Kombination mit dem begleitenden Praxisteil belegt werden.

Inhalte:

- Einzellaute und Lautsystem des Deutschen
- Prosodie (Rhythmus, Betonung und Intonation)
- Stimme, Atmung und Körper in der gesprochenen Sprache
- praktische Übungen zum Aussprachetraining

Kommunikation ist stark von kulturellen Normen und Erwartungen geprägt. Was in einer Kultur als höflich, normal oder humorvoll gilt, kann in einer anderen Kultur als unhöflich oder sogar tabu wahrgenommen werden.

In diesem Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit verschiedenen Formen der Kommunikation im interkulturellen Kontext. Wir analysieren unter anderem:

- typische Merkmale deutscher Kommunikationsstile
- Unterschiede zwischen formeller und informeller Kommunikation
- interkulturelle Missverständnisse im Alltag
- Werbung als kulturelle Kommunikationsform
- Tabus und sensible Themen in verschiedenen Kulturen

Das Seminar verbindet sprachliche Praxis, kulturelle Analyse und interkulturelle Reflexion.

Das Seminar ist eine paradigmatische Einführung in die Biblische Archäologie, die archäologische Funde und biblische Texe jeweils eigenständig bearbeitet und dann miteinander ins Gespräch bringt. Das exemplarische Arbeitsfeld wird die in Bildern fassbare Religionsgeschichte sein, mit anderen Worten: die visuellen Konstanten, Veränderungen und Entwicklungen von religiösen Traditionen im historischen und kulturellen Kontext des Antiken Israel. Dabei geht es primär um Göttinnen und Göttern und andere Kultbilder. Für deren Verständnis grundlegend ist ein Einblick in die materiellen Gattungen der Bildträger (Siegel, anthropomorphe und theriomorphe Figurinen und Reliefs) im Zusammenhang ihrer geographischen Fundkontexte und chronologischen Einordnungen. Darüber hinaus sollen die bildlichen Darstellungen (Ikonographie) auf ihre methodische Erschließung hin diskutiert werden, nicht zuletzt im Blick auf eine ikonographische Exegese der biblischen Texte. Eingebettet werden die ikonographischen Erkenntnisse aus Israel in die ägyptische und altorientalische Bild- und Motivwelt.

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Kommentar

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne. Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

„Jüdischer Film" ist ein schwieriger Begriff. Denn was macht einen Film jüdisch? Das Thema, der Produktionskontext, seine Schauspieler und Schauspielerinnen? Trotz dieser offenen Fragen begleitet der vielschichtige Zusammenhang von Film und Judentum die Geschichte des Films seit ihren Anfängen – vor allem als Repräsentation jüdischer Lebenswelten und Figuren, aber immer auch als Zuschreibung für Filmschaffende und ihr Werk. Das Seminar versteht eine jüdische Filmgeschichte als Schnittstelle von Filmgeschichte und Jüdischen Studien und nähert sich dem komplexen Zusammenhang chronologisch: von den ersten jüdischen Filmpionieren über die Darstellung des Judentums im frühen Film, die jüdischen Produzenten Hollywoods, zionistische Filme und das jiddische Kino der Zwischenkriegszeit bis hin zum Holocaustfilm und zeitgenössischen Darstellungen jüdischer Themen und Figuren in den Quality-TV-Serien der Streamingdienste. Dabei führt das Seminar an unterschiedliche wissenschaftliche Zugänge heran.

This course explores the History of the Holocaust, the Nazi attempt to murder the Jewish population in Europe, in its temporal, geographical and conceptual complexity. The "road to Auschwitz" was not paved by destiny but took shape as a result of concrete decisions taken by German Nazi officials and their allies, acting under specific circumstances of occupation and total war, with a particular historical baggage of extreme nationalism and antisemitism.
In the sessions we will delve into the main historiographical debates and questions in the field. Was the genocide the execution of a prearranged "exterminatory mindset" or the unanticipated result of a process of "cumulative radicalization"? Were the perpetrators "ordinary men" or "willing executioners"? Why the Germans and why the Jews? What did the world know? How did the Jews react?
Students will engage these conundrums through the reading of secondary literature and primary sources emanating from the victims, perpetrators and bystanders. By analyzing phenomena spanning throughout the Nazi dictatorship and World War II, comprising Germany but also Western, Eastern and Southeastern Europe, and involving Jewish groups and persons with different backgrounds, the course will provide an introductory picture of an event of such magnitude that its aftermath still reverberates in our contemporary world.

Kommentar

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Kommentar

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

In dieser einführenden Vorlesung werden Sie mit Kultur, Geschichte und den Grundlehren des Judentums vertraut gemacht. Wer ist eigentlich Jude? Woran glauben Jüdinnen und Juden und was ist der Unterschied zwischen Aschkenasen und Sepharden? Wie entstand moderner Antisemitismus und was ist der Unterschied zu Antijudaismus? Glauben Juden an den Messias?

Das sind nur einige Fragen, auf die Sie im Laufe des Semesters Antworten erhalten werden.

Das Seminar ist eine paradigmatische Einführung in die Biblische Archäologie, die archäologische Funde und biblische Texe jeweils eigenständig bearbeitet und dann miteinander ins Gespräch bringt. Das exemplarische Arbeitsfeld wird die in Bildern fassbare Religionsgeschichte sein, mit anderen Worten: die visuellen Konstanten, Veränderungen und Entwicklungen von religiösen Traditionen im historischen und kulturellen Kontext des Antiken Israel. Dabei geht es primär um Göttinnen und Göttern und andere Kultbilder. Für deren Verständnis grundlegend ist ein Einblick in die materiellen Gattungen der Bildträger (Siegel, anthropomorphe und theriomorphe Figurinen und Reliefs) im Zusammenhang ihrer geographischen Fundkontexte und chronologischen Einordnungen. Darüber hinaus sollen die bildlichen Darstellungen (Ikonographie) auf ihre methodische Erschließung hin diskutiert werden, nicht zuletzt im Blick auf eine ikonographische Exegese der biblischen Texte. Eingebettet werden die ikonographischen Erkenntnisse aus Israel in die ägyptische und altorientalische Bild- und Motivwelt.

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne. Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

„Jüdischer Film" ist ein schwieriger Begriff. Denn was macht einen Film jüdisch? Das Thema, der Produktionskontext, seine Schauspieler und Schauspielerinnen? Trotz dieser offenen Fragen begleitet der vielschichtige Zusammenhang von Film und Judentum die Geschichte des Films seit ihren Anfängen – vor allem als Repräsentation jüdischer Lebenswelten und Figuren, aber immer auch als Zuschreibung für Filmschaffende und ihr Werk. Das Seminar versteht eine jüdische Filmgeschichte als Schnittstelle von Filmgeschichte und Jüdischen Studien und nähert sich dem komplexen Zusammenhang chronologisch: von den ersten jüdischen Filmpionieren über die Darstellung des Judentums im frühen Film, die jüdischen Produzenten Hollywoods, zionistische Filme und das jiddische Kino der Zwischenkriegszeit bis hin zum Holocaustfilm und zeitgenössischen Darstellungen jüdischer Themen und Figuren in den Quality-TV-Serien der Streamingdienste. Dabei führt das Seminar an unterschiedliche wissenschaftliche Zugänge heran.

This course explores the History of the Holocaust, the Nazi attempt to murder the Jewish population in Europe, in its temporal, geographical and conceptual complexity. The "road to Auschwitz" was not paved by destiny but took shape as a result of concrete decisions taken by German Nazi officials and their allies, acting under specific circumstances of occupation and total war, with a particular historical baggage of extreme nationalism and antisemitism.
In the sessions we will delve into the main historiographical debates and questions in the field. Was the genocide the execution of a prearranged "exterminatory mindset" or the unanticipated result of a process of "cumulative radicalization"? Were the perpetrators "ordinary men" or "willing executioners"? Why the Germans and why the Jews? What did the world know? How did the Jews react?
Students will engage these conundrums through the reading of secondary literature and primary sources emanating from the victims, perpetrators and bystanders. By analyzing phenomena spanning throughout the Nazi dictatorship and World War II, comprising Germany but also Western, Eastern and Southeastern Europe, and involving Jewish groups and persons with different backgrounds, the course will provide an introductory picture of an event of such magnitude that its aftermath still reverberates in our contemporary world.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Kommentar

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

Kommentar

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne.
Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

Kommentar

Kommentar

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

Kommentar

This course explores the History of the Holocaust, the Nazi attempt to murder the Jewish population in Europe, in its temporal, geographical and conceptual complexity. The "road to Auschwitz" was not paved by destiny but took shape as a result of concrete decisions taken by German Nazi officials and their allies, acting under specific circumstances of occupation and total war, with a particular historical baggage of extreme nationalism and antisemitism.
In the sessions we will delve into the main historiographical debates and questions in the field. Was the genocide the execution of a prearranged "exterminatory mindset" or the unanticipated result of a process of "cumulative radicalization"? Were the perpetrators "ordinary men" or "willing executioners"? Why the Germans and why the Jews? What did the world know? How did the Jews react?
Students will engage these conundrums through the reading of secondary literature and primary sources emanating from the victims, perpetrators and bystanders. By analyzing phenomena spanning throughout the Nazi dictatorship and World War II, comprising Germany but also Western, Eastern and Southeastern Europe, and involving Jewish groups and persons with different backgrounds, the course will provide an introductory picture of an event of such magnitude that its aftermath still reverberates in our contemporary world.

Kommentar

„Die drei Kulturen" (Las tres culturas) verweisen auf die drei monotheistischen Religionen Judentum, Christentum und Islam auf der Iberischen Halbinsel des 8. bis 15. Jahrhunderts – im islamisch regierten Al-Andalus und in den christlichen Königreichen des Nordens und der „Reconquista" (Rückeroberung), die später zu den territorialen Einheiten zusammengeschlossen wurden, die wir heute als Spanien oder Portugal kennen. Eng verbunden mit den „drei Kulturen" ist die Idee der „Convivencia", eines Zusammenlebens, das in den meisten Fällen romantisch als friedliches, bisweilen sogar gleichberechtigtes Miteinander unterschiedlicher Menschen und Kulturen gedacht wurde und bis heute zahlreiche Diskussionen über interreligiöse Begegnungen und die Frage religiöser Toleranz und Intoleranz prägt. In unserem Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Geschichte dieses Zusammenlebens, den kulturellen Errungenschaften, die aus ihm hervorgegangen sind, spanischen Erinnerungen an dieses Zusammenleben wie auch mit aktuellen wissenschaftlichen Arbeiten, die traditionelle Narrative an bestimmten Stellen infrage stellen und auf eine neuere und differenziertere Sichtweise drängen.

Woran glauben Jüdinnen und Juden und was ist der Unterschied zwischen Aschkenasen und Sepharden? Wie entstand moderner Antisemitismus und was ist der Unterschied zu Antijudaismus? Glauben Juden an den Messias?

Das Seminar ist eine paradigmatische Einführung in die Biblische Archäologie, die archäologische Funde und biblische Texe jeweils eigenständig bearbeitet und dann miteinander ins Gespräch bringt. Das exemplarische Arbeitsfeld wird die in Bildern fassbare Religionsgeschichte sein, mit anderen Worten: die visuellen Konstanten, Veränderungen und Entwicklungen von religiösen Traditionen im historischen und kulturellen Kontext des Antiken Israel. Dabei geht es primär um Göttinnen und Göttern und andere Kultbilder. Für deren Verständnis grundlegend ist ein Einblick in die materiellen Gattungen der Bildträger (Siegel, anthropomorphe und theriomorphe Figurinen und Reliefs) im Zusammenhang ihrer geographischen Fundkontexte und chronologischen Einordnungen. Darüber hinaus sollen die bildlichen Darstellungen (Ikonographie) auf ihre methodische Erschließung hin diskutiert werden, nicht zuletzt im Blick auf eine ikonographische Exegese der biblischen Texte. Eingebettet werden die ikonographischen Erkenntnisse aus Israel in die ägyptische und altorientalische Bild- und Motivwelt.

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne.
Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

1	HS	Mo	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.09.2.03	12.10.2026	Dr. Michael Karl Schulz

Kommentar

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

Dieser Online-Kurs im Rahmen des EU-geförderten, internationalen Forschungsprojektes „EUMES - European Minorities in Urban Spaces: Mutual Recognition, Social Inclusion and Sense of Belonging" beschäftigt sich mit der Situation und dem Zusammenleben von jüdischen, muslimischen und Roma-Minderheiten in ausgewählten städtischen Räumen in Europa (Prag, Krakow, Potsdam, London, Bratislava). Der Kurs vermittelt den Studierenden zudem analytische und pädagogische Instrumente, wie Wissen und Erkenntnisse zu diesen Minderheiten einer breiteren Öffentlichkeit vermittelt werden können. 1	S	Mo	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne.
Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

„Jüdischer Film" ist ein schwieriger Begriff. Denn was macht einen Film jüdisch? Das Thema, der Produktionskontext, seine Schauspieler und Schauspielerinnen? Trotz dieser offenen Fragen begleitet der vielschichtige Zusammenhang von Film und Judentum die Geschichte des Films seit ihren Anfängen – vor allem als Repräsentation jüdischer Lebenswelten und Figuren, aber immer auch als Zuschreibung für Filmschaffende und ihr Werk. Das Seminar versteht eine jüdische Filmgeschichte als Schnittstelle von Filmgeschichte und Jüdischen Studien und nähert sich dem komplexen Zusammenhang chronologisch: von den ersten jüdischen Filmpionieren über die Darstellung des Judentums im frühen Film, die jüdischen Produzenten Hollywoods, zionistische Filme und das jiddische Kino der Zwischenkriegszeit bis hin zum Holocaustfilm und zeitgenössischen Darstellungen jüdischer Themen und Figuren in den Quality-TV-Serien der Streamingdienste. Dabei führt das Seminar an unterschiedliche wissenschaftliche Zugänge heran.

In dieser einführenden Vorlesung werden Sie mit Kultur, Geschichte und den Grundlehren des Judentums vertraut gemacht. Wer ist eigentlich Jude? Woran glauben Jüdinnen und Juden und was ist der Unterschied zwischen Aschkenasen und Sepharden? Wie entstand moderner Antisemitismus und was ist der Unterschied zu Antijudaismus? Glauben Juden an den Messias?

Kommentar

Das Seminar ist eine paradigmatische Einführung in die Biblische Archäologie, die archäologische Funde und biblische Texe jeweils eigenständig bearbeitet und dann miteinander ins Gespräch bringt. Das exemplarische Arbeitsfeld wird die in Bildern fassbare Religionsgeschichte sein, mit anderen Worten: die visuellen Konstanten, Veränderungen und Entwicklungen von religiösen Traditionen im historischen und kulturellen Kontext des Antiken Israel. Dabei geht es primär um Göttinnen und Göttern und andere Kultbilder. Für deren Verständnis grundlegend ist ein Einblick in die materiellen Gattungen der Bildträger (Siegel, anthropomorphe und theriomorphe Figurinen und Reliefs) im Zusammenhang ihrer geographischen Fundkontexte und chronologischen Einordnungen. Darüber hinaus sollen die bildlichen Darstellungen (Ikonographie) auf ihre methodische Erschließung hin diskutiert werden, nicht zuletzt im Blick auf eine ikonographische Exegese der biblischen Texte. Eingebettet werden die ikonographischen Erkenntnisse aus Israel in die ägyptische und altorientalische Bild- und Motivwelt.

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

Kommentar

This course explores the History of the Holocaust, the Nazi attempt to murder the Jewish population in Europe, in its temporal, geographical and conceptual complexity. The "road to Auschwitz" was not paved by destiny but took shape as a result of concrete decisions taken by German Nazi officials and their allies, acting under specific circumstances of occupation and total war, with a particular historical baggage of extreme nationalism and antisemitism.
In the sessions we will delve into the main historiographical debates and questions in the field. Was the genocide the execution of a prearranged "exterminatory mindset" or the unanticipated result of a process of "cumulative radicalization"? Were the perpetrators "ordinary men" or "willing executioners"? Why the Germans and why the Jews? What did the world know? How did the Jews react?
Students will engage these conundrums through the reading of secondary literature and primary sources emanating from the victims, perpetrators and bystanders. By analyzing phenomena spanning throughout the Nazi dictatorship and World War II, comprising Germany but also Western, Eastern and Southeastern Europe, and involving Jewish groups and persons with different backgrounds, the course will provide an introductory picture of an event of such magnitude that its aftermath still reverberates in our contemporary world.

Kommentar

Kommentar

Vor 80 Jahren wurde 1946 in Potsdam-Babelsberg die DEFA, die staatliche Filmgesellschaft der DDR, gegründet. Bis 1992 produzierte die DEFA zahlreiche Dokumentar-, Animations- und rund 750 Spielfilme. In den letzten Jahren sind grundlegende Forschungsarbeiten zur Frage der Repräsentation des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Spielfilm erschienen. Zum Bestand des DEFA-Filmerbes zählen neben Spielfilmen auch zahlreiche Dokumentarfilme, mittels derer zum einen Vergangenheitsaspekte jüdischer Geschichte, vor allem als Verfolgungsgeschichte während der NS-Zeit, vermittelt wurden, zum anderen jüdisches Kulturerbe in seiner Gesamtheit (u.a. zu Friedhöfen, Kunst, Literatur, jiddischer Musik oder jüdischen Künstler:innen) präsentiert und narrativiert wurde.

Nach 1990 haben einige dieser Dokumentarfilme, u.a. von den Filmemacher:innen Róza Berger-Fiedler, Konrad Weiß, Eduard Schreiber oder Karlheinz Mund, neue Aufmerksamkeit in Retrospektiven erfahren, die Beispiele für eine unterschiedliche Aneignung eines bestimmten Korpus von DEFA-Dokumentarfilmen sind und als Beiträge eines „Jüdischen Filmerbes" gelesen werden können.

Das Seminar findet in Kooperation mit dem Filmmuseum Potsdam statt. Integraler Bestandteil ist eine dreiteilige Filmreihe zur Thematisierung des „Jüdischen" im DEFA-Dokumentarfilm, die im November und Dezember im Filmmuseum stattfindet und von Gesprächen mit Filmemacher:innen der DEFA begleitet wird.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Kommentar

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Das 19. Jahrhundert der deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte wurde durch rechtliche Gleichstellung, religiöse Reform und Integration/Assimilation gekennzeichnet. Nach der früheren Geschichtsschreibung vollzog sich in dieser Zeit „der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum" (J. Toury). Heute wird eher von der Konstituierung eines neuen Bürgertums gesprochen, dessen Teil, abhängig von lokalen Verhältnissen, etwa Juden, Katholiken und Protestanten ausmachten. Im Seminar werden Faktoren des sozialen und ökonomischen Anstiegs der jüdischen Deutschen analysiert und anhand lokaler Beispiele aus Breslau, Danzig, Hamburg, Frankfurt am Main und anderen beleuchtet.

122858 S - Die Tsene-rene (Tse'nah u-re'na, Hohelied 3,11) – jiddische Bibelparaphrase und religiöses Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

In dieser einführenden Vorlesung werden Sie mit Kultur, Geschichte und den Grundlehren des Judentums vertraut gemacht. Wer ist eigentlich Jude? Woran glauben Jüdinnen und Juden und was ist der Unterschied zwischen Aschkenasen und Sepharden? Wie entstand moderner Antisemitismus und was ist der Unterschied zu Antijudaismus? Glauben Juden an den Messias?

Das sind nur einige Fragen, auf die Sie im Laufe des Semesters Antworten erhalten werden.

Diese Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über die Geschichte des Christentums anhand entscheidender Konflikte. Diese Knotenpunkte zeigen nicht nur, dass Charakteristika christlicher Lehre und Praxis Aushandlungsprozesse waren und welche Konflikte zu Paradigmenwechsel geführt haben, sondern auch, dass diese Streite maßgeblich waren für die Ausdifferenzierung des Christentums in verschiedene Konfessionen und Bewegungen. Zentrale Punkte werden u.a. sein: der Beschneidungskonflikt, der christologische Streit, der Bilderstreit, die Reformationsbewegungen, der Kulturkampf, die Auseinandersetzung mit Modernisierungen.

121686 S - Feste und Feiern als soziale Praxis verstehen: Religiöse und säkulare Festkulturen im Vergleich

1	S	Do	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.11.1.25	15.10.2026	Jenny Vorpahl

Kommentar

Im Seminar werden Feste und Feiern als soziale Praktiken untersuchen, in denen Zugehörigkeiten hergestellt, Werte vermittelt und gesellschaftliche Ordnungen sichtbar werden. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein vergleichender religionswissenschaftlicher Zugang zu religiösen Festkulturen – etwa Weihnachten, Ramadan oder Pessach – und säkularen Anlässen wie Geburtstagen, Hochzeiten, Jugendfeiern oder staatlichen Gedenktagen.

Ausgehend von theoretischen Perspektiven auf Ritual, Performanz, Materialität, Emotion und Gemeinschaft wird gefragt: Was macht ein Ereignis zu einem Fest? Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele werden wir analysieren, welche Rollen Räume, Dinge, Essen, Kleidung, Musik und Medien spielen? Und wie verändern Kommerzialisierung, Migration, Digitalisierung oder gesellschaftliche Pluralisierung gegenwärtige Festkulturen?

Das Seminar vermittelt dabei grundlegende Begriffe und Methoden der religionswissenschaftlichen Ritual- und Kulturforschung und erprobt diese an konkreten Quellen, Bildern, Objekten und medialen Darstellungen.

Lernziele sind, Feste und Feiern als kulturell und historisch situierte Praktiken zu beschreiben, religiöse und säkulare Festformen vergleichend zu analysieren sowie deren soziale, politische und mediale Bedeutungen kritisch zu reflektieren.

Kommentar

Die religiöse Welt des Mittleren Ostens ist nicht nur durch den Islam sowie jüdische und christliche Minderheiten geprägt, sondern auch durch eine Reihe weiterer Religionsgemeinschaften. Diese unterscheiden sich von den vorhergehenden dadurch, dass sie sich meist einer die zuvor genannten Religionen auszeichnenden Eindeutigkeit entziehen, da sie oftmals weder über ein klar definiertes Glaubenssystem, eine Orthodoxie oder über einen Kanon von Schriften verfügen. Darüber hinaus besteht unter ihnen selbst zuweilen Uneinigkeit, ob Sie als Teil einer größeren Religion oder als eigenständige Gemeinschaft aufzufassen sind. So gibt es sowohl unter den anatolischen Aleviten als auch unter den Yaresan (Ahl-e Haqq, Kaka'i) Strömungen, die sich als besonderer Teil des Islam ansehen, wogegen andere sich als unabhängige Religionsgemeinschaft definieren. Andere Religionen, wie etwa die Jesiden oder die Mandäer, sind zwar nicht zuletzt aufgrund ihres Selbstverständnisses eindeutig als eigenständige Religionen abgrenzbar, weisen aber Einflüsse und Wechselbeziehungen zu anderen Religionsgemeinschaften auf. Die „kleineren Religionsgemeinschaften" erfordern auch insofern eine verstärkte Aufmerksamkeit, als zahlreiche ihrer Angehörigen aufgrund von äußerem Druck und Verfolgungen in ihren Heimatländern als Migranten nach Europa gekommen sind und hier mittlerweile aktive Diasporagemeinden bilden. Im Seminar sollen einige zentrale Rituale und Orte von Anatolischen Aleviten, Yaresan, Drusen, Jesiden, Mandäern, Zoroastriern, Nusairis (Syrische Alawiten) und Baha'i untersucht und der Frage nachgegangen werden, inwieweit sich äußere und gegenseitige Einflüsse bei ihnen erkennen lassen.

1	S	Mi	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.11.2.22	14.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Sina Rauschenbach

Kommentar

Kommentar

Das Seminar bietet eine Einführung in die Geschichte der Juden im mittelalterlichen Europa und untersucht das Mittelalter als zentrale Epoche für das Verständnis des modernen Judentums. Im Mittelpunkt steht die Entwicklung jüdischer Gemeinden vom Zerfall des Weströmischen Reiches bis zur Entstehung und Verbreitung der Ghettos in der Frühen Neuzeit.
Anhand ausgewählter Regionen Europas – darunter die Iberische Halbinsel, Frankreich, das Heilige Römische Reich, Italien sowie Osteuropa – werden unterschiedliche Formen jüdischen Lebens, der gesellschaftlichen Integration und der Ausgrenzung analysiert. Dabei richtet sich der Blick sowohl auf politische und wirtschaftliche Rahmenbedingungen als auch auf Kontakte zwischen jüdischen und christlichen beziehungsweise muslimischen Gemeinschaften.
Das Seminar verfolgt einen primär historischen Ansatz, berücksichtigt jedoch ebenso religiöse, kulturelle und intellektuelle Entwicklungen. Themen wie rabbinische Gelehrsamkeit, religiöse Praxis, Migration, Verfolgungen, Pogrome sowie die Entstehung spezifisch aschkenasischer und sephardischer Traditionen werden gemeinsam diskutiert. Ziel des Seminars ist es, die Vielfalt jüdischer Erfahrungen im mittelalterlichen Europa sichtbar zu machen und deren Bedeutung für die europäische und jüdische Geschichte bis in die Moderne hinein zu verstehen.

Religionen und religiöse Phänomene lassen sich unter verschiedenen Gesichtspunkten und Fragestellungen untersuchen. Der Kurs richtet sich an Studierende, die keine oder geringe Vorkenntnisse der lateinischen Sprache besitzen. Im Kurs werden grundlegende Kenntnisse der lateinischen Formenlehre, Syntax und Lexik auf Lehrbuchgrundlage vermittelt.
Der Kurs ist Bestandteil einer Kursfolge, welche fortgesetzt werden kann mit Latein II (Fortgeschrittene), Latein III (Übergangslektüre: Caesar) und Latein IV (Lektüre: Cicero; dieser Kurs bereitet unmittelbar auf die Latinumsprüfung vor).
Am Ende des Kurses wird eine Abschlussklausur (ohne Hilfsmittel wie Lexikon oder Grammatik) geschrieben. Eine sichere Beherrschung des Lernwortschatzes des Lehrbuchs ist neben sicherer Kenntnis der Formenlehre und der Syntax Voraussetzung für ein erfolgreiches Absolvieren des Kurses und das Bestehen der Klausur.
Neben einer regelmäßigen und aktiven Teilnahme am Unterricht wird von den Studierenden erwartet, dass sie sich genügend Zeit für die Vor- und Nachbereitung des Stoffes zu Hause nehmen.

Religionen und religiöse Phänomene lassen sich unter verschiedenen Gesichtspunkten und Fragestellungen untersuchen. Der systematischen Beschreibung religiöser Phänomene liegen dabei häufig bewusste oder unbewusste methodologische Vorentscheidungen zugrunde. Kommentar

In diesem zeithistorischen Masterseminar wird untersucht, wie jüdische Akteure, Organisationen und Gemeinschaften nach 1945 auf die Erinnerungs- und Gedächtnispolitik in beiden deutschen Staaten reagierten und sie aktiv mitgestalteten. Im Mittelpunkt steht dabei die Frage, inwiefern jüdische Perspektiven auf Schuld, Wiedergutmachung und Gedenken mit den jeweiligen staatlichen Narrativen in der Bundesrepublik und der DDR kollidierten oder sich mit ihnen verschränkten. Ausgehend von zentralen Debatten der Gedächtnisforschung – etwa den Konzepten des kulturellen und kommunikativen Gedächtnisses bei Jan und Aleida Assmann oder dem Begriff der „Erinnerungskultur" im Sinne einer politisch geformten Praxis des kollektiven Erinnerns ebenso wie der jüdischen Perspektive auf Erinnerung seit Yosef Chaim Yerushalmis Buch „Zachor" – fragt das Seminar, welche Handlungsspielräume jüdische Stimmen in asymmetrischen Erinnerungskontexten nutzten. Dabei werden sowohl institutionelle Akteure wie die Claims Conference als auch individuelle Zeugnisse von Überlebenden in den Blick genommen.

Kommentar

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Im Seminar sollen diesen Rückkehr-Reisen, ihren kulturhistorischen und politischen Kontexten sowie medialen Repräsentationen am Beispiel ausgewählter Texte und Filme nachgegangen werden.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Unmittelbar nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkriegs begann eine rege Literaturproduktion: Unter prekären Arbeitsbedingungen entstanden auch Werke, in denen sich die Autor:innen aus der deutschen Binnenperspektive (selbst-)kritisch auf die Jahre der NS-Herrschaft bezogen und Fragen von Schuld und Verstrickung verhandelten. Gleichzeitig wurden aus der so genannten Inneren Emigration Rufe nach einem Schlussstrich und einem Neuanfang laut, die von (verbalen) Attacken gegen die „Exilliteratur" begleitet wurden. Aus dem Exil kehrten aber auch die ersten Autor:innen zurück, deren ‚Heimkehr' sich keineswegs leicht gestaltete, andere entschieden sich für das jeweilige Exilland.

Zahlreiche Schriftstellerinnen aus den unterschiedlichen Bereichen, wie bspw. Susanne Kerckhoff, Anna Seghers, Gabriele Tergit, Elisabeth Langgässer oder Ricarda Huch beteiligten sich an diesem Diskurs, der bereits um 1949, also mit der Entstehung der beiden deutschen Staaten (BRD und DDR), ein Ende fand. Das Blockseminar nimmt eine Ausstellung zu Susanne Kerckhoff im Berliner Mitte Museum zum Anlass, dieses kurze Zeitfenster mit seinen oftmals vergessenen Akteurinnen in den Fokus zu rücken.

Kommentar

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Im Seminar sollen diesen Rückkehr-Reisen, ihren kulturhistorischen und politischen Kontexten sowie medialen Repräsentationen am Beispiel ausgewählter Texte und Filme nachgegangen werden.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Atlantische Geschichte - als "Geschichte zwischen europäischer Geschichte und Global History" (Horst Pietschmann) - präsentierte sich seit den letzten Jahrzehnten des 20. Jahrhunderts als wirkmächtige Alternative zu nationalen Geschichtsschreibungen, die im Kontext einer neuen Weltordnung zunehmend hinterfragt wurden. In den Jüdischen Studien gewann das Konzept besonders im Zusammenhang neuerer Forschungen zur "westlichen sefardischen Diaspora" (der Zerstreuung und Vernetzung der von der Iberischen Halbinsel zwischen 1492 und 1497 vertriebenen Juden und ihrer Nachkommen zwischen Westeuropa, Westafrika und den Amerikas) an Bedeutung. Im Seminar diskutieren wir einerseits jüdische Beiträge zu kolonialen Projekten, transnationalen Netzwerken und frühen Siedler-Gesellschaften in der atlantischen Welt des 16. bis 19. Jahrhunderts. Andererseits fragen wir nach dem Einfluss atlantischer Erfahrungen auf jüdische Denk- und Lebenswelten der Frühen Neuzeit. Dabei geht es immer auch darum, an ausgewählten Beispielen allgemeine Überlegungen zur atlantischen Geschichte, ihren Herausforderungen, Varianten und Problemen anzustellen.

In dieser einführenden Vorlesung werden Sie mit Kultur, Geschichte und den Grundlehren des Judentums vertraut gemacht. Wer ist eigentlich Jude? Woran glauben Jüdinnen und Juden und was ist der Unterschied zwischen Aschkenasen und Sepharden? Wie entstand moderner Antisemitismus und was ist der Unterschied zu Antijudaismus? Glauben Juden an den Messias?

Die jüdischen Reform- und Konservativen (Masorti) Bewegungen sind eine einzigartige moderne Entwicklung. Gründe dafür sind politisch, intellektuell und sozial: Veränderungen im Status der Juden und des Zivilstandes im Allgemeinen; Entwicklungen in den Natur- und Geisteswissenschaften, die das traditionelle Denken relativieren; und Veränderungen in der Gesellschaft und in Beziehungen zwischen Menschen, Gruppen und religiöse Traditionen. Der Kurs untersucht diese Entwicklungen, wie sie zu diesen beiden progressiven jüdischen Bewegungen geführt haben und wie sich diese Bewegungen im Laufe von zwei Jahrhunderten entwickelt haben.

123923 BL - Zionismus neu gelesen: Ein pluralistischer Ansatz zu einigen grundlegenden Texten

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	BL	Di	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.02	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jonathan Schorsch

Kommentar

Everybody talks about Zionism these days. Few seem to be actually familiar with the thinking of early Zionism. It seems productive, therefore, to revisit the texts of early Zionists, to see firsthand what their program entailed and what differing visions of Zionism competed with one another; to see Zionism as an improvised discourse that changed over time and with circumstances, rather than as some monolithic predetermined project.

Understanding the necessity and healthiness of allowing for multiple perspectives, we will read various early Zionist texts, attending particularly to questions of territory, sovereignty, race/ethnicity, theology, nature, and gender. We will consider, for instance, Ahad Ha'am, for whom Zionism was first of all a project of cultural and spiritual renewal and who cautioned already in the 1890s against the way Jewish settlers were treating the country's existing Arab population; figures who sought a joint Arab-Jewish socialist society (Ber Borochov, Franz Oppenheimer, Martin Buber, among others); those who sought indigenous bio-cultural roots (the Canaanite Movement); as well as those who saw a (re)turn to agriculture and nature as a way to oppose nation-state-building (A. D. Gordon).

Early Zionism comprised a field of tensions and contradictions. It spoke the language of European nationalism while criticizing Europe; it drew simultaneously on romanticism, socialism, liberal thought, the assumptions of its colonial era, and Jewish religious traditions; it understood itself at once as a return and as an unprecedented invention. Reading these texts closely lets us watch that improvisation as it happened — the questions early Zionists were asking, the problems they were trying to solve, the options they considered and discarded. Many of those questions have not gone away, and a good deal of today's debate rehearses them without recognizing them as such. Approaching the material historically and in its plurality is one way of moving past polarized positions that foreclose understanding and discussion before they can begin.

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

Diese Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über die Geschichte des Christentums anhand entscheidender Konflikte. Diese Knotenpunkte zeigen nicht nur, dass Charakteristika christlicher Lehre und Praxis Aushandlungsprozesse waren und welche Konflikte zu Paradigmenwechsel geführt haben, sondern auch, dass diese Streite maßgeblich waren für die Ausdifferenzierung des Christentums in verschiedene Konfessionen und Bewegungen. Zentrale Punkte werden u.a. sein: der Beschneidungskonflikt, der christologische Streit, der Bilderstreit, die Reformationsbewegungen, der Kulturkampf, die Auseinandersetzung mit Modernisierungen.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

In this course we will read together writings of Jewish women on Judaism, religion, progress, Jewishness, and the place of women in Judaism and the Jewish community. Our choice of texts will give us an important lens onto transformations faced by Jews in the wake of modernity and Emancipation. Authors include Grace Aguilar (England), Amy Levy (England), Bertha Pappenheim (Germany), Josephine Lazarus (USA).

1	S	Mo	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Darstellung von Endzeit- und Apokalypsevorstellungen aus jüdisch-christlicher Tradition sowie dystopischer Zukunftsbilder in der Musikgeschichte. Ausgangspunkt sind zentrale biblische Texte und ihre Wirkung auf musikalische Werke verschiedener Epochen.
Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

1	S	Mo	18:00 - 20:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Kommentar

Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte. Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).

122834 S - Apokalyptik in der Hebräischen Bibel und im antiken Judentum

1	S	Mo	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.08	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Rüdiger Liwak

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

Kommentar

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	BL	Di	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.02	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jonathan Schorsch

Kommentar

Everybody talks about Zionism these days. Few seem to be actually familiar with the thinking of early Zionism. It seems productive, therefore, to revisit the texts of early Zionists, to see firsthand what their program entailed and what differing visions of Zionism competed with one another; to see Zionism as an improvised discourse that changed over time and with circumstances, rather than as some monolithic predetermined project.

Understanding the necessity and healthiness of allowing for multiple perspectives, we will read various early Zionist texts, attending particularly to questions of territory, sovereignty, race/ethnicity, theology, nature, and gender. We will consider, for instance, Ahad Ha'am, for whom Zionism was first of all a project of cultural and spiritual renewal and who cautioned already in the 1890s against the way Jewish settlers were treating the country's existing Arab population; figures who sought a joint Arab-Jewish socialist society (Ber Borochov, Franz Oppenheimer, Martin Buber, among others); those who sought indigenous bio-cultural roots (the Canaanite Movement); as well as those who saw a (re)turn to agriculture and nature as a way to oppose nation-state-building (A. D. Gordon).

Early Zionism comprised a field of tensions and contradictions. It spoke the language of European nationalism while criticizing Europe; it drew simultaneously on romanticism, socialism, liberal thought, the assumptions of its colonial era, and Jewish religious traditions; it understood itself at once as a return and as an unprecedented invention. Reading these texts closely lets us watch that improvisation as it happened — the questions early Zionists were asking, the problems they were trying to solve, the options they considered and discarded. Many of those questions have not gone away, and a good deal of today's debate rehearses them without recognizing them as such. Approaching the material historically and in its plurality is one way of moving past polarized positions that foreclose understanding and discussion before they can begin.

Diese Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über die Geschichte des Christentums anhand entscheidender Konflikte. Diese Knotenpunkte zeigen nicht nur, dass Charakteristika christlicher Lehre und Praxis Aushandlungsprozesse waren und welche Konflikte zu Paradigmenwechsel geführt haben, sondern auch, dass diese Streite maßgeblich waren für die Ausdifferenzierung des Christentums in verschiedene Konfessionen und Bewegungen. Zentrale Punkte werden u.a. sein: der Beschneidungskonflikt, der christologische Streit, der Bilderstreit, die Reformationsbewegungen, der Kulturkampf, die Auseinandersetzung mit Modernisierungen.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

In this course we will read together writings of Jewish women on Judaism, religion, progress, Jewishness, and the place of women in Judaism and the Jewish community. Our choice of texts will give us an important lens onto transformations faced by Jews in the wake of modernity and Emancipation. 1	S	Mo	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Der Kurs untersucht die Darstellung von Endzeit- und Apokalypsevorstellungen aus jüdisch-christlicher Tradition sowie dystopischer Zukunftsbilder in der Musikgeschichte. Ausgangspunkt sind zentrale biblische Texte und ihre Wirkung auf musikalische Werke verschiedener Epochen.
Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Mo	18:00 - 20:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Rolle von Klang in filmischen Darstellungen des Holocaust und fragt danach, wie diegetische und extradiegetische Musik zur Konstruktion von Erinnerung beiträgt. Anhand ausgewählter Spielfilme und Dokumentationen wird analysiert, wie Musik als emotionales, narratives und ethisches Gestaltungsmittel eingesetzt wird.
Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte. Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).
Anhand konkreter Beispiele wird untersucht, wie Filmmusik historische Ereignisse kommentiert, verstärkt oder auch problematisch ästhetisiert. Dabei werden unterschiedliche Strategien – von Originalkompositionen über den Einsatz klassischer Werke bis hin zu Stille und Geräusch – vergleichend betrachtet.
Neben der Filmanalyse werden auch erinnerungskulturelle, historische und medienästhetische Kontexte einbezogen. Der Kurs diskutiert, welche Verantwortung Musik im Umgang mit traumatischen Vergangenheiten trägt und wie sie zur individuellen und kollektiven Erinnerungskultur beiträgt.

122834 S - Apokalyptik in der Hebräischen Bibel und im antiken Judentum

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

122858 S - Die Tsene-rene (Tse'nah u-re'na, Hohelied 3,11) – jiddische Bibelparaphrase und religiöses Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

123923 BL - Zionismus neu gelesen: Ein pluralistischer Ansatz zu einigen grundlegenden Texten

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	BL	Di	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.02	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jonathan Schorsch

Kommentar

Everybody talks about Zionism these days. Few seem to be actually familiar with the thinking of early Zionism. It seems productive, therefore, to revisit the texts of early Zionists, to see firsthand what their program entailed and what differing visions of Zionism competed with one another; to see Zionism as an improvised discourse that changed over time and with circumstances, rather than as some monolithic predetermined project.

Understanding the necessity and healthiness of allowing for multiple perspectives, we will read various early Zionist texts, attending particularly to questions of territory, sovereignty, race/ethnicity, theology, nature, and gender. We will consider, for instance, Ahad Ha'am, for whom Zionism was first of all a project of cultural and spiritual renewal and who cautioned already in the 1890s against the way Jewish settlers were treating the country's existing Arab population; figures who sought a joint Arab-Jewish socialist society (Ber Borochov, Franz Oppenheimer, Martin Buber, among others); those who sought indigenous bio-cultural roots (the Canaanite Movement); as well as those who saw a (re)turn to agriculture and nature as a way to oppose nation-state-building (A. D. Gordon).

Early Zionism comprised a field of tensions and contradictions. It spoke the language of European nationalism while criticizing Europe; it drew simultaneously on romanticism, socialism, liberal thought, the assumptions of its colonial era, and Jewish religious traditions; it understood itself at once as a return and as an unprecedented invention. Reading these texts closely lets us watch that improvisation as it happened — the questions early Zionists were asking, the problems they were trying to solve, the options they considered and discarded. Many of those questions have not gone away, and a good deal of today's debate rehearses them without recognizing them as such. Approaching the material historically and in its plurality is one way of moving past polarized positions that foreclose understanding and discussion before they can begin.

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Rolle von Klang in filmischen Darstellungen des Holocaust und fragt danach, wie diegetische und extradiegetische Musik zur Konstruktion von Erinnerung beiträgt. Anhand ausgewählter Spielfilme und Dokumentationen wird analysiert, wie Musik als emotionales, narratives und ethisches Gestaltungsmittel eingesetzt wird.
Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte.
Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).
Anhand konkreter Beispiele wird untersucht, wie Filmmusik historische Ereignisse kommentiert, verstärkt oder auch problematisch ästhetisiert. Dabei werden unterschiedliche Strategien – von Originalkompositionen über den Einsatz klassischer Werke bis hin zu Stille und Geräusch – vergleichend betrachtet.
Neben der Filmanalyse werden auch erinnerungskulturelle, historische und medienästhetische Kontexte einbezogen. Der Kurs diskutiert, welche Verantwortung Musik im Umgang mit traumatischen Vergangenheiten trägt und wie sie zur individuellen und kollektiven Erinnerungskultur beiträgt.

122834 S - Apokalyptik in der Hebräischen Bibel und im antiken Judentum

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

122858 S - Die Tsene-rene (Tse'nah u-re'na, Hohelied 3,11) – jiddische Bibelparaphrase und religiöses Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache)
Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

123923 BL - Zionismus neu gelesen: Ein pluralistischer Ansatz zu einigen grundlegenden Texten

Kommentar

Everybody talks about Zionism these days. Few seem to be actually familiar with the thinking of early Zionism. It seems productive, therefore, to revisit the texts of early Zionists, to see firsthand what their program entailed and what differing visions of Zionism competed with one another; to see Zionism as an improvised discourse that changed over time and with circumstances, rather than as some monolithic predetermined project.

Understanding the necessity and healthiness of allowing for multiple perspectives, we will read various early Zionist texts, attending particularly to questions of territory, sovereignty, race/ethnicity, theology, nature, and gender. We will consider, for instance, Ahad Ha'am, for whom Zionism was first of all a project of cultural and spiritual renewal and who cautioned already in the 1890s against the way Jewish settlers were treating the country's existing Arab population; figures who sought a joint Arab-Jewish socialist society (Ber Borochov, Franz Oppenheimer, Martin Buber, among others); those who sought indigenous bio-cultural roots (the Canaanite Movement); as well as those who saw a (re)turn to agriculture and nature as a way to oppose nation-state-building (A. D. Gordon).

Early Zionism comprised a field of tensions and contradictions. It spoke the language of European nationalism while criticizing Europe; it drew simultaneously on romanticism, socialism, liberal thought, the assumptions of its colonial era, and Jewish religious traditions; it understood itself at once as a return and as an unprecedented invention. Reading these texts closely lets us watch that improvisation as it happened — the questions early Zionists were asking, the problems they were trying to solve, the options they considered and discarded. Many of those questions have not gone away, and a good deal of today's debate rehearses them without recognizing them as such. Approaching the material historically and in its plurality is one way of moving past polarized positions that foreclose understanding and discussion before they can begin.

Coaching lessons are an integral part of the vocal training for singers and they are given as individual lessons. They are distinguished from voice lessons in that they do not deal with vocal techniques, but with the song repertoire and its art of performance. The teacher works with the student on the music that the student is required to sing, guiding the student into all the intricacies that render the perfor¬mance professional, artistic and exciting. Cantorial coaching lessons concentrate on traditional syna¬gogue chants, artistic cantorial recitatives, and songs, which are related to the repertoire that is studied in class during the semester. In addition, the coaching teacher works with the student on the music that they need for the services while officiating as student-cantor. During the coaching lessons, the emphasis is made on understanding the sacred texts, their liturgical function and their religious and emotional meaning. The coach guides the student in the proper way of singing the repertoire according to the tradition of the Jewish cantorial style and encourages the students to find their individual expression for each liturgical piece of music.

Kommentar

Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Welche materiellen Überreste sind im antiken Israel/Palaestina aus den beiden Jahrhunderten vor und nach der Zeitenwende erhalten: Architekturen aus herodianischer Zeit und der folgenden Jahrzehnte unter römischer Herrschaft bis zur Zerstörung des Tempels im Jahre 70. Was sagen sie über Bauprogramme, Tempelbau, Befestigungsanlagen und Privatdomizile aus? Hinzu kommen Gebrauchskeramik zur Bestimmung der Kulturschichten und Artefakte aus Stein, Metall und Glas zur Erhellung der Handwerkstechniken und Lebensumstände. Dies wird den Aussagen der zeitgenössischen Literatur gegenübergestellt, anhand von Textpassagen aus der rabbinischen Literatur, die auch frühere Ereignisse schildert, der römischen Literatur mit Josephus Flavius und dem Neuen Testament. Neben Ortslagen in Judaea, Samaria und Galilaea wird schwerpunktmäßig Jerusalem behandelt – auf den Spuren Jesu. Die Vorlesung bietet neben umfangreichem Photomaterial auch einen Überblick über bibelarchäologische Fragestelllungen und Untersuchungsmethoden.

Im fortgeschrittenen Schwerpunktstudium Biblische Archäologie ist die Teilnahme und Mitarbeit an Ausgrabungen vorgesehen, die vermittelt wird und in ein oder mehrere zweiwöchige Termine aufgeteilt werden kann. Für eine finanzielle Unterstützung kann man sich bewerben unter: schwarz21@uni-potsdam.de.
Bei jedem Treffen wird in Kurzform über Neuentdeckungen aus der israelischen und jordanischen Archäologie berichtet: Nachrichten aus der antiken Welt.

Kommentar

Das Seminar ist eine paradigmatische Einführung in die Biblische Archäologie, die archäologische Funde und biblische Texe jeweils eigenständig bearbeitet und dann miteinander ins Gespräch bringt. Das exemplarische Arbeitsfeld wird die in Bildern fassbare Religionsgeschichte sein, mit anderen Worten: die visuellen Konstanten, Veränderungen und Entwicklungen von religiösen Traditionen im historischen und kulturellen Kontext des Antiken Israel. Dabei geht es primär um Göttinnen und Göttern und andere Kultbilder. Für deren Verständnis grundlegend ist ein Einblick in die materiellen Gattungen der Bildträger (Siegel, anthropomorphe und theriomorphe Figurinen und Reliefs) im Zusammenhang ihrer geographischen Fundkontexte und chronologischen Einordnungen. Darüber hinaus sollen die bildlichen Darstellungen (Ikonographie) auf ihre methodische Erschließung hin diskutiert werden, nicht zuletzt im Blick auf eine ikonographische Exegese der biblischen Texte. Eingebettet werden die ikonographischen Erkenntnisse aus Israel in die ägyptische und altorientalische Bild- und Motivwelt.

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

In this course we will read together writings of Jewish women on Judaism, religion, progress, Jewishness, and the place of women in Judaism and the Jewish community. Our choice of texts will give us an important lens onto transformations faced by Jews in the wake of modernity and Emancipation. Authors include Grace Aguilar (England), Amy Levy (England), Bertha Pappenheim (Germany), Josephine Lazarus (USA).

1	S	Mo	16:00 - 18:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Darstellung von Endzeit- und Apokalypsevorstellungen aus jüdisch-christlicher Tradition sowie dystopischer Zukunftsbilder in der Musikgeschichte. Ausgangspunkt sind zentrale biblische Texte und ihre Wirkung auf musikalische Werke verschiedener Epochen.
Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Mo	18:00 - 20:00	wöch.	1.09.2.04	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jascha Nemtsov

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Rolle von Klang in filmischen Darstellungen des Holocaust und fragt danach, wie diegetische und extradiegetische Musik zur Konstruktion von Erinnerung beiträgt. Anhand ausgewählter Spielfilme und Dokumentationen wird analysiert, wie Musik als emotionales, narratives und ethisches Gestaltungsmittel eingesetzt wird.
Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte.
Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).
Anhand konkreter Beispiele wird untersucht, wie Filmmusik historische Ereignisse kommentiert, verstärkt oder auch problematisch ästhetisiert. Dabei werden unterschiedliche Strategien – von Originalkompositionen über den Einsatz klassischer Werke bis hin zu Stille und Geräusch – vergleichend betrachtet.
Neben der Filmanalyse werden auch erinnerungskulturelle, historische und medienästhetische Kontexte einbezogen. Der Kurs diskutiert, welche Verantwortung Musik im Umgang mit traumatischen Vergangenheiten trägt und wie sie zur individuellen und kollektiven Erinnerungskultur beiträgt.

122834 S - Apokalyptik in der Hebräischen Bibel und im antiken Judentum

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	S	Mo	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.08	12.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Rüdiger Liwak

Kommentar

"Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik" war der Titel eines einflussreichen Buches von Klaus Koch aus dem Jahr 1970. Seitdem ist viel Forschungsarbeit geleistet worden, die punktuell zur Sprache kommen wird. Die Konzentration im Verlauf des Seminars wird zunächst auf einer begrifflichen Differenzierung von Apokalyptik und Apokalypse und deren endzeitliche, auf charakteristische formale und inhaltliche Aspekte ausgerichtete Motivkomplexe liegen. Es geht bei den Texten zeitlich um die letzten Jahrhunderte vor und die ersten Jahrhunderte nach der Zeitrechnung. Dabei sollen nicht zuletzt die Fragen nach protoapokalyptischen Vorläufern (Weisheit, Prophetie, mesopotamische und persische Traditionen) eine Rolle spielen, und es soll das Problem diskutiert werden, ob und inwieweit es sich bei der Apokalyptik um ein Phänomen im Zusammenhang religiöser, politischer und wirtschaftlicher Krisen handelt, also in erster Linie die Gegenwart im Blick ist. Einem Überblick über die gesamte apokalyptische Literatur wird ein exemplarisches Textstudium zum Buch Daniel und zum äthiopischen Henochbuch folgen, und wenn die Zeit noch reicht, auch noch zum 4. Esra und zur Baruch-Apokalypse. Am Schluss wird der Versuch zur Systematisierung des Offenbarungs- und Geschichtsverständnisses stehen.

122858 S - Die Tsene-rene (Tse'nah u-re'na, Hohelied 3,11) – jiddische Bibelparaphrase und religiöses Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden

1	S	Mo	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.01.1.07	12.10.2026	Dr. Lia Martyn

Kommentar

Die Tsene-rene, auch als sogenannte Frauenbibel bekannt, ist keine Übersetzung der Hebräischen Bibel, sondern paraphrasiert die Wochenabschnitte der Tora, die Megillot und Haftarot, die innerhalb des Jahreszyklus in der Synagoge gelesen werden. Erzählerisch kommentiert, verdichtet mit Elementen aus Talmud und Midrasch, der gesamten rabbinischen Literatur, wurde die Tsene-rene am Schabbat und Feiertagen in den jüdischen Familien gelesen. Sie wurde der "absolute Bestseller der älteren jiddischen Literatur und das religiöse Hausbuch der aschkenasischen Juden schlechthin. (...) Anders als häufig kolportiert wird, war die Zeneréne keineswegs 'nur Frauenlektüre', sondern richtete sich an alle Erwachsenen, die die Erzählungen nicht im Original lesen konnten. Da gerne aus der Zeneréne vorgelesen wurde, wuchsen praktisch alle aschkenasischen Kinder mit der Zeneréne auf." (M. Aptroot/R. Gruschka, Jiddisch, Geschichte und Kultur einer Weltsprache) Gelesen werden Auszüge aus dem jiddischen Original (mit Übersetzung und Kommentar). Vorkenntnisse sind nicht erforderlich.

123923 BL - Zionismus neu gelesen: Ein pluralistischer Ansatz zu einigen grundlegenden Texten

Gruppe	Art	Tag	Zeit	Rhythmus	Veranstaltungsort	1.Termin	Lehrkraft
1	BL	Di	14:00 - 16:00	wöch.	1.15.0.02	13.10.2026	Prof. Dr. Jonathan Schorsch

Kommentar

Everybody talks about Zionism these days. Few seem to be actually familiar with the thinking of early Zionism. It seems productive, therefore, to revisit the texts of early Zionists, to see firsthand what their program entailed and what differing visions of Zionism competed with one another; to see Zionism as an improvised discourse that changed over time and with circumstances, rather than as some monolithic predetermined project.

Understanding the necessity and healthiness of allowing for multiple perspectives, we will read various early Zionist texts, attending particularly to questions of territory, sovereignty, race/ethnicity, theology, nature, and gender. We will consider, for instance, Ahad Ha'am, for whom Zionism was first of all a project of cultural and spiritual renewal and who cautioned already in the 1890s against the way Jewish settlers were treating the country's existing Arab population; figures who sought a joint Arab-Jewish socialist society (Ber Borochov, Franz Oppenheimer, Martin Buber, among others); those who sought indigenous bio-cultural roots (the Canaanite Movement); as well as those who saw a (re)turn to agriculture and nature as a way to oppose nation-state-building (A. D. Gordon).

Early Zionism comprised a field of tensions and contradictions. It spoke the language of European nationalism while criticizing Europe; it drew simultaneously on romanticism, socialism, liberal thought, the assumptions of its colonial era, and Jewish religious traditions; it understood itself at once as a return and as an unprecedented invention. Reading these texts closely lets us watch that improvisation as it happened — the questions early Zionists were asking, the problems they were trying to solve, the options they considered and discarded. Many of those questions have not gone away, and a good deal of today's debate rehearses them without recognizing them as such. Approaching the material historically and in its plurality is one way of moving past polarized positions that foreclose understanding and discussion before they can begin.

Can rabbis really make communities flourish, or are wider demographic, social and cultural forces ultimately decisive? Drawing on contemporary leadership research, positive psychology, organizational theory and classical Jewish sources, this course explores what enables Jewish communities not merely to survive but to thrive. Through a combination of scholarship, practical case studies and theological reflection, participants will examine the distinctive contribution of rabbinic leadership, the importance of congregational culture, the role of belonging, hospitality and conversion, and the ways flourishing can be recognized beyond membership figures and financial indicators. Rooted in the realities of Progressive Judaism in contemporary Europe, the course offers an evidence-based yet deeply Jewish vision of communities where Torah, worship, justice, learning and covenant become sources of resilience, renewal and hope.

Die Grundlagenvorlesung im Winter legt den Fokus auf die geschichtliche Entwicklung von musikalischen Formen, Prozessen und Phänomenen. Es wird um den Weg aus der Evolutionsgeschichte in die Anfänge von Musik im klassischen Griechenland gehen und um Entwicklungsprozesse von der frühen Mehrstimmigkeit bis in die moderne, harmonische Tonalität und die freie Atonalität. Außerdem beschäftigen wir uns mit den historischen Veränderungen der Beziehung zwischen Sprache, Emotion und Musik und mit der Herausbildung von Gattungen und Formen der Instrumental- und Vokalmusik.

Info: Es gibt zwei Grundlagenvorlesungen, eine im Sommer und eine im Winter. Beide können unabhängig voneinander besucht werden. Ereignis-Werk-Kontext findet wieder im nächsten Sommersemester statt. Sie bietet einen Gang durch die Musikgeschichte anhand von großen Uraufführungen und ihrem historischen Kontext.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Darstellung von Endzeit- und Apokalypsevorstellungen aus jüdisch-christlicher Tradition sowie dystopischer Zukunftsbilder in der Musikgeschichte. Ausgangspunkt sind zentrale biblische Texte und ihre Wirkung auf musikalische Werke verschiedener Epochen.
Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Rolle von Klang in filmischen Darstellungen des Holocaust und fragt danach, wie diegetische und extradiegetische Musik zur Konstruktion von Erinnerung beiträgt. Anhand ausgewählter Spielfilme und Dokumentationen wird analysiert, wie Musik als emotionales, narratives und ethisches Gestaltungsmittel eingesetzt wird.
Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte. Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).
Anhand konkreter Beispiele wird untersucht, wie Filmmusik historische Ereignisse kommentiert, verstärkt oder auch problematisch ästhetisiert. Dabei werden unterschiedliche Strategien – von Originalkompositionen über den Einsatz klassischer Werke bis hin zu Stille und Geräusch – vergleichend betrachtet.
Neben der Filmanalyse werden auch erinnerungskulturelle, historische und medienästhetische Kontexte einbezogen. Der Kurs diskutiert, welche Verantwortung Musik im Umgang mit traumatischen Vergangenheiten trägt und wie sie zur individuellen und kollektiven Erinnerungskultur beiträgt.

„Es braucht einen Paradigmenwechsel hin zu einem 3-Säulen-Modell, bestehend aus institutioneller Förderung, Strukturförderung und Projektförderung" – Diese Forderung formulierte der Deutsche Musikrat im Januar 2026 gegenüber Bund, Ländern und Kommunen, mit dem Anliegen, die Freie Musikszene nachhaltiger zu unterstützen (Deutscher Musikrat, miz.org, 2026). Und das in Zeiten, in denen die staatlichen Ausgaben für Kulturpflege drastisch reduziert werden. Doch welche Rolle spielt staatliche Musikförderung in Deutschland für die Institutionen, Veranstaltungsorte und Musiker*innen? Welche Geschichte haben diese Förderstrukturen, beispielweise in der Weimarer Republik, dem Nationalsozialismus, Nachkriegsdeutschland und der DDR? Und wie verteilen sich die Mittel auf unterschiedliche Genres wie Klassik, Jazz oder Popmusik?

»Die Welt ist Klang« ist der Titel einer Radiosendung, später auch eines Buches, des Radiomachers, Jazz-Kenners und Produzenten Joachim-Ernst Berendt. Berendt und insbesondere diese Publikation können dabei als ein zentraler Bezugspunkt der New-Age-Bewegung in Westdeutschland (und darüber hinaus) der späten 1970er und 1980er Jahre gelten. Dieser Bewegung mit ihren an eine Wunderkammer erinnernden Diskursen, ihren ganzheitlichen, spirituellen und zum Teil gegenkulturellen Avancen, ihren spezifischen musikalischen und auditiven Praktiken wollen wir in diesem forschungsorientieren Seminar nachgehen. Ziel des Seminars ist es, anhand dieser musikkulturellen Erscheinungen eine Geschichte der Gegenwart zu skizzieren, die geprägt ist vom Willen ‚östliches Denken' als Heilung der westlichen Moderne zu integrieren, von Selbsttechniken, wie Meditation und Achtsamkeitsübungen, von Vorstellungen kybernetischen, d.h. selbstregulierendem Hören, und einer ubiquitär verfügbaren globalen Musikvertriebsstruktur (Stichwort: Spotify), die zunehmend Grenzen von ‚U-, und ‚E-Musik' erodieren lässt.

Kommentar

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kommentar

Seit vor knapp 100 Jahren mit der Verfilmung des 1929 erschienenen Bestsellers Emil und die Detektive (D 1931, Regie: Gerhard Lamprecht) der erste deutsche Kinderfilm in die Kinos kam, haben sich die Vorzeichen umgekehrt: Einige „Klassiker", wie die eben die Romane von Erich Kästner oder auch die von Astrid Lindgren, sind dem heutigen Publikum in erster Linie durch die immer wieder aktualisierten Verfilmungen bekannt. Die literarischen Vorlagen werden dann – wenn überhaupt – als „Buch zum Film" erworben, das wiederum Teil eines ausgefeilten Merchandise-Konzepts ist. Diese Dynamiken und Wechselwirkungen sollen im Seminar an ausgewählten (prämierten) Filmen und den zugrundeliegenden Büchern näher betrachtet und analysiert werden, darüber hinaus soll der Frage nachgegangen werden, ob Literaturverfilmungen – wie die zahlreichen Adaptionen des Tagebuchs der Anne Frank oder von Judith Kerrs Roman Als Hitler das rosa Kaninchen stahl – komplexen Themenfeldern wie Holocaust und Antisemitismus gerecht werden können und bspw. für den Einsatz im Schulunterricht geeignet sind.

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne.
Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Darstellung von Endzeit- und Apokalypsevorstellungen aus jüdisch-christlicher Tradition sowie dystopischer Zukunftsbilder in der Musikgeschichte. Ausgangspunkt sind zentrale biblische Texte und ihre Wirkung auf musikalische Werke verschiedener Epochen.
Anhand ausgewählter Beispiele – von mittelalterlicher Kirchenmusik über barocke Oratorien bis hin zu romantischen und modernen Kompositionen, darunter das Quatuor pour la fin du temps von Olivier Messiaen oder Der Sturz des Antichrist von Viktor Ullmann – wird analysiert, wie Themen wie Gericht, Erlösung, Zerstörung, gesellschaftlicher Verfall und Zukunftsangst musikalisch gestaltet werden.
Neben der musikalischen Analyse werden auch die theologischen, kulturellen und historischen Kontexte berücksichtigt.
Ein besonderer Fokus liegt auf der Verbindung und Transformation religiöser Endzeitmotive in säkularen, dystopischen Klangwelten der Gegenwart.

Kommentar

Der Kurs untersucht die Rolle von Klang in filmischen Darstellungen des Holocaust und fragt danach, wie diegetische und extradiegetische Musik zur Konstruktion von Erinnerung beiträgt. Anhand ausgewählter Spielfilme und Dokumentationen wird analysiert, wie Musik als emotionales, narratives und ethisches Gestaltungsmittel eingesetzt wird.
Im Mittelpunkt steht unter anderem der Film Der Pianist (2002) mit seinen vielfältigen musikalischen Bezügen sowie der Figur des polnisch-jüdischen Pianisten und Komponisten Wladyslaw Szpilman (1911–2000), der das Warschauer Ghetto überlebte. Ergänzend werden weitere Filme einbezogen, die den Genozid an den europäischen Juden auf unterschiedliche Weise thematisieren und in denen Musik eine zentrale Rolle spielt, darunter Klassiker wie Schindlers Liste (USA 1993), Exodus (USA 1960) und Die Kommissarin (UdSSR 1967/86).
Anhand konkreter Beispiele wird untersucht, wie Filmmusik historische Ereignisse kommentiert, verstärkt oder auch problematisch ästhetisiert. Dabei werden unterschiedliche Strategien – von Originalkompositionen über den Einsatz klassischer Werke bis hin zu Stille und Geräusch – vergleichend betrachtet.
Neben der Filmanalyse werden auch erinnerungskulturelle, historische und medienästhetische Kontexte einbezogen. Der Kurs diskutiert, welche Verantwortung Musik im Umgang mit traumatischen Vergangenheiten trägt und wie sie zur individuellen und kollektiven Erinnerungskultur beiträgt.

»Die Welt ist Klang« ist der Titel einer Radiosendung, später auch eines Buches, des Radiomachers, Jazz-Kenners und Produzenten Joachim-Ernst Berendt. Berendt und insbesondere diese Publikation können dabei als ein zentraler Bezugspunkt der New-Age-Bewegung in Westdeutschland (und darüber hinaus) der späten 1970er und 1980er Jahre gelten. Dieser Bewegung mit ihren an eine Wunderkammer erinnernden Diskursen, ihren ganzheitlichen, spirituellen und zum Teil gegenkulturellen Avancen, ihren spezifischen musikalischen und auditiven Praktiken wollen wir in diesem forschungsorientieren Seminar nachgehen. Ziel des Seminars ist es, anhand dieser musikkulturellen Erscheinungen eine Geschichte der Gegenwart zu skizzieren, die geprägt ist vom Willen ‚östliches Denken' als Heilung der westlichen Moderne zu integrieren, von Selbsttechniken, wie Meditation und Achtsamkeitsübungen, von Vorstellungen kybernetischen, d.h. selbstregulierendem Hören, und einer ubiquitär verfügbaren globalen Musikvertriebsstruktur (Stichwort: Spotify), die zunehmend Grenzen von ‚U-, und ‚E-Musik' erodieren lässt.

Die Seminarsprache ist deutsch. Eine Bereitschaft, sich auch mit englischsprachiger Forschungsliteratur auseinanderzusetzen, wird jedoch vorausgesetzt.

Kommentar

Seit Heinrich Heine ist Paris eng mit der deutschen Exilgeschichte verbunden – und hat zudem als „Hauptstadt des 19. Jahrhunderts" (Walter Benjamin) eine große Anziehungskraft (nicht nur) auf deutschsprachige Intellektuelle und Künstler:innen ausgeübt. Trotz des Deutsch-Französischen Krieges (1870/71) und des Ersten Weltkrieges (1914–1918) fühlten sie sich Frankreich verbunden, beherrschten die Sprache und wollten partizipieren am ‚Projekt' der Moderne. Unter vollkommen anderen Vorzeichen kamen jene Geflüchteten, die Deutschland nach der Machtübernahme durch die Nationalsozialisten im Januar und dem Reichstagsbrand im Februar 1933 verlassen mussten: Sie fanden (zunächst) Zuflucht in Paris, lebten dort oft unter prekären Umständen und hofften darauf, rasch nach Hause zurückkehren zu können. Im Seminar werden Verfolgung und Flucht, die Lebensbedingungen im Exil und ihre künstlerischen und literarischen Reflexionen sowie die Organisation von politischem und publizistischem Widerstand näher beleuchtet. Auch einzelne Biographien und Schicksale sollen in den Vordergrund gerückt werden.

Kommentar

„Es braucht einen Paradigmenwechsel hin zu einem 3-Säulen-Modell, bestehend aus institutioneller Förderung, Strukturförderung und Projektförderung" – Diese Forderung formulierte der Deutsche Musikrat im Januar 2026 gegenüber Bund, Ländern und Kommunen, mit dem Anliegen, die Freie Musikszene nachhaltiger zu unterstützen (Deutscher Musikrat, miz.org, 2026). Und das in Zeiten, in denen die staatlichen Ausgaben für Kulturpflege drastisch reduziert werden. Doch welche Rolle spielt staatliche Musikförderung in Deutschland für die Institutionen, Veranstaltungsorte und Musiker*innen? Welche Geschichte haben diese Förderstrukturen, beispielweise in der Weimarer Republik, dem Nationalsozialismus, Nachkriegsdeutschland und der DDR? Und wie verteilen sich die Mittel auf unterschiedliche Genres wie Klassik, Jazz oder Popmusik?

Gegenstand dieses Kurses ist Fortsetzung der Vermittlung der Sprachkenntnisse (in Grammatik, Lexik, Syntax und Phonetik), wobei das autonome Lernen einen breiteren Raum einnimmt. Interkulturelle Kenntnisse werden vertieft. Außerdem werden Hör– und Leseverstehen sowie Sprech– und Schreibfertigkeit im Rahmen alltags- und studienbezogener Situationen trainiert und vertieft.

Neben einer regelmäßigen und aktiven Teilnahme am Unterricht wird von den Studierenden erwartet, dass sie sich genügend Zeit für die Nacharbeit des Stoffes zu Hause nehmen.

Kommentar

Neben der Systematisierung der grammatikalischen Inhalte und deren aktivem und bewusstem Einsatz werden Landeskundliche Themen durch Übungen zum Hör- und Leseverstehen anhand authentischer Texte diskutiert. Außerdem werden Sprech- und Schreibfertigkeit im Hinblick auf einen Studienaufenthalt in Italien trainiert. Die im Kurs behandelten landeskundlichen Themen sind Gegenstand der Prüfung UNIcert II, die das Verstehen eines gesprochenen Textes (Hörverstehen) und eines schriftlichen Textes (Leseverstehen), eine mündliche Prüfung und das Verfassen eines argumentativen Textes vorsieht. Um diesen letzten Prüfungsteil zu trainieren, wird im Kurs besonderen Wert auf das Schreiben gelegt. Das setzt von den Studierenden die Bereitschaft voraus, während des Semesters Texte unterschiedlicher Länge zu verfassen.

Der Kurs findet mittwochs von 12:15 bis 15:30 Uhr statt.

Kommentar

Unmittelbar nach dem Ende des Zweiten Weltkriegs begann eine rege Literaturproduktion: Unter prekären Arbeitsbedingungen entstanden auch Werke, in denen sich die Autor:innen aus der deutschen Binnenperspektive (selbst-)kritisch auf die Jahre der NS-Herrschaft bezogen und Fragen von Schuld und Verstrickung verhandelten. Gleichzeitig wurden aus der so genannten Inneren Emigration Rufe nach einem Schlussstrich und einem Neuanfang laut, die von (verbalen) Attacken gegen die „Exilliteratur" begleitet wurden. Aus dem Exil kehrten aber auch die ersten Autor:innen zurück, deren ‚Heimkehr' sich keineswegs leicht gestaltete, andere entschieden sich für das jeweilige Exilland.

Zahlreiche Schriftstellerinnen aus den unterschiedlichen Bereichen, wie bspw. Susanne Kerckhoff, Anna Seghers, Gabriele Tergit, Elisabeth Langgässer oder Ricarda Huch beteiligten sich an diesem Diskurs, der bereits um 1949, also mit der Entstehung der beiden deutschen Staaten (BRD und DDR), ein Ende fand. Das Blockseminar nimmt eine Ausstellung zu Susanne Kerckhoff im Berliner Mitte Museum zum Anlass, dieses kurze Zeitfenster mit seinen oftmals vergessenen Akteurinnen in den Fokus zu rücken.

Dieses Seminar widmet sich der Untersuchung der literarischen Mehrsprachigkeit und ihrer vielfältigen Erscheinungsformen und Bedeutungen in der Literaturwissenschaft. Wir werden die unterschiedlichen wissenschaftlichen Auffassungen und Theorien zur Mehrsprachigkeit beleuchten und diskutieren, um ein umfassendes Verständnis der Thematik zu entwickeln. Ein zentraler Aspekt wird die Erfahrung von Schriftstellerinnen und Schriftstellern sein, die eine 'andere' Sprache als Ausdrucksmittel wählen. Diese Wahl kann sowohl kreative Freiheit als auch sprachliche und kulturelle Herausforderungen bergen und ist häufig eng mit Themen der Identität, Migration und kultureller Hybridität verbunden. Die Studierenden werden ermutigt, die Auswirkungen der Mehrsprachigkeit auf das literarische Schreiben zu erforschen und zu hinterfragen: Welche Rolle spielt die Sprache im kreativen Prozess? Wie beeinflusst der Wechsel der Sprache die Themenwahl und die narrative Struktur von literarischen Werken? Welche Konflikte und kreativen Potenziale entstehen aus der Arbeit in einer nicht-muttersprachlichen Sprache? Durch eine kritische Auseinandersetzung mit literarischen Texten und theoretischen Ansätzen bietet dieses Seminar den Teilnehmern die Möglichkeit, die faszinierenden und breit gefächerten Facetten der literarischen Mehrsprachigkeit zu entdecken und zu analysieren.

In diesem Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit ausgewählter zeitgenössischer Lyrik aus Spanien der letzten Jahrzehnte. Ziel des Seminars ist es zum einen, einen Überblick über aktuelle Tendenzen der Gegenwartslyrik zu erarbeiten und auf der anderen Seite theoretische und methodische Ansätze zur Analyse von lyrischen Texten eigenständig zu erproben und zu vertiefen. Nach einer ersten Erarbeitung des literaturwissenschaftlichen Analyseinstrumentariums sowie literaturhistorisch-theoretischen Hinführung werden wir dafür gemeinsam sowohl exemplarische Einzelinterpretationen einschlägiger Forschungsliteratur lesen und diskutieren als auch, insbesondere bei sehr neuen Texten, ganz eigene Lektüren und Interpretationen vornehmen. Das Seminar wird begleitet von einer wissenschaftlichen Schreibwerkstatt. Es ist zudem die Einladung junger spanischer Dichter*innen geplant. Auch eigene Lektürevorschläge sind sehr willkommen.

„[…] Seit über 25 Jahren lesen im Rahmen der immer zahlreicher werdenden, immer mehr Länder und Regionen einbeziehenden „Choix Goncourt internationaux" Studentinnen und Studenten im universitären Kontext, also vor literaturwissenschaftlichem Hintergrund, aber mit literaturkritischem Ziel, Romane von einer der Long- oder Shortlists des Prix Goncourt und wählen ‚ihren' Siegerroman. Dann diskutieren sie gemeinsam mit Studentinnen und Studenten aus anderen Universitäten ihres jeweiligen Landes, um am Ende den Siegerroman des jeweiligen Landes zu küren.
Am ersten Durchlauf [in Deutschland] 2024 beteiligen sich vierzehn Universitäten aus zwölf Bundesländern mit fast 200 Studierenden […], in alphabetischer Reihenfolge der Bundesländer: Albrecht-Ludwigs-Universität Freiburg, Freie Universität Berlin, Humboldt-Universität Berlin, Universität Potsdam, Universität Bremen, Universität Hamburg, Justus-Liebig-Universität Gießen, Universität Rostock, Heinrich-Heine-Universität Düsseldorf, Universität Münster, Rheinland-Pfälzische Technische Universität Kaiserslautern-Landau, Universität Trier, Universität Leipzig, Martin-Luther-Universität Halle-Wittenberg.
Ab Beginn des Wintersemesters beschäftigen sich die Studentinnen und Studenten – in je auf die curricularen Bedürfnisse vor Ort abgestimmten Kursen – erst mit dem „Prix Goncourt" und der aktuellen Longlist, bevor sie – ab der Bekanntgabe am 22. Oktober – die vier Finalisten-Romane lesen und auf Französisch diskutieren. In der ersten Märzwoche 2025 werden zwei Delegierte jeder Universität nach Berlin reisen, um dort in der Runde der vierzehn Universitäten für die Wahl ihres Kurses – wiederum auf Französisch – zu werben und schließlich gemeinsam einen Sieger-Roman auszuwählen. So bietet der „Choix Goncourt de l'Allemagne" den Studentinnen und Studenten eine Erfahrung mit Literatur, die an der Universität normalerweise nicht gängig ist, und schafft ein Netzwerk unter jungen Französischleserinnen und -lesern in ganz Deutschland: Er dient dem Erwerb und der Praxis von Kompetenzen im Rahmen ihrer universitären Ausbildung, und er eröffnet auch die Möglichkeit, dies als Chance zu nutzen, persönliche literarische Bildung zu erwerben und zu erweitern."

Dieses Seminar widmet sich der Untersuchung der literarischen Mehrsprachigkeit und ihrer vielfältigen Erscheinungsformen und Bedeutungen in der Literaturwissenschaft. Von den Anfängen bis ins Heute – das Seminar widmet sich chronologisch der Kulturgeschichte von (oder: der?) Belarus. Wir setzen an bei der Formierung einer Nationalbewegung im 19. Jahrhundert, besprechen die revolutionäre Zeit des Kalinouski-Aufstandes 1863, wenden uns dann dem 20. Jahrhundert zu: der belarussischen Volksrepublik, der Sowjetzeit, der Unabhängigkeit 1991. Schließlich kommen wir im 21. Jahrhundert an: in der Zeit des Autoritarismus unter Aljaksandr Lukasenka, aber auch von Widerstand und Protesten, zuletzt 2020. Abschließend wird es um Fragen von Exil und Arbeiten im Untergrund gehen.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Filmkritisches Schreiben: Seminar in Kooperation mit Novinki.de und dem Filmfestival Cottbus

Im Seminar erproben wir uns im anspruchsvollen, aber journalistischen Schreiben von Filmrezensionen. Gegenstand dieser Rezensionen werden Filme sein, die wir bei einem gemeinsamen des Festivals für osteuropäischen Films in Cottbus sehen werden. Die Teilnahme an einer zweitägigen Exkursion dorthin (5.-6. November 2026) ist verpflichtend, für die Exkursion entstehen Kosten in der Höhe von etwa 20 Euro.

Thematisch geben Seminar wie Festival Einblick in aktuelle Erscheinungen und Tendenzen des osteuropäischen Films.

Ein/e professionelle/r Filmkritiker*in wird zu Gast im Seminar sein, und uns bei der Schreibarbeit beraten. Besonders gelungene Rezensionen werden auf der Plattform novinki.de veröffentlicht.

Auch besteht die Möglichkeit, Erfahrung im selbständigen Kuratieren eines Filmabends zu sammeln.

Pünktliche Abgaben der Filmrezensionen in mehreren Fassungen.

Wir werden uns im Seminar mit Literatur, bildender Kunst, Film, der Politik und dem intellektuellen Diskurs der Zeit beschäftigen.

Das Berlin der sogenannten »Goldenen Zwanziger« hatte magische Anziehungskraft. Die aufregendste Metropole Europas zog Gäste in ihren Bann und bot zugleich Zuflucht für zigtausende Zuwanderer aus Osteuropa. So entfaltete sich hier auch Literatur aus der Ukraine – auf Ukrainisch und auf Jiddisch. Geschrieben wurde sie oftmals von Geflüchteten, viele der jüdischen vor Pogromen, andere vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg oder dem in der Ukraine wütenden Bürgerkrieg. Später kamen Besucher aus dem sowjetischen Charkiw und Kyjiw, um das bourgeoise »Babylon« Berlin zu inspizieren. Zugleich gab es unter den Autoren politisch Verfolgte oder Arbeitssuchende, die Not und Hunger in ihrer Heimat zu entkommen suchten. Ihre Stimmen finden sich in zeitgenössischen Feuilletons, Reisereportagen, Romanen und modernistischen Gedichten, die wir im Seminar lesen und vergleichen werden. Auf diese Weise werden wir die Vielfalt der individuellen Stimmen erschließen und zugleich der Frage nachgehen, ob und inwiefern sich auch von einem – von allen gemeinsam gebildeten – „Berlin-Text" mit einer spezifischen Topik (wandernde Motive wie z.B. Revue, Leuchtreklame, Syphilis, Fabrikschlote, Kaffeehauskultur, Migrantenelend oder Hundemanie) und Mythopoetik sprechen lässt, ob es mehrere solcher kollektiver „Berlin-Texte" gibt, und, wenn ja, wieviele?
Das Seminar richtet sich an Studierende der Jüdischen Studien und der Slavistik - mit und ohne Kenntnisse des Jiddischen und Ukrainischen. Es wird in Kooperation mit dem Fachgebiet Ostslawische Literaturen und Kulturen der Humboldt-Universität (Prof. Susanne Frank) durchgeführt.

Kann man Literatur als ein in sich geschlossenes System betrachten? Was für ein Verhältnis besteht zwischen Literatur und der Außenwelt? Wie wird die Außenwelt innerhalb Literatur modelliert? Im Seminar werden wir uns mithilfe verschiedener (Literatur-)Theorien mit diesen Fragen beschäftigen und dabei einen besonderen Fokus auf innerliterarische Phänomene des Bruchs und der Zerstörung legen. Wir betrachten literarische Formen des Bruchs wie Humor (Bachtin) und Grenzübergänge (Lotman) sowie nicht-literarische Konzepte der Zerstörung (Todestrieb) und wenden unsere Reflektionen primär auf russischsprachige und jiddische Literatur der ersten Hälfte des 20. Von den Anfängen bis ins Heute – das Seminar widmet sich chronologisch der Kulturgeschichte von (oder: der?) Belarus. Wir setzen an bei der Formierung einer Nationalbewegung im 19. Jahrhundert, besprechen die revolutionäre Zeit des Kalinouski-Aufstandes 1863, wenden uns dann dem 20. Jahrhundert zu: der belarussischen Volksrepublik, der Sowjetzeit, der Unabhängigkeit 1991. Schließlich kommen wir im 21. Jahrhundert an: in der Zeit des Autoritarismus unter Aljaksandr Lukasenka, aber auch von Widerstand und Protesten, zuletzt 2020. Abschließend wird es um Fragen von Exil und Arbeiten im Untergrund gehen.

Dafür lesen wir eine breite Auswahl von Texten – historische, philosophische, essayistische, vor allem aber auch literarische Primärtexte. Über das Semester hinweg haben die Studierenden die Möglichkeit, sich mit diversen Strömungen des Denkens aus und über Belarus bekannt zu machen. Gleichzeitig werden zentrale politische und kulturelle Konzepte der Moderne beispielhaft behandelt: Freiheit, Nation, Revolution, autonome Kunst.

Die Rückkehr an den Heimatort nach Jahren der Wanderung (Flucht, Vertreibung, Auswanderung) stellt einen der ältesten Plots der Literaturgeschichte (Odyssee!) dar. Zu diesem Plot gehören Verhandlungen von Sehnsucht, Identität (wo gehöre ich hin) sowie des Eigenen und des Fremden. In der jüdischen Geschichte, geprägt vom Leben in der Diaspora, hat der Topos der Rückkehr eine besondere, auch religiös motivierte Bedeutung. Unser Seminar nimmt aber nicht das erträumte „gelobte Land" in den Fokus, sondern Europa als reale, diasporische Heimat von Jüdinnen und Juden über Jahrhunderte hinweg bis zur weitgehenden Zerstörung des jüdischen Lebens in Europa in der Shoah.

Bereits in den 1920er Jahren entstanden erste Reportagen und literarische Texte, in denen die Rückkehr nach Europa von jüdischen Ausgewanderten (vor allem im Zuge der Arbeits- bzw. Armutsmigrationen) verhandelt wurde. Dabei spielte oftmals die eigene oder von den Eltern vermittelte Erinnerung eine zentrale Rolle. Nach der Shoah war die Rückkehr der aus Europa Geflohenen mit der Suche nach den zerstörten jüdischen Orten, nach letzten Spuren der von den Nationalsozialisten ermordeten Familienangehörigen verbunden. Aufgrund der politischen Situation war eine Reise in die sozialistischen abgeschotteten Staaten oftmals nicht möglich, erst mit dem Jahr 1990 konnte dies nachgeholt werden. Insbesondere für die zweite und dritte Generation wurde es von großer Bedeutung, an die Herkunftsorte ihrer Familien zurückzukehren und nach Spuren jüdischen Lebens in Europa zu suchen. In diesem Zusammenhang spielen alte Archivbilder und die Produktion neuer Bilder eine zentrale Rolle, wobei insbesondere Filme, aber auch literarische Texte als Medien zur Reflexion dieser Prozesse untersucht werden können.

Filmkritisches Schreiben: Seminar in Kooperation mit Novinki.de und dem Filmfestival Cottbus

Im Seminar erproben wir uns im anspruchsvollen, aber journalistischen Schreiben von Filmrezensionen. Gegenstand dieser Rezensionen werden Filme sein, die wir bei einem gemeinsamen des Festivals für osteuropäischen Films in Cottbus sehen werden. Die Teilnahme an einer zweitägigen Exkursion dorthin (5.-6. November 2026) ist verpflichtend, für die Exkursion entstehen Kosten in der Höhe von etwa 20 Euro.

Thematisch geben Seminar wie Festival Einblick in aktuelle Erscheinungen und Tendenzen des osteuropäischen Films.

Ein/e professionelle/r Filmkritiker*in wird zu Gast im Seminar sein, und uns bei der Schreibarbeit beraten. Besonders gelungene Rezensionen werden auf der Plattform novinki.de veröffentlicht.

Auch besteht die Möglichkeit, Erfahrung im selbständigen Kuratieren eines Filmabends zu sammeln.

Pünktliche Abgaben der Filmrezensionen in mehreren Fassungen.

Kommentar

Die spätsowjetische Zeit, der Zeitraum zwischen ca. 1960 und ca. 1990, steht für Aufbruch und Stillstand gleichermaßen: Vor allem aus der Perspektive des 21. Jahrhunderts wird deutlich, dass sich in dieser Zeit der Möglichkeitsraum in der rigiden sowjetischen Semiosphäre im russischen, ukrainischen und belorusischen meist in Sphären des In- und Halboffiziellen oder der Dissidenz erstaunlich erweiterte. Gleichzeitig ist es aber auch schwer, die damals gefeierten Entgrenzungen nachzuvollziehen.

Wir werden uns im Seminar mit Literatur, bildender Kunst, Film, der Politik und dem intellektuellen Diskurs der Zeit beschäftigen.

Kommentar

Neben der Systematisierung der grammatikalischen Inhalte und deren aktivem und bewusstem Einsatz werden Landeskundliche Themen durch Übungen zum Hör- und Leseverstehen anhand authentischer Texte diskutiert. Außerdem werden Sprech- und Schreibfertigkeit im Hinblick auf einen Studienaufenthalt in Italien trainiert. Die im Kurs behandelten landeskundlichen Themen sind Gegenstand der Prüfung UNIcert II, die das Verstehen eines gesprochenen Textes (Hörverstehen) und eines schriftlichen Textes (Leseverstehen), eine mündliche Prüfung und das Verfassen eines argumentativen Textes vorsieht. Um diesen letzten Prüfungsteil zu trainieren, wird im Kurs besonderen Wert auf das Schreiben gelegt. Das setzt von den Studierenden die Bereitschaft voraus, während des Semesters Texte unterschiedlicher Länge zu verfassen.

Der Kurs findet mittwochs von 12:15 bis 15:30 Uhr statt.

Kommentar

Kennen Sie Fereshta Ludin?

Frau Ludin ist eine deutsche Staatsangehörige muslimischen Glaubens, die als Lehrperson im Land Baden-Württemberg ein Kopftuch tragen wollte. Damit hat sie die sogenannte 'Kopftuch-Debatte' angestoßen, die bis heute geführt wird.

Widersprechen religiöse Symbole wie das Kopftuch dem Neutralitätsgebot des Staates? Oder sollte man der Auffassung sein, dass sich jeder kleiden kann, wie er will, solange er anderen keinen Schaden damit zufügt? Welche religiösen Gründe gibt es für Frauen, ein Kopftuch zu tragen? Wie wird das Bedecken von Frauenkörpern innerhalb islamischer Traditionen verhandelt und wie werden verschiedene Positionen legitimiert? Das sind einige der inhaltlichen Fragen, mit denen sich das Interdisziplinäre Propädeutikum befasst.

Das eigentliche Ziel dieser interdisziplinären Lehrveranstaltung ist aber das Einüben der Methoden der religionskundlichen sowie der philosophischen Textlektüre nach dem sog. Ariadnefaden einerseits und dem sog. Xantippe-Strick zur Essay-Form andererseits

Die Seminarleistungen bestehen in regelmäßiger Mitarbeit sowie in einer Vorbereitung jeder einzelnen Seminarsitzung dahingehend, dass die kurzen Rechercheaufgaben gelöst bzw. dass die Fragen zum Text beantwortet werden, die in Moodle zu den Seminarsitzungen gestellt werden. Für die Einreichungen gibt es jeweils in Moodle ein dafür eingerichtetes Tool. Wenn mehr als 80% der Aufgaben nicht erfüllt bzw. der Fragen nicht beantwortet sind, gilt die Lehrveranstaltung als nicht bestanden. Die Einreichungen dienen auch der Vorbereitung auf die aktive Teilnahme an der fiktiven Talk-Show in der letzten Sitzung. Das Ziel ist, das während des Seminars Teams aus Expert*innen für eine Position entstehen, die während der Talkshow verteidigt werden soll. Dazu ist es nötig, dass sich das Team jeweils während des Seminars (ggfs. mit den Seminartexten) in Absprache mit der jeweiligen Dozentin in einer Sprechstunde auf ihre Rolle vorbereitet. Ohne diese Teamarbeit einschließlich der Beteiligung an der Talkshow gilt die Veranstaltung ebenfalls als nicht bestanden.

Was für den Arzt die Spritze ist, das ist für den Philosophen das Argument: nämlich sein wichtigstes Instrument. Überzeugend diskutieren kann nur, wer ein gutes philosophisches Argument von leerem Geschwätz unterscheiden kann. Das gilt auch für die Ethik. Das Seminar führt LER-Studierende deshalb in die wichtigsten Techniken des philosophischen Argumentierens, Lesens und Schreibens ein. Das geschieht anhand von ausgewählten Beispieltexten der Philosophiegeschichte (mit einem Schwerpunkt auf ethischen Texten), damit gleichzeitig ein Überblick über die Geschichte der Philosophie gegeben wird. Im ersten Teil geht es die Grundstruktur des moralischen Urteils; anschließend um den adäquaten Umgang mit philosophischen Begriffen; dann um philosophische Argumentationstypen; und schließlich um die Technik der Textlektüre (Xantippe-Strick). Insgesamt will das Seminar in die Lage versetzen, einen philosophischen Text angemessen zu rekonstruieren und zu diskutieren. Das Resultat sind jeweils Analysebogen, auf denen die wichtigsten Techniken und Regeln des ethisch-philosophischen Argumentierens durch schulgerechte Beispiele veranschaulicht zusammengefasst sind. Das Seminar findet eine Fortsetzung im SS 24 zu Argumentationsfiguren der Angewandten Ethik. In diesem Seminar werden wir Lehrziele und Charakteristika von religionskundlichem Unterricht ausmachen, für den R-Bereich zentrale Begriffe klären und anwenden sowie die Darstellung von Religionen und religiösen Menschen in Schulmaterialien genauer unter die Lupe nehmen. Vor- und Nachteile verschiedener Herangehensweisen werden diskutiert, um daran anknüpfend Unterrichtsgegenstände und -szenarien auszuwählen, durchzuspielen und mit Blick auf LER-relevante Kompetenzziele anzupassen.

Ziel des Kurses ist es, gemeinsam Ideen und konkrete Unterrichtsentwürfe für einen innovativen religionskundlichen Unterricht zu entwickeln. Dabei soll auch immer wieder konkret besprochen werden, was sich für den Grundschulbereich eignet. Religiöses Spielzeug, Kinder- und Jugendliteratur, Festtraditionen an Schulen, Filme und Serien mit Religionsbezug ebenso wie in verschiedenen Medien aktuell diskutierte religionsbezogene Fragen oder der Besuch religiöser Orte im Rahmen von LER-Unterricht sind mögliche Ausgangspunkte, denen wir uns widmen, um zu eruieren, was in der Auseinandersetzung mit solchen Phänomenen gelernt werden kann.

Inhalt : Am Lebensanfang tauchen ebenso drängende moralische Fragen auf wie am Lebensende. Ab wann ist eine befruchtete Eizelle etwas, das man nicht töten darf? Ist eine befruchtete Eizelle ein werdender Mensch, dessen Würde zu respektieren ist, oder handelt es sich nur um einen Zellhaufen? Die Frage ist ein LER-Thema, weil sie viele lebensweltliche Bezüge hat. Sie stellt sich, wenn es um Abtreibung geht. Sie stellt sich auch im Kontext von Stammzellenforschung oder angesichts der neuen technischen Möglichkeiten von künstlicher Befruchtung und vorgeburtlicher Untersuchung (PID). Darf man an menschlichen Embryonen forschen, und wenn ja, bis zu welchem Zeitpunkt? Das Seminar behandelt den Status menschlicher Embryonen als LER-Thema.

Weil das Seminar auf das eigenständige Erstellen von Lehreinheiten in der Schulpraxis vorbereiten soll, hat es einen methodischen Schwerpunkt. Am Beispiel der Frage nach dem moralischen Status von Embryonen soll der Umgang mit ethischen Texten gelernt werden. Der Vorbereitung auf die Schulpraxis dienen außerdem die aktive Gestaltung einer Sitzung und das Erstellen von Arbeitsblättern (s.u. Leistungsanforderung). Das Seminar ist nach dem fachdidaktischen Bonbon-Modell aufgebaut, so dass auch andere LER-Perspektiven einbezogen werden können, wobei die E-Dimension dominiert.

Leistungsanforderung : Erwartet wird regelmäßige Mitarbeit und Textlektüre sowie die Erstellung von Arbeitsblättern für fiktive SchülerInnen zu den Sitzungstexten. Zur ersten und zur letzten Sitzung müssen keine Arbeitsblätter erstellt werden. Die einzelnen Arbeitsblätter (ca. 1 Seite; s.u.) dienen der Vorbereitung für die Sitzungen. Sie sollen jeweils zu den Sitzungen (gern auch auf dem Computer) mitgebracht und außerdem vor jeder Sitzung in moodle eingestellt werden. Nachreichungen sind zweimal möglich. Wenn weniger als 80% der Arbeitsblätter vorliegen, gilt die Veranstaltung als nicht bestanden. Als Vorbereitung auf die schulische Praxis soll außerdem eine Sitzung (ggfs. in Kleingruppen) mit dem Arbeitsblatt gestaltet werden. Das Arbeitsblatt ist dafür der Seminargruppe im Vorfeld in moodle zugänglich zu machen.
Aufbau des Arbeitsblattes : 1. Knappe bibliographische Angaben (Autor, Titel, Veröffentlichungsjahr, Seiten). 2. Leitende Frage in einem Satz (ggfs. auch Anlass bzw. Kontext bzw. Gegner). 3. Zentrale Textpassage(n) (ca. 4 Zeilen) 4. Knappe Überschriften zu jedem einzelnen Absatz bzw. Kapitel des Textes (jeweils in einem Satz oder als Stichwörter) 5. Ca. drei eigene Nachfragen zu Thesen, Begründungen oder Begriffsbedeutungen.
Gestaltung der Sitzung mit dem Arbeitsblatt: Bitte halten Sie kein durchgehendes Referat, sondern erarbeiten Sie den Text mit der Seminargruppe. 1. Diskussion der zentralen Textpassage als Einstieg 2. Rekonstruktion des Textes, gegliedert nach einzelnen Absätzen bzw. Kapiteln. Bitte planen Sie nach jedem Absatz etwas Zeit für Verständnisfragen und Begriffsklärungen ein. 3. Kritische Nachfragen und Diskussion.

"Wenn ich mit Menschen- und mit Engelzungen redete und hätte der Liebe nicht, ..."
An Lobpreisungen der Liebe kommt man nicht schwer, sowohl in der Philosophie als auch außerhalb. Doch was ist damit gemeint? Ein Gefühl? Ein Verhältnis? Eine Tätigkeit? Gibt es eine oder mehrere Grundformen der Liebe (romantische, freundschaftliche, Nächstenliebe) oder geht Liebe ganz in den historisch-kulturellen Formen ihrer Variation auf?
Diesen und anderen Fragen wollen wir uns anhand der Lektüre klassischer Texte über Liebe und Freundschaft aus der Tradition widmen.

Diese Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über die Geschichte des Christentums anhand entscheidender Konflikte. Diese Knotenpunkte zeigen nicht nur, dass Charakteristika christlicher Lehre und Praxis Aushandlungsprozesse waren und welche Konflikte zu Paradigmenwechsel geführt haben, sondern auch, dass diese Streite maßgeblich waren für die Ausdifferenzierung des Christentums in verschiedene Konfessionen und Bewegungen. Zentrale Punkte werden u.a. sein: der Beschneidungskonflikt, der christologische Streit, der Bilderstreit, die Reformationsbewegungen, der Kulturkampf, die Auseinandersetzung mit Modernisierungen.

Im Kurs werden fachdidaktische Theorie und schulische Praxis aufeinander bezogen, in den Rahmenlehrplan des Faches eingeführt, Elemente der Unterrichtsplanung erarbeitet, die Dimensionen und das Kompetenzmodell von LER sowie die Rolle der Lehrkraft diskutiert u.v.m.
Zusätzlich zum seminaristischen Kursanteil werden die Teilnehmer*innen hospitieren und erste eigene Unterrichtserfahrungen (2 Stunden) sammeln, wobei die Hospitationen und Lehrversuche im Kurs begleitet werden. Die Schulpraktischen Übungen finden außerhalb der Kurszeit an Schulen in der Stadt Potsdam und Umgebung statt. Die Schulen und die entsprechenden Zeiten der SPÜ erfahren Sie ab September bei Dr. Petra Lenz (petra.lenz@uni-potsdam.de) per Mailanfrage, so dass Sie Ihren Stundenplan bei Freischaltung des Vorlesungsverzeichnisses planen können. Bitte melden Sie sich rechtzeitig, da die Vergabe der Kursplätze die Zusage für einen SPÜ-Platz an einer Schule voraussetzt.
Bei der Semesterplanung sollte beachtet werden, dass der Integrationskurs sehr arbeits- und zeitintensiv ist.
Für den Kurs werden 15 Studierende für das LA der Sek I zugelassen (vgl. §9a und 9b der BAMA-O). Voraussetzung für das Belegen des Kurses ist ein erfolgreicher Abschluss des Kurses Einführung in die Fachdidaktik LER.

121294 S - Zum moralischen Status von menschlichen Embryonen

Kommentar

Inhalt : Am Lebensanfang tauchen ebenso drängende moralische Fragen auf wie am Lebensende. Ab wann ist eine befruchtete Eizelle etwas, das man nicht töten darf? Ist eine befruchtete Eizelle ein werdender Mensch, dessen Würde zu respektieren ist, oder handelt es sich nur um einen Zellhaufen? Die Frage ist ein LER-Thema, weil sie viele lebensweltliche Bezüge hat. Sie stellt sich, wenn es um Abtreibung geht. Sie stellt sich auch im Kontext von Stammzellenforschung oder angesichts der neuen technischen Möglichkeiten von künstlicher Befruchtung und vorgeburtlicher Untersuchung (PID). Darf man an menschlichen Embryonen forschen, und wenn ja, bis zu welchem Zeitpunkt? Das Seminar behandelt den Status menschlicher Embryonen als LER-Thema.

Weil das Seminar auf das eigenständige Erstellen von Lehreinheiten in der Schulpraxis vorbereiten soll, hat es einen methodischen Schwerpunkt. Am Beispiel der Frage nach dem moralischen Status von Embryonen soll der Umgang mit ethischen Texten gelernt werden. Der Vorbereitung auf die Schulpraxis dienen außerdem die aktive Gestaltung einer Sitzung und das Erstellen von Arbeitsblättern (s.u. Leistungsanforderung). Das Seminar ist nach dem fachdidaktischen Bonbon-Modell aufgebaut, so dass auch andere LER-Perspektiven einbezogen werden können, wobei die E-Dimension dominiert.

Leistungsanforderung : Erwartet wird regelmäßige Mitarbeit und Textlektüre sowie die Erstellung von Arbeitsblättern für fiktive SchülerInnen zu den Sitzungstexten. Zur ersten und zur letzten Sitzung müssen keine Arbeitsblätter erstellt werden. Die einzelnen Arbeitsblätter (ca. 1 Seite; s.u.) dienen der Vorbereitung für die Sitzungen. Sie sollen jeweils zu den Sitzungen (gern auch auf dem Computer) mitgebracht und außerdem vor jeder Sitzung in moodle eingestellt werden. Nachreichungen sind zweimal möglich. Wenn weniger als 80% der Arbeitsblätter vorliegen, gilt die Veranstaltung als nicht bestanden. Als Vorbereitung auf die schulische Praxis soll außerdem eine Sitzung (ggfs. in Kleingruppen) mit dem Arbeitsblatt gestaltet werden. Das Arbeitsblatt ist dafür der Seminargruppe im Vorfeld in moodle zugänglich zu machen.
Aufbau des Arbeitsblattes : 1. Knappe bibliographische Angaben (Autor, Titel, Veröffentlichungsjahr, Seiten). 2. Leitende Frage in einem Satz (ggfs. auch Anlass bzw. Kontext bzw. Gegner). 3. Zentrale Textpassage(n) (ca. 4 Zeilen) 4. Knappe Überschriften zu jedem einzelnen Absatz bzw. Kapitel des Textes (jeweils in einem Satz oder als Stichwörter) 5. Ca. drei eigene Nachfragen zu Thesen, Begründungen oder Begriffsbedeutungen.
Gestaltung der Sitzung mit dem Arbeitsblatt: Bitte halten Sie kein durchgehendes Referat, sondern erarbeiten Sie den Text mit der Seminargruppe. 1. Diskussion der zentralen Textpassage als Einstieg 2. Rekonstruktion des Textes, gegliedert nach einzelnen Absätzen bzw. Kapiteln. Bitte planen Sie nach jedem Absatz etwas Zeit für Verständnisfragen und Begriffsklärungen ein. 3. Kritische Nachfragen und Diskussion.

Was für den Arzt die Spritze ist, das ist für den Philosophen das Argument: nämlich sein wichtigstes Instrument. Überzeugend diskutieren kann nur, wer ein gutes philosophisches Argument von leerem Geschwätz unterscheiden kann. Das gilt auch für die Ethik. Das Seminar führt LER-Studierende deshalb in die wichtigsten Techniken des philosophischen Argumentierens, Lesens und Schreibens ein. Das geschieht anhand von ausgewählten Beispieltexten der Philosophiegeschichte (mit einem Schwerpunkt auf ethischen Texten), damit gleichzeitig ein Überblick über die Geschichte der Philosophie gegeben wird. Im ersten Teil geht es die Grundstruktur des moralischen Urteils; anschließend um den adäquaten Umgang mit philosophischen Begriffen; dann um philosophische Argumentationstypen; und schließlich um die Technik der Textlektüre (Xantippe-Strick). Insgesamt will das Seminar in die Lage versetzen, einen philosophischen Text angemessen zu rekonstruieren und zu diskutieren. Das Resultat sind jeweils Analysebogen, auf denen die wichtigsten Techniken und Regeln des ethisch-philosophischen Argumentierens durch schulgerechte Beispiele veranschaulicht zusammengefasst sind. Das Seminar findet eine Fortsetzung im SS 24 zu Argumentationsfiguren der Angewandten Ethik. Beide Seminare sind eine Vorbereitung für weiterführende Seminare in der zweiten Phase des Bachelor-Studiums und des Master-Studiums. Obgleich die beiden Seminare aufeinander aufbauen, können sie auch getrennt besucht werden.
Der Besuch des anschließenden Seminars im SS zu speziellen Argumentformen der Angewandten Ethik wird empfohlen, ist aber keine Bedingung. Beide Seminare sind eine Vorbereitung für weiterführende Seminare in der zweiten Phase des Bachelor-Studiums und des Master-Studiums. Obgleich die beiden Seminare im WS 24/25 und im SS 25 aufeinander aufbauen, können sie auch getrennt besucht werden. Feindschaft gegen Jüdinnen und Juden scheint einer der wenigen Konstanten der Geschichte zu sein. Wir werden uns in diesem Seminar die Entwicklung dieses Phänomens über die Jahrhunderte anschauen. Dabei werden wir unter anderem den Fragen nachgehen, ob Antisemitismus ein Rassismus wie jeder andere ist, warum biologisch begründete Judenfeindschaft keine Erfindung der Nazis ist und warum Judenfeindschaft sogar in Gesellschaften funktioniert, in der keine Juden leben.

An Lobpreisungen der Liebe kommt man nicht schwer, sowohl in der Philosophie als auch außerhalb. Doch was ist damit gemeint? Ein Gefühl? Ein Verhältnis? Eine Tätigkeit? Gibt es eine oder mehrere Grundformen der Liebe (romantische, freundschaftliche, Nächstenliebe) oder geht Liebe ganz in den historisch-kulturellen Formen ihrer Variation auf?
Diesen und anderen Fragen wollen wir uns anhand der Lektüre klassischer Texte über Liebe und Freundschaft aus der Tradition widmen.

Leben in Krisenzeiten - Zwischen dem Rückzug ins Private und gesellschaftlicher Verantwortung

Angesichts der vielfältigen und langwierigen Krisen auf nationaler und globaler Ebene kann man leicht verzweifeln und sich resigniert zurückziehen mit den fatalistischen Gedanken: "Es bringt doch eh nichts. Was kann ich schon tun?" Gerade Lehrkräfte sind mit vielen Herausforderungen konfrontiert und stehen in besonderer Verantwortung für jüngere Generationen. Zugleich gibt es das Bewusstsein dafür, Selbstsorge zu betreiben, um Kraft zu haben für die eigenen Bedürfnisse und die von anderern. Was gibt Menschen Kraft und Hoffnung angesichts von Unsicherheit und Krisen? Was heißt ein gelungenes Leben heute? Ist es moralisch gerechtfertigt, im Kampf gegen Ungerechtigkeit und Pessismismus in rechtlichen Graubereichen zu agieren? Im Zentrum stehen Fragen nach Zusammenhängen zwischen Glück und Moral, nach dem Zusammendenken von Eigenwohl und Gemeinwohl und nach einer möglichen Bürgerpflicht zum Protest.

Das religionskundliche Blockseminar setzt sich mit der Frage auseinander, welche religiösen Praktiken und Deutungen gsmuster Menschen in Krisen handlungsfähig machen. Dazu gehören Hoffnungserzählungen, Formen des Copings, Rituale, Vorstellungen von Sinn im Leiden, Gemeinschaftsbezüge und ethische Verpflichtungen gegenüber anderen. Religionen können gerade dort wirksam werden, wo Hoffnung sprachlich oder philosophisch abstrakt bleibt. Wir werden uns exemplarisch den Umgang mit Leid, Krisen und der Ungewissheit der Zukunft in ausgewählten Traditionen erschließen.

Bitte beachten Sie, dass die ganztägige Teilnahme an den Blockseminaren für das Bestehen verbindlich ist.

Die drei zugeordneten Veranstaltungen finden wie folgt statt:

Blockseminar Religionswissenschaft: Freitag, der 30. Oktober, 9-16 Uhr und Freitag, der 27. November, 10-17 Uhr (Raum 8.0.59)

Blockseminar Philosophie: Freitag, der 4. + Samstag, der 5. Dezember, 10-17 Uhr (Raum 9.1.15)

Kommentar

Im Seminar werden Feste und Feiern als soziale Praktiken untersuchen, in denen Zugehörigkeiten hergestellt, Werte vermittelt und gesellschaftliche Ordnungen sichtbar werden. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein vergleichender religionswissenschaftlicher Zugang zu religiösen Festkulturen – etwa Weihnachten, Ramadan oder Pessach – und säkularen Anlässen wie Geburtstagen, Hochzeiten, Jugendfeiern oder staatlichen Gedenktagen.

Ausgehend von theoretischen Perspektiven auf Ritual, Performanz, Materialität, Emotion und Gemeinschaft wird gefragt: Was macht ein Ereignis zu einem Fest? Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele werden wir analysieren, welche Rollen Räume, Dinge, Essen, Kleidung, Musik und Medien spielen? Und wie verändern Kommerzialisierung, Migration, Digitalisierung oder gesellschaftliche Pluralisierung gegenwärtige Festkulturen?

Das Seminar vermittelt dabei grundlegende Begriffe und Methoden der religionswissenschaftlichen Ritual- und Kulturforschung und erprobt diese an konkreten Quellen, Bildern, Objekten und medialen Darstellungen.

Lernziele sind, Feste und Feiern als kulturell und historisch situierte Praktiken zu beschreiben, religiöse und säkulare Festformen vergleichend zu analysieren sowie deren soziale, politische und mediale Bedeutungen kritisch zu reflektieren.

Kommentar

Die religiöse Welt des Mittleren Ostens ist nicht nur durch den Islam sowie jüdische und christliche Minderheiten geprägt, sondern auch durch eine Reihe weiterer Religionsgemeinschaften. Diese unterscheiden sich von den vorhergehenden dadurch, dass sie sich meist einer die zuvor genannten Religionen auszeichnenden Eindeutigkeit entziehen, da sie oftmals weder über ein klar definiertes Glaubenssystem, eine Orthodoxie oder über einen Kanon von Schriften verfügen. Darüber hinaus besteht unter ihnen selbst zuweilen Uneinigkeit, ob Sie als Teil einer größeren Religion oder als eigenständige Gemeinschaft aufzufassen sind. So gibt es sowohl unter den anatolischen Aleviten als auch unter den Yaresan (Ahl-e Haqq, Kaka'i) Strömungen, die sich als besonderer Teil des Islam ansehen, wogegen andere sich als unabhängige Religionsgemeinschaft definieren. Andere Religionen, wie etwa die Jesiden oder die Mandäer, sind zwar nicht zuletzt aufgrund ihres Selbstverständnisses eindeutig als eigenständige Religionen abgrenzbar, weisen aber Einflüsse und Wechselbeziehungen zu anderen Religionsgemeinschaften auf. Die „kleineren Religionsgemeinschaften" erfordern auch insofern eine verstärkte Aufmerksamkeit, als zahlreiche ihrer Angehörigen aufgrund von äußerem Druck und Verfolgungen in ihren Heimatländern als Migranten nach Europa gekommen sind und hier mittlerweile aktive Diasporagemeinden bilden. Im Seminar sollen einige zentrale Rituale und Orte von Anatolischen Aleviten, Yaresan, Drusen, Jesiden, Mandäern, Zoroastriern, Nusairis (Syrische Alawiten) und Baha'i untersucht und der Frage nachgegangen werden, inwieweit sich äußere und gegenseitige Einflüsse bei ihnen erkennen lassen.

Nach Bentham ist eine Handlung moralisch wertvoll bzw. moralisch gefordert, wenn sie die "innewohnende Tendenz" hat, "das Glück der Gemeinschaft" zu befördern. Was aber ist "das Glück" und wer gehört jeweils zu "der Gemeinschaft", dessen Glück befordert werden soll? Welches individuelle Leid darf zur Beförderung des gemeinschaftlichen Glücks in Kauf genommen werden? Und gibt es Handlungen, die man trotz großen Vorteilen für die Gemeinschaft auf keinen Fall tun darf? Weil solche Fragen im Utilitarismus von Beginn an diskutiert wurden, ist der Utilitarismus von Beginn an ein work in progress. Das Buch Utilitarianism von John Stuart Mill wird im Seminar ganz gelesen. Zum Präferenzutilitarismus von Peter Singer werden einige Kapitel aus der 3. Auflage seiner "Pratical Ethics" gelesen. Das wird ergänzt durch die Lektüre einiger anderer klassischer Texte zum Utilitarismus.

Angesichts der vielfältigen und langwierigen Krisen auf nationaler und globaler Ebene kann man leicht verzweifeln und sich resigniert zurückziehen mit den fatalistischen Gedanken: "Es bringt doch eh nichts. Was kann ich schon tun?" Gerade Lehrkräfte sind mit vielen Herausforderungen konfrontiert und stehen in besonderer Verantwortung für jüngere Generationen. Zugleich gibt es das Bewusstsein dafür, Selbstsorge zu betreiben, um Kraft zu haben für die eigenen Bedürfnisse und die von anderern. Was gibt Menschen Kraft und Hoffnung angesichts von Unsicherheit und Krisen? Was heißt ein gelungenes Leben heute? Ist es moralisch gerechtfertigt, im Kampf gegen Ungerechtigkeit und Pessismismus in rechtlichen Graubereichen zu agieren? Im Zentrum stehen Fragen nach Zusammenhängen zwischen Glück und Moral, nach dem Zusammendenken von Eigenwohl und Gemeinwohl und nach einer möglichen Bürgerpflicht zum Protest.

Das ethische Blockseminar wird nach der Radio-Methode gestaltet. Das materiale Ziel ist ein fiktiver Radiobeitrag, der die im Seminar erarbeiteten Inhalte sowohl allgemein verständlich als auch unterhaltend (d.j. als Spielszene, als Kurzgeschichte, als Appel, als Schulprojekt z.B.) präsentiert. Details finden sich in Moodle. Inhaltlich wird es um zivilen Ungehorsam gehen - mit einschlägigen philosophischen Texten, aber auch mit aktuellen Beispielen wie die Praxis des Containerns, den Klima-Klebern oder die Besetzung des Hambacher Forsts.

Das religionskundliche Blockseminar setzt sich mit der Frage auseinander, welche religiösen Praktiken und Deutungen gsmuster Menschen in Krisen handlungsfähig machen. Dazu gehören Hoffnungserzählungen, Formen des Copings, Rituale, Vorstellungen von Sinn im Leiden, Gemeinschaftsbezüge und ethische Verpflichtungen gegenüber anderen. Religionen können gerade dort wirksam werden, wo Hoffnung sprachlich oder philosophisch abstrakt bleibt. Wir werden uns exemplarisch den Umgang mit Leid, Krisen und der Ungewissheit der Zukunft in ausgewählten Traditionen erschließen.

Im fachdidaktischen Seminar werden selbstgesteuerte Lernszenarien zum Thema konzipiert, wobei der eigene Lernprozess durch die Gestaltung eines Snapbooks nachvollziehbar gemacht wird.

Bitte beachten Sie, dass die ganztägige Teilnahme an den Blockseminaren für das Bestehen verbindlich ist.

Die drei zugeordneten Veranstaltungen finden wie folgt statt:

Blockseminar Religionswissenschaft: Freitag, der 30. Oktober, 9-16 Uhr und Freitag, der 27. November, 10-17 Uhr (Raum 8.0.59)

Blockseminar Philosophie: Freitag, der 4. + Samstag, der 5. Dezember, 10-17 Uhr (Raum 9.1.15)

Das Seminar widmet sich dem Einsatz von Spielen im LER-Unterricht im Sinne von Gamifikation und stellt sich dem Anspruch, dafür Denkanstöße zu erarbeiten.

Der Vielfalt spielerische Elemente und Einsatzmöglichkeiten sind dabei zunächst keine Grenzen gesetzt. So werden im Seminar analoge Spiele, Rollenspiele, Serious Games als auch digitale bzw. Videospiele auf ihr Potential für LER befragt, Einsatzmöglichkeiten diskutiert und Grenzen abgesteckt.

Die Modulprüfung besteht aus einem Essay (von 6.000 bis 8.000 Zeichen inkl. Leerzeichen/ca. 5-6 Seiten, 1 LP). Je nach Studienordnung wird dieser Essay mit einer Note (LER_MA_005) bewertet bzw. ist Voraussetzung für das erfolgreiche Abschließen des Seminars (LER_MA_002). Inhalt des Essays ist die Entwicklung und/oder Diskussion eines ”Denkanstoß” für den LER-Unterricht. Dies wird im Seminar näher erläutert. Für den Abschluss des Moduls LER_MA_002 (Prüfungsversion ab StO 2022) ist eine Modulprüfung erforderlich, die in der Entwicklung einer Unterrichtsidee unter der Perspektive von Philosophie und Religionswissenschaft besteht, die zusammen einen Umfang von ca. 27.000 Zeichen (ca. 15 Seiten) umfasst, 3 LP. Das Seminar erkundet die Religionslandschaft in der Stadt Potsdam und im Land Brandenburg. Bei einer Erhebung 2018 wurden in Potsdam 72 Religionsgruppen gezählt und beschrieben. Welche der Gruppen gibt es heute nicht mehr und warum?
Das Seminar bietet einen Überblick über christliche Konfessionen, muslimische und jüdische Richtungen und kleine Gruppen. Neben klassischen Gemeinden werden wir auch andere Sozialformen kennenlernen: Studios, Logen, Bewegungen.

Nach Bentham ist eine Handlung moralisch wertvoll bzw. moralisch gefordert, wenn sie die "innewohnende Tendenz" hat, "das Glück der Gemeinschaft" zu befördern. Was aber ist "das Glück" und wer gehört jeweils zu "der Gemeinschaft", dessen Glück befordert werden soll? Welches individuelle Leid darf zur Beförderung des gemeinschaftlichen Glücks in Kauf genommen werden? Und gibt es Handlungen, die man trotz großen Vorteilen für die Gemeinschaft auf keinen Fall tun darf? Weil solche Fragen im Utilitarismus von Beginn an diskutiert wurden, ist der Utilitarismus von Beginn an ein work in progress. Das Buch Utilitarianism von John Stuart Mill wird im Seminar ganz gelesen. Zum Präferenzutilitarismus von Peter Singer werden einige Kapitel aus der 3. Auflage seiner "Pratical Ethics" gelesen. Das wird ergänzt durch die Lektüre einiger anderer klassischer Texte zum Utilitarismus.

1	S	Do	10:00 - 12:00	wöch.	1.11.1.25	15.10.2026	Jenny Vorpahl

Kommentar

Im Seminar werden Feste und Feiern als soziale Praktiken untersuchen, in denen Zugehörigkeiten hergestellt, Werte vermittelt und gesellschaftliche Ordnungen sichtbar werden. Im Mittelpunkt steht ein vergleichender religionswissenschaftlicher Zugang zu religiösen Festkulturen – etwa Weihnachten, Ramadan oder Pessach – und säkularen Anlässen wie Geburtstagen, Hochzeiten, Jugendfeiern oder staatlichen Gedenktagen.

Ausgehend von theoretischen Perspektiven auf Ritual, Performanz, Materialität, Emotion und Gemeinschaft wird gefragt: Was macht ein Ereignis zu einem Fest? Anhand ausgewählter Fallbeispiele werden wir analysieren, welche Rollen Räume, Dinge, Essen, Kleidung, Musik und Medien spielen? Und wie verändern Kommerzialisierung, Migration, Digitalisierung oder gesellschaftliche Pluralisierung gegenwärtige Festkulturen?

Das Seminar vermittelt dabei grundlegende Begriffe und Methoden der religionswissenschaftlichen Ritual- und Kulturforschung und erprobt diese an konkreten Quellen, Bildern, Objekten und medialen Darstellungen.

Lernziele sind, Feste und Feiern als kulturell und historisch situierte Praktiken zu beschreiben, religiöse und säkulare Festformen vergleichend zu analysieren sowie deren soziale, politische und mediale Bedeutungen kritisch zu reflektieren.

Kommentar

Die religiöse Welt des Mittleren Ostens ist nicht nur durch den Islam sowie jüdische und christliche Minderheiten geprägt, sondern auch durch eine Reihe weiterer Religionsgemeinschaften. Diese unterscheiden sich von den vorhergehenden dadurch, dass sie sich meist einer die zuvor genannten Religionen auszeichnenden Eindeutigkeit entziehen, da sie oftmals weder über ein klar definiertes Glaubenssystem, eine Orthodoxie oder über einen Kanon von Schriften verfügen. Darüber hinaus besteht unter ihnen selbst zuweilen Uneinigkeit, ob Sie als Teil einer größeren Religion oder als eigenständige Gemeinschaft aufzufassen sind. So gibt es sowohl unter den anatolischen Aleviten als auch unter den Yaresan (Ahl-e Haqq, Kaka'i) Strömungen, die sich als besonderer Teil des Islam ansehen, wogegen andere sich als unabhängige Religionsgemeinschaft definieren. Andere Religionen, wie etwa die Jesiden oder die Mandäer, sind zwar nicht zuletzt aufgrund ihres Selbstverständnisses eindeutig als eigenständige Religionen abgrenzbar, weisen aber Einflüsse und Wechselbeziehungen zu anderen Religionsgemeinschaften auf. Die „kleineren Religionsgemeinschaften" erfordern auch insofern eine verstärkte Aufmerksamkeit, als zahlreiche ihrer Angehörigen aufgrund von äußerem Druck und Verfolgungen in ihren Heimatländern als Migranten nach Europa gekommen sind und hier mittlerweile aktive Diasporagemeinden bilden. Im Seminar sollen einige zentrale Rituale und Orte von Anatolischen Aleviten, Yaresan, Drusen, Jesiden, Mandäern, Zoroastriern, Nusairis (Syrische Alawiten) und Baha'i untersucht und der Frage nachgegangen werden, inwieweit sich äußere und gegenseitige Einflüsse bei ihnen erkennen lassen.

Um verlässliche Aussagen über die Bildungsstruktur einer Bevölkerung, den individuellen Bildungserwerb sowie die Besonderheit der nationalen Bildungsorganisationen in einem internationalen Kontext tätigen zu können, ist es sinnvoll langfristige Entwicklungen und Zusammenhänge jenseits parteipolitischer Äußerungen, die immer wieder in aufgeregter Form in 4-jahres Abschnitten geäußert werden, zu erfassen. Diese langfristige Entwicklung wird in den Bildungswissenschaften durch die Analyse der Bildungsstruktur einer Gesellschaft vorgenommen. Mit ihrer Hilfe werden Informationen zur Verfügung gestellt, die der Entwicklung bildungspolitischer Programme sowie der Verfassung rechtsstaatlich fundierter Gesetze dienen. Die rationale Evaluation des Bildungserwerbs vom Kinde bis zum jungen Erwachsenen und der Organisation des Bildungssystems setzt solide Informationen über die Wirkung von Bildungsinstitutionen, die Handlungen von Eltern und die soziale Lage bestimmter gesellschaftlicher Zielgruppen voraus. Solche Informationen werden durch Analysen der Bildungsstruktur gewonnen und durch das System von Bildungsindikatoren zur Verfügung gestellt.
Die Vermittlung derartiger Kenntnisse ist Ziel dieser Veranstaltung. Die Veranstaltung ist als Überblicksvorlesung organisiert und am Ende der Veranstaltung wird als Leistungserfassungsprozess eine Klausur angeboten. Die Gestaltung des Bildungssystems beruht auf (1) Notwendigkeiten des Arbeitsmarktes, (2) nationalen und (3) supranationalen Vorstellungen von Gerechtigkeit, (4) familialen Vorstellungen von Leistung, Meritokratie und auch Distinktion. Zwischen diesen vier Grundpfeilern setzt sich in Aushandlungsprozessen die Organisation des Bildungssystems durch. Moderne Begriffe, wie z.B. Gerechtigkeit, Inklusion, Diversität, Heterogenität, Struktur oder auch „struktureller Rassismus" lassen sich dadurch herleiten und auch begründen. Das Seminar zeigt anhand von Beispielen und theoretischen Zugängen ein sachlich argumentatives Verständnis von Bildung und Bildungssystemen auf.

Im Seminar können die Teilnehmerinnen und Teilnehmer sich anhand einschlägiger Forschungsliteratur einen differenzierten Überblick über die wichtigsten schulischen und außerschulischen Erziehungsverhältnisse im Nationalsozialismus zwischen totalem Anspruch und Erziehungswirklichkeit erarbeiten. Gleichzeitig erhalten die aktiv Teilnehmenden einen Einblick in zentrale Quellenbestände zum Thema, um sich selbstständig mit Einzelfragen auseinandersetzen zu können.

Hierzu behandeln wir wissenschaftstheoretische Positionen, den Forschungsprozess, Forschungsdesigns, Methoden und Verfahren zur Datenerhebung, Forschungsstandards sowie die Kommunikation von Studienergebnissen. Zur Veranschaulichung von Konzepten und Methoden werden ausgewählte empirische Forschungsarbeiten kritisch analysiert und wichtige Studien aus der Bildungsforschung sowie Instrumente zur Qualitätssicherung im Bildungswesen beispielhaft besprochen. Die Veranstaltung richtet sich an Studierende in Erziehungswissenschaft (5 LP) sowie im Lehramt in den Modulen BM-BA-S4 (3 LP) und M4 (2 LP). Die Vorlesung/Übung wird im flipped-classroom Format angeboten. Die Teilnehmer:innen bearbeiten hierzu im Vorfeld die Vorlesungsfolien (mit Audiokommentar) und Übungsaufgaben. An den Vorlesungsterminen werden dann Fragen zur Vorlesung und den Übungsaufgaben zu einem bestimmten Thema geklärt bzw. es besteht Raum die Inhalte zu diskutieren.
Der Vorlesungstermin am Montag findet in Präsenz statt. Das Moodle-Passwort wird bei der Zulassung zur Veranstaltung mitgeteilt.

Das Seminar führt in die Grundlagen der Datenaufbereitung, -auswertung, -interpretation und -kommunikation ein. Statistische Verfahren und Konzepte besprechen wir anhand von Beispielen aus der empirischen Bildungsforschung und mittels kleiner Simulationen. Zur Datenanalyse verwenden wir das frei verfügbare Statistikprogramm R. Es werden keine Vorkenntnisse im Umgang mit diesem Computerprogramm vorausgesetzt. Es ist sehr empfehlenswert, wenn die Vorlesungen „Einführung in die Methoden der empirischen Bildungsforschung" und „Einführung in die Statistik" mit Erfolg besucht wurden.

In diesem Seminar erarbeiten wir gemeinsam, wie rassistische und antisemitische Wissensbestände in der Bildungsarbeit aufgearbeitet werden können. Dabei setzen wir uns intensiv mit den spezifischen Ausprägungen von Rassismus in Deutschland (wie Anti-Schwarzer Rassismus, Rassismus gegen Sinti und Roma, Antimuslimischer Rassismus, Antiasiatischer Rassismus, Antisemitismus und Antislawischer Rassismus) auseinander und gehen der Frage nach, warum Rassismus eng mit anderen Formen und Strukturen sozialer Ungleichheit verflochten ist.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit den Potentialen und Herausforderungen von Kindheit und Jugend im Kontext digitaler Transformation. Im Zentrum stehen Fragen nach veränderten Bildungs- und Sozialisationsprozessen im digitalen Raum. Wie prägen digitale Medien das Aufwachsen? Welche Problemlagen und Gefährdungen entstehen - etwa in Hinblick auf soziale Teilhabe, psychische Gesundheit oder demokratische Einstellungen und Verhaltensweisen? Und wie kann Bildung - schulisch wie außerschulisch - auf diese Entwicklungen reagieren? Anhand aktueller Studien, Theorien und Fallbeispiele reflektieren die Studierenden die Rolle von Pädagog:innen im digitalen Zeitalter. Ziel ist es, differenzierte pädagogische Handlungsoptionen im Spannungsfeld zwischen Empowerment und Kontrolle zu entwickeln.

Das Seminar beschäftigt sich mit den Gelingensbedingungen für Demokratiebildung im Kontext schulischer Heterogenität. Im Zentrum stehen Fragen nach gerechter Teilhabe aller Schüler:innen - unabhängig von Geschlecht, Herkunft, Sprache, Behinderung oder sozialem Status. Wie lassen sich politische Themen für unterschiedliche Lernende zugänglich machen? Welche didaktischen Ansätze fördern politische Bildung in inklusiven und vielfältigen Klassenzimmern? Und wie können insbesondere marginalisierte Schüler:innen für politische Partizipation gewonnen werden? Anhand aktueller Studien, Theorien und Fallbeispiele reflektieren die Studierenden die Rolle von Lehrkräften in heterogenen Lerngruppen. Ziel ist es, differenzierte Handlungskonzepte für eine inklusive Demokratiepädagogik zu entwickeln.

Kommentar

Das Seminar gliedert sich in drei Teile:
Im ersten Teil („Denken") untersuchen wir typische kognitive Biases und Fallstricke des moralischen Denkens sowie die logische Form moralischer Argumente.
Im zweiten Teil („Streiten") geht es um produktiven Dissens: Wie können wir auch bei grundlegenden Meinungsverschiedenheiten konstruktiv diskutieren? Dabei erproben wir Strategien des produktiven Dissenses in der Diskussion sowohl kontroverser Themen (z. B. Schwangerschaftsabbrüche, Meinungsfreiheit vs. Cancel culture, sowie Themen aus der Tier- und Umweltethik) als auch ausgewählter „Hot Takes" (provokante oder überraschende Thesen, z. B. dass Ghosting je nach Kontext moralisch zulässig oder sogar geboten sein kann, oder dass angehende Eltern eine Lizenz benötigen sollten).
Im dritten Teil („Handeln") richtet sich der Blick auf die praktische Umsetzung: Wie können wir mit unseren Entscheidungen verantwortungsvoll umgehen und möglichst effektiv Gutes tun? Dabei betrachten wir unter anderem auch die Rolle der eigenen Berufswahl.

An Lobpreisungen der Liebe kommt man nicht schwer, sowohl in der Philosophie als auch außerhalb. Doch was ist damit gemeint? Ein Gefühl? Ein Verhältnis? Eine Tätigkeit? Gibt es eine oder mehrere Grundformen der Liebe (romantische, freundschaftliche, Nächstenliebe) oder geht Liebe ganz in den historisch-kulturellen Formen ihrer Variation auf?
Diesen und anderen Fragen wollen wir uns anhand der Lektüre klassischer Texte über Liebe und Freundschaft aus der Tradition widmen.

	Tutor: Jonathan Dési

Kommentar

Das Tutorium behandelt Walter Benjamins Aufsatz Zur Kritik der Gewalt sowie die vielseitige Rezeption dieses Textes. Ziel des Tutoriums ist es dabei, anhand der Auseinandersetzung mit den Themen Recht und Gewalt nicht nur in das Denken Benjamins, sondern auch in das wissenschaftliche Arbeiten mit philosophischen Texten einzuführen. Benjamins zum Jahreswechsel 1920/21 verfasste Aufsatz entwickelt eine radikale Kritik am Recht und der mit ihm verknüpften Gewalt. Während das Recht, so Benjamin, stets Gewaltverhältnisse produziert und reproduziert, können sogenannte „reine Mittel", zu denen Benjamin den proletarischen Generalstreik ebenso wie die Diplomatie zählt, einen Ausweg aus den Problemen des Rechts weisen. Ebenso versucht Benjamin eine außerhalb des Rechts stehende Gewalt zu denken, die er als „göttliche Gewalt" bezeichnet. Im Tutorium wollen wir Licht in das Dunkel dieser auf den ersten Blick eigenwilligen Begriffe bringen. Ausgangspunkt des Tutoriums ist der Gewaltaufsatz und umliegende Texte und Fragmente von Benjamin. Wir wollen gemeinsam ein Verständnis davon erarbeiten, was Benjamin am Recht auszusetzen hat und wie er es überwinden möchte. In der zweiten Hälfte des Semesters geht es um die Rezeption des Textes und wir diskutieren Texte von Giorgio Agamben, Jacques Derrida, Bettine Menke und anderen. Wie schreiben diese Autor*innen über Benjamin? Und wie gehen sie mit den Schwierigkeiten um, die dieser Text aufwirft? Anhand der Arbeit mit Benjamins Gewaltaufsatz soll das Tutorium grundlegende Fähigkeiten des wissenschaftlichen Arbeitens und Schreibens vermitteln. Wie bearbeitet man schreibend schwer zugängliche Texte wie diejenigen Benjamins? Wie findet man eine Fragestellung für eine Hausarbeit, und was sind die Vorgaben und Erfordernisse, die man beim Schreiben einer Hausarbeit beachten muss? Wo findet man die richtige Literatur? Wie zitiert und interpretiert man korrekt? Neben der inhaltlichen Auseinandersetzung mit Benjamins Rechtskritik werden wir im Tutorium ausreichend Zeit für die Beantwortung dieser Fragen haben. Ziel ist die schriftliche Konzeption einer Hausarbeit, die sich mit einer im Tutorium entwickelten Problemstellung auseinandersetzt.

Kommentar

Das Seminar gliedert sich in drei Teile:
Im ersten Teil („Denken") untersuchen wir typische kognitive Biases und Fallstricke des moralischen Denkens sowie die logische Form moralischer Argumente.
Im zweiten Teil („Streiten") geht es um produktiven Dissens: Wie können wir auch bei grundlegenden Meinungsverschiedenheiten konstruktiv diskutieren? Dabei erproben wir Strategien des produktiven Dissenses in der Diskussion sowohl kontroverser Themen (z. B. Schwangerschaftsabbrüche, Meinungsfreiheit vs. Cancel culture, sowie Themen aus der Tier- und Umweltethik) als auch ausgewählter „Hot Takes" (provokante oder überraschende Thesen, z. B. dass Ghosting je nach Kontext moralisch zulässig oder sogar geboten sein kann, oder dass angehende Eltern eine Lizenz benötigen sollten).
Im dritten Teil („Handeln") richtet sich der Blick auf die praktische Umsetzung: Wie können wir mit unseren Entscheidungen verantwortungsvoll umgehen und möglichst effektiv Gutes tun? Dabei betrachten wir unter anderem auch die Rolle der eigenen Berufswahl.

"Wenn ich mit Menschen- und mit Engelzungen redete und hätte der Liebe nicht, ..."
An Lobpreisungen der Liebe kommt man nicht schwer, sowohl in der Philosophie als auch außerhalb. Doch was ist damit gemeint? Ein Gefühl? Ein Verhältnis? Eine Tätigkeit? Gibt es eine oder mehrere Grundformen der Liebe (romantische, freundschaftliche, Nächstenliebe) oder geht Liebe ganz in den historisch-kulturellen Formen ihrer Variation auf?
Diesen und anderen Fragen wollen wir uns anhand der Lektüre klassischer Texte über Liebe und Freundschaft aus der Tradition widmen.

Kommentar

In this seminar we will explore the somewhat related topics of monism and pantheism in early modern philosophy. These are two metaphysical doctrines which have not been particularly popular among professional philosophers after the first decades of the 20th century, at least in the analytic tradition. Monism can mean that there is only one existing thing, or that there is only one fundamental thing, so that the more familiar objects of everyday experience and the sciences are either illusions or less real than and dependent on the world as a whole.
Pantheism is the view that God is not distinct from the world.
We will focus on the famous early modern monist Spinoza and the lesser known female philosopher who deserves to be known better and is receiving some scholarly attention these days, Anne Conway. For the broader context, we will also look at selections from the philosophers with whom Conway's and Spinoza's work engaged, such as Descartes and Hobbes.

Kommentar

Im Seminar beschäftigen wir uns mit der Frage, wie Wissen und Macht zusammenhängen. Ausgangspunkt ist die Theorie epistemischer Ungerechtigkeit von Miranda Fricker, die zeigt, wie Menschen in ihrer Rolle als Wissende benachteiligt werden können.
Ziel ist es, ein besseres Verständnis dafür zu entwickeln, wie Wissen in gesellschaftlichen Prozessen entsteht und bewertet wird und welche Rolle dabei soziale Ungleichheiten spielen.
Zur Vorbereitung findet in Woche 45 (02.–06.11.2026) eine Zoom-Vorbesprechung statt. Es werden drei Termine zur Auswahl angeboten: Montag, 02.11.2026, 18:30–19:00 Uhr; Mittwoch, 04.11.2026, 19:00–19:30 Uhr; Freitag, 06.11.2026, 18:30–19:00 Uhr. Die Zoom-Links werden auf Moodle verfügbar sein.

Kommentar

Inhalt : Am Lebensanfang tauchen ebenso drängende moralische Fragen auf wie am Lebensende. Ab wann ist eine befruchtete Eizelle etwas, das man nicht töten darf? Ist eine befruchtete Eizelle ein werdender Mensch, dessen Würde zu respektieren ist, oder handelt es sich nur um einen Zellhaufen? Die Frage ist ein LER-Thema, weil sie viele lebensweltliche Bezüge hat. Sie stellt sich, wenn es um Abtreibung geht. Sie stellt sich auch im Kontext von Stammzellenforschung oder angesichts der neuen technischen Möglichkeiten von künstlicher Befruchtung und vorgeburtlicher Untersuchung (PID). Darf man an menschlichen Embryonen forschen, und wenn ja, bis zu welchem Zeitpunkt? Das Seminar behandelt den Status menschlicher Embryonen als LER-Thema.

Weil das Seminar auf das eigenständige Erstellen von Lehreinheiten in der Schulpraxis vorbereiten soll, hat es einen methodischen Schwerpunkt. Am Beispiel der Frage nach dem moralischen Status von Embryonen soll der Umgang mit ethischen Texten gelernt werden. Der Vorbereitung auf die Schulpraxis dienen außerdem die aktive Gestaltung einer Sitzung und das Erstellen von Arbeitsblättern (s.u. Leistungsanforderung). Das Seminar ist nach dem fachdidaktischen Bonbon-Modell aufgebaut, so dass auch andere LER-Perspektiven einbezogen werden können, wobei die E-Dimension dominiert.

Voraussetzung

Leistungsnachweis

Leistungsanforderung : Erwartet wird regelmäßige Mitarbeit und Textlektüre sowie die Erstellung von Arbeitsblättern für fiktive SchülerInnen zu den Sitzungstexten. Zur ersten und zur letzten Sitzung müssen keine Arbeitsblätter erstellt werden. Die einzelnen Arbeitsblätter (ca. 1 Seite; s.u.) dienen der Vorbereitung für die Sitzungen. Sie sollen jeweils zu den Sitzungen (gern auch auf dem Computer) mitgebracht und außerdem vor jeder Sitzung in moodle eingestellt werden. Nachreichungen sind zweimal möglich. Wenn weniger als 80% der Arbeitsblätter vorliegen, gilt die Veranstaltung als nicht bestanden. Als Vorbereitung auf die schulische Praxis soll außerdem eine Sitzung (ggfs. in Kleingruppen) mit dem Arbeitsblatt gestaltet werden. Das Arbeitsblatt ist dafür der Seminargruppe im Vorfeld in moodle zugänglich zu machen.
Aufbau des Arbeitsblattes : 1. Knappe bibliographische Angaben (Autor, Titel, Veröffentlichungsjahr, Seiten). 2. Leitende Frage in einem Satz (ggfs. auch Anlass bzw. Kontext bzw. Gegner). 3. Zentrale Textpassage(n) (ca. 4 Zeilen) 4. Knappe Überschriften zu jedem einzelnen Absatz bzw. Kapitel des Textes (jeweils in einem Satz oder als Stichwörter) 5. Ca. drei eigene Nachfragen zu Thesen, Begründungen oder Begriffsbedeutungen.
Gestaltung der Sitzung mit dem Arbeitsblatt: Bitte halten Sie kein durchgehendes Referat, sondern erarbeiten Sie den Text mit der Seminargruppe. 1. Diskussion der zentralen Textpassage als Einstieg 2. Rekonstruktion des Textes, gegliedert nach einzelnen Absätzen bzw. Kapiteln. Bitte planen Sie nach jedem Absatz etwas Zeit für Verständnisfragen und Begriffsklärungen ein. 3. Kritische Nachfragen und Diskussion.

Nach Bentham ist eine Handlung moralisch wertvoll bzw. moralisch gefordert, wenn sie die "innewohnende Tendenz" hat, "das Glück der Gemeinschaft" zu befördern. Was aber ist "das Glück" und wer gehört jeweils zu "der Gemeinschaft", dessen Glück befordert werden soll? Welches individuelle Leid darf zur Beförderung des gemeinschaftlichen Glücks in Kauf genommen werden? Und gibt es Handlungen, die man trotz großen Vorteilen für die Gemeinschaft auf keinen Fall tun darf? Weil solche Fragen im Utilitarismus von Beginn an diskutiert wurden, ist der Utilitarismus von Beginn an ein work in progress. Das Buch Utilitarianism von John Stuart Mill wird im Seminar ganz gelesen. Zum Präferenzutilitarismus von Peter Singer werden einige Kapitel aus der 3. Auflage seiner "Pratical Ethics" gelesen. Das wird ergänzt durch die Lektüre einiger anderer klassischer Texte zum Utilitarismus.

Wir werden Werke von Philosoph*innen lesen, die sich mit der Kritik an Diskriminierung, Rassismus, Ableismus, Tierversuchen, Militarismus, Szientismus und dem Patriarchat auseinandersetzen. Wir werden untersuchen, wie diese Philosoph*innen die Wittgensteinsche Sprachkritik weiterentwickeln, um aufzudecken, wie Machtverhältnisse in unserer Sprache verankert sind. Kommentar

Wir schauen uns insbesondere testimoniale und hermeneutische Ungerechtigkeit an und diskutieren neuere Ansätze, etwa zu epistemischer Unterdrückung (Kristie Dotson), epistemischer Resistenz (José Medina) und epistemischer Ignoranz (u.a. bei Nancy Tuana und Charles W. Mills).
Ziel ist es, ein besseres Verständnis dafür zu entwickeln, wie Wissen in gesellschaftlichen Prozessen entsteht und bewertet wird und welche Rolle dabei soziale Ungleichheiten spielen.
Zur Vorbereitung findet in Woche 45 (02.–06.11.2026) eine Zoom-Vorbesprechung statt. Es werden drei Termine zur Auswahl angeboten: Montag, 02.11.2026, 18:30–19:00 Uhr; Mittwoch, 04.11.2026, 19:00–19:30 Uhr; Freitag, 06.11.2026, 18:30–19:00 Uhr. Die Zoom-Links werden auf Moodle verfügbar sein.

Kommentar

Das Seminar gliedert sich in drei Teile:
Im ersten Teil („Denken") untersuchen wir typische kognitive Biases und Fallstricke des moralischen Denkens sowie die logische Form moralischer Argumente.
Im zweiten Teil („Streiten") geht es um produktiven Dissens: Wie können wir auch bei grundlegenden Meinungsverschiedenheiten konstruktiv diskutieren? Dabei erproben wir Strategien des produktiven Dissenses in der Diskussion sowohl kontroverser Themen (z. B. Schwangerschaftsabbrüche, Meinungsfreiheit vs. Cancel culture, sowie Themen aus der Tier- und Umweltethik) als auch ausgewählter „Hot Takes" (provokante oder überraschende Thesen, z. B. dass Ghosting je nach Kontext moralisch zulässig oder sogar geboten sein kann, oder dass angehende Eltern eine Lizenz benötigen sollten).
Im dritten Teil („Handeln") richtet sich der Blick auf die praktische Umsetzung: Wie können wir mit unseren Entscheidungen verantwortungsvoll umgehen und möglichst effektiv Gutes tun? Dabei betrachten wir unter anderem auch die Rolle der eigenen Berufswahl.

This course introduces the linguistics sub-disciplines relating to pronunciation, i.e., phonetics and phonology. The mechanics of speech production, with a focus on the articulation of segments, is examined as well as how speech can be transcribed using the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA). Additionally, more abstract ways of understanding the structures of segments and syllables are introduced and some common phonological processes, demonstrated by examples from a variety of the world's languages, are explored and analysed. The language of instruction is English.

Die Vorlesung führt in die Grundlagen der Statistik ein. Hierzu behandeln wir zentrale Konzepte und Verfahren der deskriptiven Statistik, der Inferenzstatistik sowie Methoden zur Datenmodellierung (z. B. lineare Regression). In der Übung werden die Inhalte der Vorlesung wiederholt und durch die Bearbeitung von Übungsaufgaben gefestigt und vertieft. Die Vorlesung/Übung wird im flipped-classroom Format angeboten. Die Teilnehmer:innen bearbeiten hierzu im Vorfeld die Vorlesungsfolien (mit Audiokommentar) und Übungsaufgaben. An den Vorlesungsterminen werden dann Fragen zur Vorlesung und den Übungsaufgaben zu einem bestimmten Thema geklärt bzw. besteht Raum die Inhalte zu diskutieren.

Der Vorlesungstermin am Montag findet in Präsenz statt. Der Termin am Dienstag live via ZOOM. Die ZOOM-Einwahldaten werden ebenso wie das Moodle-Passwort bei der Zulassung zur Veranstaltung mitgeteilt.

Die Vorlesung führt in die Forschungsmethoden der empirischen Bildungsforschung ein. Ziel ist die Vermittlung von Grundlagen zentraler Konzepte und Methoden der empirischen Forschung. Hierzu behandeln wir wissenschaftstheoretische Positionen, den Forschungsprozess, Forschungsdesigns, Methoden und Verfahren zur Datenerhebung, Forschungsstandards sowie die Kommunikation von Studienergebnissen. Zur Veranschaulichung von Konzepten und Methoden werden ausgewählte empirische Forschungsarbeiten kritisch analysiert und wichtige Studien aus der Bildungsforschung sowie Instrumente zur Qualitätssicherung im Bildungswesen beispielhaft besprochen. Die Veranstaltung richtet sich an Studierende in Erziehungswissenschaft (5 LP) sowie im Lehramt in den Modulen BM-BA-S4 (3 LP) und M4 (2 LP). Die Vorlesung/Übung wird im flipped-classroom Format angeboten. Die Teilnehmer:innen bearbeiten hierzu im Vorfeld die Vorlesungsfolien (mit Audiokommentar) und Übungsaufgaben. Das Seminar führt in die Grundlagen der Datenaufbereitung, -auswertung, -interpretation und -kommunikation ein. Statistische Verfahren und Konzepte besprechen wir anhand von Beispielen aus der empirischen Bildungsforschung und mittels kleiner Simulationen. Zur Datenanalyse verwenden wir das frei verfügbare Statistikprogramm R. Es werden keine Vorkenntnisse im Umgang mit diesem Computerprogramm vorausgesetzt. Es ist sehr empfehlenswert, wenn die Vorlesungen „Einführung in die Methoden der empirischen Bildungsforschung" und „Einführung in die Statistik" mit Erfolg besucht wurden.

Um verlässliche Aussagen über die Bildungsstruktur einer Bevölkerung, den individuellen Bildungserwerb sowie die Besonderheit der nationalen Bildungsorganisationen in einem internationalen Kontext tätigen zu können, ist es sinnvoll langfristige Entwicklungen und Zusammenhänge jenseits parteipolitischer Äußerungen, die immer wieder in aufgeregter Form in 4-jahres Abschnitten geäußert werden, zu erfassen. Diese langfristige Entwicklung wird in den Bildungswissenschaften durch die Analyse der Bildungsstruktur einer Gesellschaft vorgenommen. Mit ihrer Hilfe werden Informationen zur Verfügung gestellt, die der Entwicklung bildungspolitischer Programme sowie der Verfassung rechtsstaatlich fundierter Gesetze dienen. Die rationale Evaluation des Bildungserwerbs vom Kinde bis zum jungen Erwachsenen und der Organisation des Bildungssystems setzt solide Informationen über die Wirkung von Bildungsinstitutionen, die Handlungen von Eltern und die soziale Lage bestimmter gesellschaftlicher Zielgruppen voraus. Solche Informationen werden durch Analysen der Bildungsstruktur gewonnen und durch das System von Bildungsindikatoren zur Verfügung gestellt.
Die Vermittlung derartiger Kenntnisse ist Ziel dieser Veranstaltung. Die Veranstaltung ist als Überblicksvorlesung organisiert und am Ende der Veranstaltung wird als Leistungserfassungsprozess eine Klausur angeboten. Die Gestaltung des Bildungssystems beruht auf (1) Notwendigkeiten des Arbeitsmarktes, (2) nationalen und (3) supranationalen Vorstellungen von Gerechtigkeit, (4) familialen Vorstellungen von Leistung, Meritokratie und auch Distinktion. Zwischen diesen vier Grundpfeilern setzt sich in Aushandlungsprozessen die Organisation des Bildungssystems durch. Moderne Begriffe, wie z.B. Gerechtigkeit, Inklusion, Diversität, Heterogenität, Struktur oder auch „struktureller Rassismus" lassen sich dadurch herleiten und auch begründen. Das Seminar zeigt anhand von Beispielen und theoretischen Zugängen ein sachlich argumentatives Verständnis von Bildung und Bildungssystemen auf.

Die moderne Wohlfahrtsstaatlichkeit beruht auf der Vorstellung, dass staatliche Maßnahmen zuvorderst das Wohlbefinden der Bürgerinnen und Bürger sichern und mehren soll. In diesem Seminar soll die Lebenszufriedenheit, die innerhalb des Wohlbefindens mit der Lebensqualität im Wechselspiel steht, in ihren zahlreichen Facetten beleuchtet werden. Dabei wird deutlich, wie sehr die Lebenszufriedenheit mit der Gesellschaftsstruktur und Faktoren der sozialen Ungleichheit zusammenhängt. Eingebettet in diesen Kontext werden außerdem ausgewählte Methoden der Lebensverlaufsforschung behandelt.

Kindheit, Jugend, mittleres Erwachsenenalter und Hochaltrigkeit: All diese Phasen stellen unterschiedliche Stationen im Lebenslauf einer Person dar, in denen sie mit ganz einzigartigen Möglichkeiten und Herausforderungen konfrontiert ist. Dabei verlaufen diese Phasen nicht nur chronologisch hintereinander, sondern die jeweiligen aktuellen Umstände stehen in (direktem) Zusammenhang mit vorher getätigten Entscheidungen und strukturellen Lebensumständen. Aus dieser Perspektive ist es notwendig bei der Betrachtung der Entstehung sozialer Ungleichheiten auch immer eine Lebenslaufperspektive anzuwenden. Ziel dieses Seminares soll es nun sein einen ersten Blick in die lebenslauforientierte und longitudinale Forschung zu werfen. Im Zentrum stehen dabei die Fragestellungen: „Welche Konzepte prägen lebenslauforientierte und longitudinale Forschung?", „Wie werden soziale Ungleichheiten im Lebenslauf (re-)produziert?" und „In welchen Bereichen sind diese Ungleichheiten sichtbar?".

Im Rahmen dieses Seminars wird das umfassende Thema der sozialen Ungleichheit durch gängige Theorien, aktuelle Literatur und empirische Untersuchungen beleuchtet, analysiert und konkretisiert (Sitzungen 1-3). Im Anschluss daran werden die Studierenden ermutigt, ein Praxisbeispiel eigenständig zu recherchieren, auszuarbeiten und vorzustellen. Dabei sollen sie sich auf Menschen, Orte, Projekte oder Organisationen konzentrieren, die sich aktiv mit verschiedenen Dimensionen sozialer Ungleichheit auseinandersetzen, wie zum Beispiel Bildung, Gesundheit oder Teilhabe in verschiedenen Kontexten. Die Darstellungsmöglichkeiten für die Präsentation sind dabei vielfältig und reichen von Filmen bis hin zu klassischen Präsentationen.

Kommentar

Dieses Seminar befasst sich mit Geschlecht (weiblich, männlich, trans*, inter*, nonbinäre Geschlechter) und Sexualität als zentrale Dimensionen von Heterogenität im Schulkontext. Aus einer queerfeministischen und dekonstruktivistischen Perspektive werden Theorien zu Schule und Unterricht kritisch reflektiert sowie Methoden zur Analyse von Privilegierungs- und Diskriminierungsstrukturen in Bildungsinstitutionen vermittelt. Die Studierenden setzen sich mit evidenzbasierten Kriterien für Schul- und Unterrichtsqualität auseinander und erwerben Kompetenzen zur Analyse von Lehr-Lern-Arrangements unter Berücksichtigung geschlechtlicher und sexueller Vielfalt. Das Seminar fördert die Fähigkeit, Befunde der empirischen Bildungsforschung zu verstehen, deren schulpraktische Bedeutung zu beurteilen und Ansätze zur Schulentwicklung abzuleiten, die sozialen Ungleichheiten entgegenwirken.

Die Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über institutionalisierte Bildungs- und Erziehungsprozesse in der Moderne. Mit exemplarischen Schwerpunktsetzungen innerhalb der Schulgeschichte werden pädagogische Praxen und Reformen in einzelnen bildungshistorischen Epochen (u.a. Aufklärung, Neuhumanismus, Reformpädagogik) behandelt und in Beziehung gesetzt zu Erziehungs- und Bildungstheorien.

Erziehung spielte für die Nationalsozialisten ihrem eigenen Anspruch nach eine zentrale Rolle. Durch eine allgegenwärtige Praxis ästhetisch-formativer Erziehung und Herrschaft zielten sie auf die Beherrschung von Wahrnehmungen und Bewusstsein der Menschen. Die Doppelgesichtigkeit des Dritten Reiches von schönem Schein und Gewalt sollte den total erfassten und verfügbaren ‚Volksgenossen' formen.

Im Seminar können die Teilnehmerinnen und Teilnehmer sich anhand einschlägiger Forschungsliteratur einen differenzierten Überblick über die wichtigsten schulischen und außerschulischen Erziehungsverhältnisse im Nationalsozialismus zwischen totalem Anspruch und Erziehungswirklichkeit erarbeiten. Gleichzeitig erhalten die aktiv Teilnehmenden einen Einblick in zentrale Quellenbestände zum Thema, um sich selbstständig mit Einzelfragen auseinandersetzen zu können.

Die Vorlesung bietet einen Überblick über die wichtigsten Teilbereiche der Volkswirtschaftslehre – Mikroökonomie, Makroökonomie und Wirtschaftspolitik.

Im ersten Teil werden die Grundkonzepte ökonomischen Entscheidungsverhaltens auf Mikroebene (Haushalte und Unternehmen) sowie wirtschaftspolitische Maßnahmen (Marktmacht, externe Effekte, öffentliche Güter) besprochen.

Im zweiten Teil stehen makroökonomische Konzepte (Wachstum, Arbeitslosigkeit, Inflation) sowie Konjunktur- und Verteilungspolitik (Geld- und Fiskalpolitik, Steuern, Sozialstaat) im Mittelpunkt.

Kommentar

Die Vorlesung „Mikroökonomik 1" und die parallel laufenden Übungen soll einen umfassenden Überblick über die grundlegenden Fragestellungen und Methoden der Mikroökonomik geben. Das Verhalten von Produzenten und Konsumenten auf Märkten wird ökonomisch begründet und theoretisch modelliert. Im ersten Teil der Vorlesung wird das Verhalten von Unternehmen untersucht, die ihre Produktionsentscheidungen nach den Produktionskosten und der Marktsituation auf den Absatzmärkten und den Faktormärkten treffen müssen. Die Studierenden lernen, Produktionsprozesse und Kostenfunktionen formal abzubilden und empirisch testbare Hypothesen abzuleiten. Außerdem lernen Sie die Grundlagen der Theorie des Haushalts und der Nutzenmaximierung kennen.Im zweiten Teil der Vorlesung werden die Kenntnisse vertieft. Die Studierenden erwerben die Fähigkeit, Präferenzen und das optimale Verhalten eines Haushalts in verschiedenen Rollen – etwa als Arbeitnehmerin, Nachfrager und Investorin – abstrakt darzustellen. Sie lernen verschiedene Marktsituationen (Wettbewerb, Monopol, Oligopol) kennen und erarbeiten (spiel-) theoretische Modelle, die das Verhalten in unterschiedlichen Märkten vorhersagen und erklären können. Anschließend werden die Modelle von Produzenten und Haushalten in der Theorie des allgemeinen Gleichgewichts zusammengeführt.

In dem Bachelor-Seminar werden wichtige o#konomische Probleme/Sachverhalte vorgestellt und diskutiert und darauf aufbauend sowohl eine Seminararbeit als auch ein mo#glicher Beitrag zu einem Kindersachbuch entwickelt. In einem ersten Schritt werden o#konomische Probleme und Sachverhalte, die sich auch Kindern gut erkla#ren lassen, identifiziert. Zu dem jeweiligen o#konomischen Problem halten Studierende einen Vortrag und stellen wichtige Erkenntnisse und Statistiken vor. In dem Vortrag wird das o#konomische Konzept unter Einbeziehung neuester wissenschaftlicher Studien vorgestellt und anhand von Beispielen diskutiert. Hierbei werden neben dem o#konomischen Problem/Sachverhalt auch mo#gliche neue o#konomische Wo#rter fu#r Kinder identifiziert, z.B. Ungleichheit, Armut, Arbeitslosigkeit, Diskriminierung, Allmende, Externalita#t, Verzerrung. Des weiteren werden wichtige Statistiken und Graphiken vorgestellt, anhand deren Infographiken und wichtige Informationen fu#r das Kindersachbuch entwickelt werden.

In einem zweiten Schritt verfassen die Studierenden ein Kindersachbuch in dem das o#konomische Problem anschaulich und spannend dargestellt und beschrieben wird. Studierende sollen sich hierbei fu#r das Format eines klassischen Kindersachbuchs entscheiden.

Kommentar

Organisationen bestimmen unser Leben wohl in einem viel größeren Maße als uns bewusst ist: Die meisten von uns sind in Krankenhäusern zur Welt gekommen, in einem Kindergarten gewesen und alle sind durch unterschiedliche Schulen gegangen, kaufen in Supermärkten ein, nutzen sog. Social Media und engagieren uns vielleicht in einem Verein, wählen eine Partei u.ä.m.

Ziel der Vorlesung ist es, Ihnen einen grundsätzlichen Einblick in die Bedeutung und Funktionsweise solcher und anderer Organisationen in der modernen Gesellschaft zu geben.

Zentrale Fragen sind: Was sind Organisationen? Welche Bedeutung haben sie für die moderne Gesellschaft? Worin unterscheiden sich Unternehmen, Verwaltungen, Schulen, Vereine und Parteien? Warum tun wir in Organisationen (Schulen, Universitäten, Unternehmen, Parteien) Dinge, die wir sonst nie tun würden? Wie kommt es zu den unzähligen Skandalen rund um Organisationen (Korruption, Fleischskandale, Umweltskandale …)? Und ist das Handeln in Organisationen manchmal trotzdem rationaler als außerhalb dieser?

Zentrale Begriffe, die in der Vorlesung und dem dazugehörigen seminar behandelt werden: Organisation, Gesellschaft, Gruppe, Netzwerk, Interaktion, Position, Rolle, Herrschaft, Macht, Hierarchie, Funktion, Formalität, Informalität, brauchbare Illegalität, Fassaden, Legitimität, Standardisierung.
