This course is specifically designed for and compulsory for students in the MA programme Anglophone Modernities in Literature and Culture in their first or second semesters. It is taught by a range of lecturers in literary and cultural studies, and will discuss texts which introduce the various meanings and implications of the term 'modernity' in Anglophone discourses.

Literatur

Reading assignments for the individual sessions will be made available on moodle by the beginning of the semester.

Following in the footsteps of Alexander von Humboldt, nineteenth-century German naturalists sought to explore and categorize the world. To them, the Australian continent offered a welcome opportunity to test Humboldt's methods on a terrain hitherto largely unknown to European voyagers and scholars. As a result, this generation of scholars and their collections have played a decisive role in the production of knowledge about the fifth continent in both Germany and in Australia. The past years have seen an increasing scholarly and public interest in this entangled history of science, as well as in the colonial contexts within which such knowledge and many of the artefacts in European institutions were acquired. Our seminar will engage with this complex topic through a case study of the Australian collections held by the Museum für Naturkunde in Berlin (MfN).

The seminar is taught in cooperation with a similar course by PD Dr Eva Bischoff at the University of Trier. We will discuss the MfN's history, its collections, and its exhibition practice and aim to jointly develop a concept for an audio guide that will make our findings tangible for visitors to the museum.

This course is taught in a mixed format with asynchronous assignments and occasional Zoom meetings, which will take place during seminar times.

Voraussetzung

Working knowledge of German is required, as sections of the course will be taught in German, and some of our course readings will also be in German.

This class will explore the possibilities of thinking together the decolonial and antiracist agendas of Native American/ Indigenous and African American critiques of the U.S. nation-state. We will look at the way in which scholars, writers, and activists have pointed to and envisioned both the links and the possible incommensurabilities of these liberatory projects. This class will take place online, with a predominantly asynchronous format (with weekly or biweekly lectures and reading assignments posted regularly). However, we will meet via zoom during class time (Fridays, 10-12) three times during the semester: on November 13, December 11, and February 5. Please make sure that you are available for a zoom meeting on these dates.

Please follow the "comment" link above for more information on comments, course readings, course requirements and grading. The seminar will focus on a small set of genres - probably weird fiction (horror/sf), utopia, the slave narrative, and the plantation romance - and discuss how the respective generic conventions are deeply entangled with ideas of race, yet at the same time questioning such ideas by looking at texts that contradict commonplaces about race and genre. This seminar will be taught online and follows a tri-weekly rhythm: week 1: video lecture and assignment week 2: deadline for assignment week 3: zoom meeting week 4: video lecture and assignment week 5: deadline for assignment week 6: zoom meeting... etc. It is therefore crucial that students ensure that they can participate during course hours (Fri, 10 - 12).
Literatur
Secondary literature will be supplied on moodle. Please be aware that in order to discuss a topic like genre effectively, a considerable amount of reading literary works from the respective genres is required. This is explicitly a course of literature nerds/book worms etc.
Leistungsnachweis
If no Module exam is required, completing the assignments and discussing them via zoom will suffice. The assignments will be fairly straightforward (reading questions) whereas the discussions will be your chance to shine.

The idea of world literature, since first invoked by Goethe and further elaborated by later authors and critics, is now highly contested: What is a world? What is literature? More specifically, the concept has been criticised from a post-colonial perspective for legitimating a globalised regime of literary dissemination and translation that would seem to enshrine a narrow Eurocentric canon, and would seem to cement the questionable status of English as a world language. Still, even among the most severe critics, there is a certain reluctance to altogether reject the term, as world literature, beside all the bad things, would also reflect the laudable political aim of taking literature seriously for its potential to animate and realise an ideal of cosmopolitan citizenship. Thus world literature today is an international and transcultural critical discourse with many positions problematising, correcting and adding to each other – very much in the spirit of Goethe's original coinage of the term. This seminar will give a comprehensive overview of the world literature discourse by exploring many of its most seminal voices, including, among others, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, Rabindranath Tagore, Franco Moretti, Susan Bassnett, Emily Apter, Pheng Cheah, Alexander Beecroft and Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak. The format for this course will be synchronous online classes (with some asynchronous elements/assignments), where meetings will be held via zoom (and these will always take place during the time slot allotted to the course on PULS)

The primary reading for this course is: David Damrosch. World Literature in Theory. Malden, MA, and Oxford: Wiley-Blackwell, 2014. Further texts will be provided on Moodle.

The class will take place in an online format (asynchronous with some synchronous elements). This graduate seminar begins by asking "What is Modernity?" and proceeds to examine modernity as an intricate multispecies project. Critically considering concepts of "species" and their multiple genealogies, we will focus on the diversity and polyvocality of modernity and read it through a variety of genres and disciplines, from biomedical literatures and science fiction to critical race studies and queer theory. In particular, we will be engaging with the conceptual and political impasses that have shaped and continue to animate debates about modernity's convoluted histories of racism, colonialism and the violent exploitation of human and nonhuman resources. The approach on offer is reflexive, both in terms of the authors we will read, who offer a broad range of responses to modernity's entanglement with racist, heterosexist, ableist models and practices, and also in its invitation to pay critical attention to our own intellectual, disciplinary and/or political attachments. Informed by the practice of slow scholarship and other movements committed to "slowing down" against modernity's investment in progress and expansion, in this graduate seminar we will read texts slowly and deeply, mining for their intertextual and epistemic genealogies while remaining aware of our own situatedness as we extract and circulate the cultural capital of specific texts and authors. Key authors in this critical overview will include Zakiyya Iman Jackson, Mel Chen, Anna Tsing, Octavia Butler, Nnedi Okorafor, Kathryn Yusoff, Susan Squier, Donna Haraway and Bruno Latour.

This course aims to examine the structures of feeling that animate familiar notions about what money is and what it does (from the Bible's "the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil" to the musical Cabaret's "money makes the world go around..." etc.). We shall explore the historical emergence and significance of money in the modern world, and its complex relations with the field of cultural production. By the end of the course, you will have a better conceptual grasp on certain key ideas within the field of political economy: surplus value, reification, possessive individualism, debt/indebtedness, commodity aesthetics, etc. You will also be able to analyze how these ideas have been elaborated as well as contested within the aesthetic domain. Das Seminar dient der praktischen Erprobung und vertieften Anwendung der im Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« vermittelten Kenntnisse und Methoden der Analyse literarischer Texte sowie zum dynamischen und teambasierten Arbeiten in (interdisziplinären) Teams. Die begleitende Teilnahme am Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« wird vorausgesetzt. Im Seminar werden wir Methoden der digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Analyse literarischer Texte in kleinen studentischen Forschungsprojekten projektorientiert umsetzen. Die Teilnehmer*innen werden mithin in Projektteams kleine Forschungsprojekte zur digitalen Analyse von literarischen Texten entwickeln und durchführen. Das Seminar setzt zwangsläufig die Bereitschaft zur Arbeit mit Computern voraus. Das Seminar wird durchgeführt im Rahmen des BMBF-Projekts »Forschen | Lernen – Digital« (FoLD). This seminar serves as a practical exercise and application of knowledge and methods conveyed in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies", in dynamic in project-based, interdisciplinary teams. Hence, accompanying participation in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies" is a prerequisite. The seminar will initially take place in weekly sessions, in which we will develop the theoretical foundations and deepen our knowledge of digital methods. Project work will essentially take the form of a hackathon in the form of a block seminar on two days during the semester. Given the nature of digital analysis, the seminar presupposes a willingness to work with computers. This seminar is part of the BMBF project "Forschen | Lernen Digital" (FoLD). Please note: as this seminar is a cooperation with the Department of German Studies - Prof. Dr. Peer Trilcke (Germanistik). Teaching-language will be mostly German.

In this seminar students will engage with canonical novels and literary magazines produced in postcolonial Africa. In addition to interrogating the implications of their thematic, formal and stylistic characteristics, particular attention will be paid to how writers and editorial collectives combine textual and extra-textual practices to launch political interventions, which will be understood in an inclusive sense of the term. A guiding question for the seminar pertains to the kinds of communities postcolonial African literatures address, critique, imagine and bring into existence. Classes will take place online, with a combination of synchronous and asynchronous elements. The synchronous elements will take place during the announced course time.

Writers/artists are known to be particularly alert to the problems of cultural diversity and cultural contact. We want to investigate into (critical) representations of British/European (cultural) imperialism in a number of exemplary texts set mostly in non-European parts of the world and discuss their ambiguities between innovative, subversive potentials and mainstream affirmative undercurrents. We will consider the controversial readings of these texts from a postcolonial perspective that carefully historicises the views in order to show the colonial Other as political, socio-economical and cultural concepts and practice. This will include discussion of concepts of cultural mobility and cultural contact as well as a focus on the formation of a cultural Other inside a national culture. This course will be a hybrid online seminar with synchronous and asynchronous phases. The online session with live meetings in a fortnightly rhythm. This will require you (!) to be online for a Zoom meeting during course times every 2 weeks! You should therefore make sure that you reserve the regular seminar slot for this course.

This class will explore the possibilities of thinking together the decolonial and antiracist agendas of Native American/ Indigenous and African American critiques of the U.S. nation-state. We will look at the way in which scholars, writers, and activists have pointed to and envisioned both the links and the possible incommensurabilities of these liberatory projects. This class will take place online, with a predominantly asynchronous format (with weekly or biweekly lectures and reading assignments posted regularly). However, we will meet via zoom during class time (Fridays, 10-12) three times during the semester: on November 13, December 11, and February 5. Please make sure that you are available for a zoom meeting on these dates.

The seminar will focus on a small set of genres - probably weird fiction (horror/sf), utopia, the slave narrative, and the plantation romance - and discuss how the respective generic conventions are deeply entangled with ideas of race, yet at the same time questioning such ideas by looking at texts that contradict commonplaces about race and genre. This seminar will be taught online and follows a tri-weekly rhythm: week 1: video lecture and assignment week 2: deadline for assignment week 3: zoom meeting week 4: video lecture and assignment week 5: deadline for assignment week 6: zoom meeting... etc. It is therefore crucial that students ensure that they can participate during course hours (Fri, 10 - 12).

The seminar has an asynchronic format with some regular Zoom meetings every third or fourth session. All the sessions take place at the assigned time. At the beginning of each session materials for ensuing week will be provided on Moodle. Asynchronic discussion will mostly take place at the Moodle Forum. In this course we shall investigate Dubliners, The Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man and extracts from Ulysses and Finnegans Wake. Since the reading is quite extensive, students are requested to have read at least Dubliners at the beginning of term.

The idea of world literature, since first invoked by Goethe and further elaborated by later authors and critics, is now highly contested: What is a world? What is literature? More specifically, the concept has been criticised from a post-colonial perspective for legitimating a globalised regime of literary dissemination and translation that would seem to enshrine a narrow Eurocentric canon, and would seem to cement the questionable status of English as a world language. Still, even among the most severe critics, there is a certain reluctance to altogether reject the term, as world literature, beside all the bad things, would also reflect the laudable political aim of taking literature seriously for its potential to animate and realise an ideal of cosmopolitan citizenship. Thus world literature today is an international and transcultural critical discourse with many positions problematising, correcting and adding to each other – very much in the spirit of Goethes original coinage of the term. This seminar will give a comprehensive overview of the world literature discourse by exploring many of its most seminal voices, including, among others, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, Rabindranath Tagore, Franco Moretti, Susan Bassnett, Emily Apter, Pheng Cheah, Alexander Beecroft and Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak. The format for this course will be synchronous online classes (with some asynchronous elements/assignments), where meetings will be held via zoom (and these will always take place during the time slot allotted to the course on PULS)

Artists, philosophers, planners, activists from across the globe (and, of course, many individuals who are none of the above) have long been interested in imagining how the world around them could be made a better place. The flip side of this has been a sense of foreboding about the methods through which such "improvements" are to be achieved, or the direction in which prevailing logics and tendencies are already driving the world. This is an introductory course, in which our objectives are two-fold: to familiarize ourselves with some of the theoretical writings on utopia/dystopia, and to explore some of the brave new worlds depicted in modern fiction and films. ›Digitale Literaturwissenschaft‹ lässt sich als Oberbegriff für eine Menge von Fragestellungen und Analysetechniken begreifen, die entweder einen besonderen Fokus auf die Transformation des Gegenstandes durch die Digitalisierung (z.B. digitale Literatur: Hypertext, Blogs, algorithmische Texte) legt oder eigene digitale Methoden der Erforschung, Erschließung und Exploration einsetzt (z.B. Stylometrics, Topic Modeling, Network Analysis). Im Seminar werden wir uns v.a. auf die zweite, methodische Dimension der Digitalen Literaturwissenschaft konzentrieren und uns im Zuge dessen auch einen Überblick über das Feld der Digital Humanities erarbeiten. Das Seminar ist als erste Annäherung an die Digitale Literaturwissenschaft angelegt. Es führt ein in: a) grundlegende theoretische Aspekte der Arbeit mit digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Methoden in der Literaturwissenschaft b) in die praktische Anwendung von digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Methoden auf literarische Texte in deutscher und englischer Sprache c) in Techniken des digitalen, projekt- und teambasierten Arbeitens in interdisziplinären Teams. Dabei erarbeitet das Seminar d) auch Grundlagen für eine kritische Diskussion der Potenziale und Grenzen digitaler Forschungsmethoden der Literaturwissenschaft. Im Rahmen des Seminars sollen dabei grundlegende Kompetenzen aus dem Feld der Digital Literacy für Literaturwissenschaftler*innen vermittelt, reflektiert und diskutiert werden. Das Seminar setzt zwangsläufig eine gewisse Affinität zur Arbeit mit Computern voraus. Dringend empfohlen wird die begleitende Teilnahme am praxisorientierten Seminar »Ecocriticism. Ein Hackathon zur digitalen Literaturwissenschaft«, das sich der Erprobung und der vertieften Anwendung der im Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« thematisierten Methoden widmet. Das Seminar wird durchgeführt im Rahmen des BMBF-Projekts »Forschen | Lernen – Digital« (FoLD) English version: 'Digital literary studies' can be understood as a rather generic term for a number of research questions and techniques of analysis that either focus on the transformation of its subject through the processes and means of digitization (e.g. digital literature: hypertext, blogs, algorithmic texts) or employ their own digital methods of research, development and exploration (e.g. stylometrics, topic modelling, network analysis). In this seminar we will concentrate on the second strand –the methodological dimension of Digital Literary Studies– and will work to gain an overview of the field of the Digital Humanities. The seminar is designed as a first approach to digital literary studies. It introduces: a) fundamental theoretical aspects of working with digital –especially quantitative– methods in literary studies b) the practical application of digital, especially quantitative methods to literary texts in German and English c) techniques of digital, project-based work in interdisciplinary teams. In this context, the seminar will d) also develop the foundations for a critical discussion of the potentials and limits of digital research methods in literary studies. Thereby, the seminar will teach, reflect and discuss basic competences in the field of digital literacy for literary scholars. The seminar inevitably requires a certain affinity for working with computers. It is strongly recommended to attend the adjacent seminar: "Ecocriticism. A Hackathon for Digital Literary Studies", which is dedicated to the testing and in-depth application of the methods discussed in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies". This seminar is part of the BMBF project "Forschen | Lernen Digital" (FoLD) Please note: As this seminar is a cooperation with the Department of German Studies Prof. Dr. Peer Trilcke (Germanistik). Teaching language will be German.

In this seminar students will engage with canonical novels and literary magazines produced in postcolonial Africa. In addition to interrogating the implications of their thematic, formal and stylistic characteristics, particular attention will be paid to how writers and editorial collectives combine textual and extra-textual practices to launch political interventions, which will be understood in an inclusive sense of the term. A guiding question for the seminar pertains to the kinds of communities postcolonial African literatures address, critique, imagine and bring into existence. Classes will take place online, with a combination of synchronous and asynchronous elements. The synchronous elements will take place during the announced course time.

Please follow the "comment" link above for more information on comments, course readings, course requirements and grading. Writers/artists are known to be particularly alert to the problems of cultural diversity and cultural contact. We want to investigate into (critical) representations of British/European (cultural) imperialism in a number of exemplary texts set mostly in non-European parts of the world and discuss their ambiguities between innovative, subversive potentials and mainstream affirmative undercurrents. We will consider the controversial readings of these texts from a postcolonial perspective that carefully historicises the views in order to show the colonial Other as political, socio-economical and cultural concepts and practice. This will include discussion of concepts of cultural mobility and cultural contact as well as a focus on the formation of a cultural Other inside a national culture. This course will be a hybrid online seminar with synchronous and asynchronous phases. The online session with live meetings in a fortnightly rhythm. This will require you (!) to be online for a Zoom meeting during course times every 2 weeks! You should therefore make sure that you reserve the regular seminar slot for this course.

Following in the footsteps of Alexander von Humboldt, nineteenth-century German naturalists sought to explore and categorize the world. To them, the Australian continent offered a welcome opportunity to test Humboldt's methods on a terrain hitherto largely unknown to European voyagers and scholars. As a result, this generation of scholars and their collections have played a decisive role in the production of knowledge about the fifth continent in both Germany and in Australia. The past years have seen an increasing scholarly and public interest in this entangled history of science, as well as in the colonial contexts within which such knowledge and many of the artefacts in European institutions were acquired. Our seminar will engage with this complex topic through a case study of the Australian collections held by the Museum für Naturkunde in Berlin (MfN). The seminar is taught in cooperation with a similar course by PD Dr Eva Bischoff at the University of Trier. We will discuss the MfN's history, its collections, and its exhibition practice and aim to jointly develop a concept for an audio guide that will make our findings tangible for visitors to the museum. This course is taught in a mixed format with asynchronous assignments and occasional Zoom meetings, which will take place during seminar times.

The class will take place in an online format (asynchronous with some synchronous elements). This graduate seminar begins by asking "What is Modernity?" and proceeds to examine modernity as an intricate multispecies project. Critically considering concepts of "species" and their multiple genealogies, we will focus on the diversity and polyvocality of modernity and read it through a variety of genres and disciplines, from biomedical literatures and science fiction to critical race studies and queer theory. In particular, we will be engaging with the conceptual and political impasses that have shaped and continue to animate debates about modernity's convoluted histories of racism, colonialism and the violent exploitation of human and nonhuman resources. The approach on offer is reflexive, both in terms of the authors we will read, who offer a broad range of responses to modernity's entanglement with racist, heterosexist, ableist models and practices, and also in its invitation to pay critical attention to our own intellectual, disciplinary and/or political attachments. Informed by the practice of slow scholarship and other movements committed to "slowing down" against modernity's investment in progress and expansion, in this graduate seminar we will read texts slowly and deeply, mining for their intertextual and epistemic genealogies while remaining aware of our own situatedness as we extract and circulate the cultural capital of specific texts and authors. Key authors in this critical overview will include Zakiyya Iman Jackson, Mel Chen, Anna Tsing, Octavia Butler, Nnedi Okorafor, Kathryn Yusoff, Susan Squier, Donna Haraway and Bruno Latour.

The scholarly analysis of film as a medium (of creative expression, commercial practice, mass entertainment, political intervention—and more) engages broadly with two distinct sorts of questions: (1) what textual core/boundary constitutes the object of film analysis and (2) what set of interpretive activities make up the subjective dimensions of this field? This course aims to introduce you to different ways of interpreting films, by engaging with key theoretical texts and exercises in practical analyses of a broad range of cinematic texts from around the globe. Artists, philosophers, planners, activists from across the globe (and, of course, many individuals who are none of the above) have long been interested in imagining how the world around them could be made a better place. The flip side of this has been a sense of foreboding about the methods through which such "improvements" are to be achieved, or the direction in which prevailing logics and tendencies are already driving the world. This is an introductory course, in which our objectives are two-fold: to familiarize ourselves with some of the theoretical writings on utopia/dystopia, and to explore some of the brave new worlds depicted in modern fiction and films. ›Digitale Literaturwissenschaft‹ lässt sich als Oberbegriff für eine Menge von Fragestellungen und Analysetechniken begreifen, die entweder einen besonderen Fokus auf die Transformation des Gegenstandes durch die Digitalisierung (z.B. digitale Literatur: Hypertext, Blogs, algorithmische Texte) legt oder eigene digitale Methoden der Erforschung, Erschließung und Exploration einsetzt (z.B. Stylometrics, Topic Modeling, Network Analysis). Im Seminar werden wir uns v.a. auf die zweite, methodische Dimension der Digitalen Literaturwissenschaft konzentrieren und uns im Zuge dessen auch einen Überblick über das Feld der Digital Humanities erarbeiten. Das Seminar ist als erste Annäherung an die Digitale Literaturwissenschaft angelegt. Es führt ein in: a) grundlegende theoretische Aspekte der Arbeit mit digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Methoden in der Literaturwissenschaft b) in die praktische Anwendung von digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Methoden auf literarische Texte in deutscher und englischer Sprache c) in Techniken des digitalen, projekt- und teambasierten Arbeitens in interdisziplinären Teams. Dabei erarbeitet das Seminar d) auch Grundlagen für eine kritische Diskussion der Potenziale und Grenzen digitaler Forschungsmethoden der Literaturwissenschaft. Im Rahmen des Seminars sollen dabei grundlegende Kompetenzen aus dem Feld der Digital Literacy für Literaturwissenschaftler*innen vermittelt, reflektiert und diskutiert werden. Das Seminar setzt zwangsläufig eine gewisse Affinität zur Arbeit mit Computern voraus. Dringend empfohlen wird die begleitende Teilnahme am praxisorientierten Seminar »Ecocriticism. Ein Hackathon zur digitalen Literaturwissenschaft«, das sich der Erprobung und der vertieften Anwendung der im Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« thematisierten Methoden widmet. Das Seminar wird durchgeführt im Rahmen des BMBF-Projekts »Forschen | Lernen – Digital« (FoLD) English version: 'Digital literary studies' can be understood as a rather generic term for a number of research questions and techniques of analysis that either focus on the transformation of its subject through the processes and means of digitization (e.g. digital literature: hypertext, blogs, algorithmic texts) or employ their own digital methods of research, development and exploration (e.g. stylometrics, topic modelling, network analysis). In this seminar we will concentrate on the second strand –the methodological dimension of Digital Literary Studies– and will work to gain an overview of the field of the Digital Humanities. The seminar is designed as a first approach to digital literary studies. It introduces: a) fundamental theoretical aspects of working with digital –especially quantitative– methods in literary studies b) the practical application of digital, especially quantitative methods to literary texts in German and English c) techniques of digital, project-based work in interdisciplinary teams. In this context, the seminar will d) also develop the foundations for a critical discussion of the potentials and limits of digital research methods in literary studies. Thereby, the seminar will teach, reflect and discuss basic competences in the field of digital literacy for literary scholars. The seminar inevitably requires a certain affinity for working with computers. It is strongly recommended to attend the adjacent seminar: "Ecocriticism. A Hackathon for Digital Literary Studies", which is dedicated to the testing and in-depth application of the methods discussed in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies". This seminar is part of the BMBF project "Forschen | Lernen Digital" (FoLD) Please note: As this seminar is a cooperation with the Department of German Studies Prof. Dr. Peer Trilcke (Germanistik). Teaching language will be German.

Das Seminar dient der praktischen Erprobung und vertieften Anwendung der im Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« vermittelten Kenntnisse und Methoden der Analyse literarischer Texte sowie zum dynamischen und teambasierten Arbeiten in (interdisziplinären) Teams. Die begleitende Teilnahme am Seminar »Einführung in die digitale Literaturwissenschaft« wird vorausgesetzt. Im Seminar werden wir Methoden der digitalen, insbesondere quantitativen Analyse literarischer Texte in kleinen studentischen Forschungsprojekten projektorientiert umsetzen. Die Teilnehmer*innen werden mithin in Projektteams kleine Forschungsprojekte zur digitalen Analyse von literarischen Texten entwickeln und durchführen. Das Seminar setzt zwangsläufig die Bereitschaft zur Arbeit mit Computern voraus. Das Seminar wird durchgeführt im Rahmen des BMBF-Projekts »Forschen | Lernen – Digital« (FoLD). This seminar serves as a practical exercise and application of knowledge and methods conveyed in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies", in dynamic in project-based, interdisciplinary teams. Hence, accompanying participation in the seminar "Introduction to Digital Literary Studies" is a prerequisite. The seminar will initially take place in weekly sessions, in which we will develop the theoretical foundations and deepen our knowledge of digital methods. Project work will essentially take the form of a hackathon in the form of a block seminar on two days during the semester Given the nature of digital analysis, the seminar presupposes a willingness to work with computers. This seminar is part of the BMBF project "Forschen | Lernen Digital" (FoLD) Please note: as this seminar is a cooperation with the Department of German Studies - Prof. Dr. Peer Trilcke (Germanistik). Teaching-language will be mostly German.

In this seminar students will engage with canonical novels and literary magazines produced in postcolonial Africa. In addition to interrogating the implications of their thematic, formal and stylistic characteristics, particular attention will be paid to how writers and editorial collectives combine textual and extra-textual practices to launch political interventions, which will be understood in an inclusive sense of the term. A guiding question for the seminar pertains to the kinds of communities postcolonial African literatures address, critique, imagine and bring into existence. Classes will take place online, with a combination of synchronous and asynchronous elements. The synchronous elements will take place during the announced course time.

This course is only for students who have to do the "Übersetzungspraktikum" as part of their Master degree in Anglophone Modernities in Literature and Culture. Please note that the focus in this seminar is on translations and thus only open to students who have a German level of at least C1 as we will translate the novel "Snare" into German (the novel is supposed to be published, thus, you are not translating for the drawer). If you do not speak any or little German, please choose the course taught by Anna Finzel, which has a focus on review articles. FORMAT: The course will be conducted synchronously with numerous asynchronic elements in the later part which will give you time to work on your translations. Whenever we meet on Zoom, it will be in the originally announced time slot.

This research colloquium provides students in Anglophone Modernities with the opportunity to study and critically engage with various current approaches to literary and cultural studies. Advanced students can also present their own MA projects and receive feedback. In addition, we will make time to discuss the process of writing an MA thesis. Attention: the central approaches discussed in this particular colloquium are poststructuralism/deconstruction, postcolonialism, and ecocriticism. The class will be taught online. We will alternate biweekly between weeks with synchronous online meetings via zoom (Fridays, 12-14) and asynchronous weeks with video lectures and reading assignments. Please make sure you are generally available for online meetings on Fridays during class time.

Glossar

Die folgenden Begriffserklärungen zu Prüfungsleistung, Prüfungsnebenleistung und Studienleistung gelten im Bezug auf Lehrveranstaltungen für alle Ordnungen, die seit dem WiSe 2013/14 in Kraft getreten sind.

Prüfungsleistung	Prüfungsleistungen sind benotete Leistungen innerhalb eines Moduls. Aus der Benotung der Prüfungsleistung(en) bildet sich die Modulnote, die in die Gesamtnote des Studiengangs eingeht. Handelt es sich um eine unbenotete Prüfungsleistung, so muss dieses ausdrücklich („unbenotet“) in der Modulbeschreibung der fachspezifischen Ordnung geregelt sein. Weitere Informationen, auch zu den Anmeldeöglichkeiten von Prüfungsleistungen, finden Sie unter anderem in der Kommentierung der BaMa-O
Prüfungsnebenleistung	Prüfungsnebenleistungen sind für den Abschluss eines Moduls relevante Leistungen, die – soweit sie vorgesehen sind – in der Modulbeschreibung der fachspezifischen Ordnung beschrieben sind. Prüfungsnebenleistungen sind immer unbenotet und werden lediglich mit "bestanden" bzw. "nicht bestanden" bewertet. Die Modulbeschreibung regelt, ob die Prüfungsnebenleistung eine Teilnahmevoraussetzung für eine Modulprüfung oder eine Abschlussvoraussetzung für ein ganzes Modul ist. Als Teilnahmevoraussetzung für eine Modulprüfung muss die Prüfungsnebenleistung erfolgreich vor der Anmeldung bzw. Teilnahme an der Modulprüfung erbracht worden sein. Auch für Erbringung einer Prüfungsnebenleistungen wird eine Anmeldung vorausgesetzt. Diese fällt immer mit der Belegung der Lehrveranstaltung zusammen, da Prüfungsnebenleistung im Rahmen einer Lehrveranstaltungen absolviert werden. Sieht also Ihre fachspezifische Ordnung Prüfungsnebenleistungen bei Lehrveranstaltungen vor, sind diese Lehrveranstaltungen zwingend zu belegen, um die Prüfungsnebenleistung absolvieren zu können.
Studienleistung	Als Studienleistung werden Leistungen bezeichnet, die weder Prüfungsleistungen noch Prüfungsnebenleistungen sind.
